Art

Paper mache pigs and paper bag puppets were among hundreds of art projects displayed at Lincoln-Eliot School last week by children attending the federally funded Title 1 summer art program. Spaulding teacher Diane Freedman led the class in making placemats, jack-in-the-boxes, word boxes and clay projects. The kids were all nursery age through first grade. A story on the program appears on page 2. (Williams photo)

List of candidates becomes official

Newton's candidates for the fall election have until 5 p.m. today (Thursday) to file objections or withdraw nomination papers.

Chances are the total number of candidates will stay the same. Last week was the deadline for filing nomination papers for certification and Tuesday was the deadline for formally submitting certified nomination papers, the point when the candidate signs the nomination papers and makes them official.

Ward 4 Ald. and State Rep. Richard J. McGrath was the only potential candidate who did not sign his nomination papers. He is now officially out of the race.

McGrath had said last week when he submitted papers for certification that he would withdraw as long as papers of the three candidates he is supporting proved to be in order.

McGrath is supporting Carol Ann Shea, 215 Auburndale Ave., for his ward seat. Mrs. Shea had papers for both Ward 4 alderman and alderman-at-large.

She is now officially running for ward alderman.

There will still be four preliminary, or run-off, races Sept. 30. They are for alderman-at-large in Ward 4, ward alderman in Wards 7 and 8 and school committeeman in Ward 3.

All three Ward 4 incumbents are stepping down.

There are now six candidates for the two at-large seats in this ward. The preliminary will reduce the number to four for the general election in November.

Candidates for at-large alderman in Ward 4 are: Sheila Farness, 92 Lexington St.; Nick Nardone, 39 Sharon Ave. Priscilla Leith, 1831 Washington St.; Donald Budge, 31 Ithaca Cir.; John F. Stewart, 23 Pierrepont Rd.; and Theodore Scafidi, 14 Windmere Rd.

Farnese, Nardone, Leith and Scafidi live in Auburndale. Stewart and Budge are from Newton Lower Falls.

Ward run-offs

Incumbent Ald. David Cohen, 17 Glendale Rd., will face two challengers in the Ward 7 ward preliminary. They are Nicholas Kyriakos, 12 Belmont St.; and Kenneth Daniels, 8 Exmoore Rd.

There are four candidates for the Ward 8 ward alderman seat being vacated by incumbent Ald. Alan Barkin.

Running in the preliminary in this race will be: Cynthia Creem, 15 Esty Farm Rd.; Robert Stiller, 21 June Ln.; Rhoda Davidow, 105 Country Club Rd.; and Theresa Walsh, 33 Wallace St.

The remaining list of candidates for the general election includes the following:

Ward 1 at-large: Joseph McDonnell, 655 Centre St.; Robert Gaynor, 109 Cabot St.; and Patricia Ciccone 56 Lothrop St. McDonnell and Gaynor are the incumbents.

Ward 2 at-large: Edward Richmond, 833 Commonwealth Ave.; Terry Morris, 115 Mt. Vernon St.; Barbara Schiller, 122 Fessenden St.; and A. Jefferson Cornell, 105 Madison Ave. Richmond and Morris are the incumbents.

Ward 3 at-large: Matthew Jefferson, 94 Adena Rd.; Robert L. Tennant, 189 Mt. Vernon St.; and Anthony Salvucci, 23 Eddy St. Jefferson and Tennant are the incumbents.

Ward 5 at-large: Sidney Small, 39 White Oak Rd.; Joan Needleman, 80 Puritan Rd.; Robert Davine, 20 Chatham Rd.; and James Miller, 27 Roundwood Rd.

Barkin to appeal conviction, fights to retain position

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

Alan Barkin, Newton lawyer and alderman, convicted of failure to file federal income tax returns, Tuesday refused the request of the state Milk Control Commission to resign his post as director.

Barkin was sentenced last week to six months probation and fined $1500 for failure to file returns for 1971 and 1972 on a total income of $66,530.

Barkin said Tuesday at the Milk Control Commission hearing that he had filed a notice of intent to appeal his conviction.

The commission met in closed session for an hour. When the meeting was opened to the public, Commr. Richard Bonneville asked Barkin to resign, and Commr. Saul Wyman seconded Bonneville's motion.

Barkin responded in a loud, firm voice, "No."

The two commissioners, while expressing regrets that the commission feels such a step necessary, ordered that a letter be written to the attorney general's office "asking for his guidance and the procedure to be followed in his (Barkin's) removal."

Bonneville asked that the letter specifically ask the attorney general how to proceed "in the most expeditious and formal manner."

Environmental Affairs Secretary Evelyn Murphy, who asked for Barkin's resignation last week, read a short statement at the hearing, in which she said that "resignation is appropriate."

"When the public trust (in an official) is undermined, it tends to undermine the process of government," she said.

Wyman and Bonneville both agreed that nothing in the performance of his job had influenced their decision to ask Barkin to step down from the $17,000-a-year position. Barkin joined the commission in 1969, became acting director in 1970, and has been director since 1971.

Wyman said he considers Barkin's resignation necessary for the good of the milk industry because of the "recent adverse publicity" concerning the industry in the Watergate aftermath.

In arriving at his decision, he said, he had consulted with leaders of the milk industry to get their opinions.

Barkin, who said little during the open part of the meeting, indicated that he will base his fight to stay on as director on a law that he claims gives veterans tenure in non-Civil Service state jobs. He belives he can be removed "only for cause" proved through administrative hearings.

Wyman, however, said it is his understanding that Barkin is employed by the commission with the concurrence of the governor.

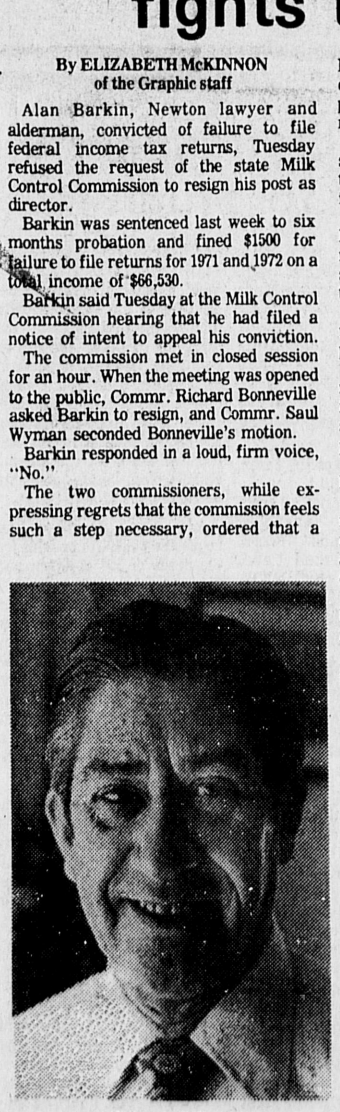

In addition to the possible loss of his state job, Barkin faces administrative hearings on disbarment by the Board of Bar Overseers, an arm of the state Supreme Judicial Court.

Robert DeGiacomo, chief counsel for the Board of Bar Overseers, explained this week that when an attorney is convicted of a "serious crime," as defined by the court, a certificate of conviction is sent to the BBO and the attorney is ordered to show cause why he should not be suspended until the BBO proceedings have been completed.

Barkin's conviction was for a misdemeanor.

Asked this week whether he intends to stay on the Newton Board of Aldermen, where he has served as Ward 8 alderman for 10 years, Barkin replied, "That's up to the Board." He said he does not intend to offer his resignation.

Barkin is not a candidate for reelection.

The traffic light mastermind

By ELEANOR SEIGEL
Of the Graphic Staff

Have you ever sat in you car, waiting for a traffic light to turn green and wondered who is responsible for setting the lights? Or have you wondered what legerdemain takes place nightly to transpose traffic lights into flashing beams?

According to David L. Tannozzini, traffic planner for Newton, the process has nothing to do with either magic or caprice.

To decide on the amount of green time allotted to drivers, Tannozzini utilizes charts developed by John Leisch which takes traffic formulas and turns them into graphs.

While most traffic signals are clear cut, the flashing "don't walk" signal has caused "mass confusion" according to Tannozzini. Although he saw it as a problem that could be alleviated by public relations, traffic activist MaraLynn Johnson felt this signal should not be used at all.

The signal merely means 'don't start' rather than do not walk. However, to young children and out-of-staters, the signal is perplexing. What Mrs. Johnson proposes is a 'don't start' signal.

Tannozzini said this whole confusing problem could have been avoided if the Federal Government accepted Massachusett's red and yellow pedestrian phases. But this signal was uncommon in the rest of the country and the government wanted uniformity of traffic control devices.

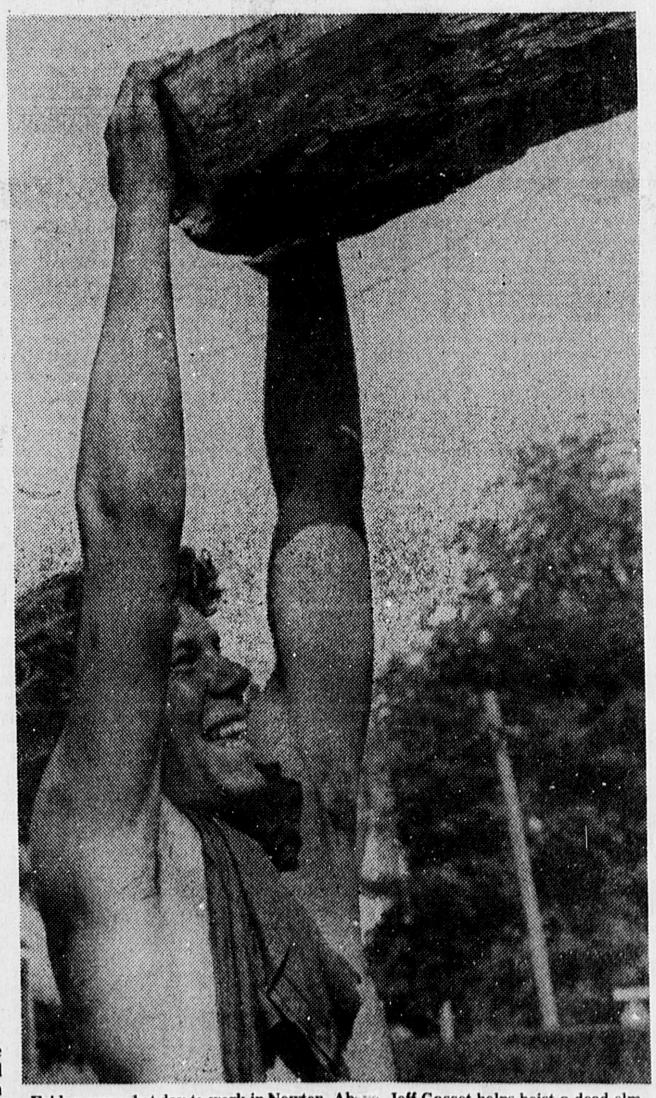

One factor the government did not consider, Tannozzini feels, is the energy used by having eight pedestrian housings at a typical intersection, up to 1 kilowatt of energy to indicate a don't walk signal. One thousand traffic lights in a state can be using 1,000 kilowatts an hour. However, uniformity is the name of the game right now.

While some signals are for pedestrian safety, flashing traffic lights during off peak hours are for drivers. These lights are based on the principle that if a driver is waiting 35 seconds for a green light, Tannozzini says "he tends to become frustrated and disobeys the signal."

In addition to the fact the driver has become a scofflaw, Tannozzini points out that the cost of having him come to a full stop and then accelerate is "incredible."

Therefore the city uses "subjective judgement" and says that if the traffic flow volume is below fifty percent of the

Temperature climbs to 108

When the heat wave hit this past weekend, the swimming areas were swamped with divers, legal and illegal.

More than 30 people were fined $10 in Newton District Court Monday for swimming in the wrong part of the Crystal Lake.

Unofficial reports from the Police Department said the temperature was 108 degrees, but the Fire Department must have been kept cooler with all its water, since they only recored a Saturday high of 104 degrees.

The Water Department reported that one fire hydrant was opened by youths trying cool off on Commonwealth Avenue in Newton Centre, but this was the only call they had to respond to.

Water usage during the spell was twice as high as usual, according to some reports.

While police did not report any cases of heat stroke, two elderly people died Sunday, which may have been a direct result of the heat.

Middlesex County Medical Examiner Dr. William Soybell said the deaths of Nora Pendergast, 78, of Brookside Avenue. and Francis J. Cox, 81, of Wildwood Lane were "signed out as a heart disease, but the heat had a helluva lot to do with it."

Dr. Soybell said there were more than 20 deaths in the county from Malden to Newton during the weekend that he would partly or wholly attribute to the sweltering temperatures.

Recreation Commissioner Russell Halloran said Teusday that the largest crowds ever were recorded at the Gath Pool and Crystal Lake and sometimes nonresidents were not admitted and asked to leave the lake.

The arrests for trespassing at Crystal Lake were made mostly near Norwood Avenue in Newton Centre where it is illegal to swim at any time.

Community development

Neighborhoods to get $150,000

Of the $655,000 allocated to Newton by the federal Housing and Community Development Act for its first year, $150,000 will be spent on neighborhood improvement.

Beautification and improvement of the three target area neighborhoods in the community development program will get $135,000. The target areas are West Newton, Nonantum, and Newton Corner.

The beautification and improvement, according to the plan presented by the Planning Department, may include upgrading of streets, sidewalks and lighting, landscaping, and the construction or installation of recreation facilities.

Some of the funds may be used to provide open space for recreation, either active or passive, in neighborhoods without enough such open space.

Of the remaining $15,000 allocated to the neighborhood improvement program, historic preservation has been budgeted for $5000 and urban design assistance for $10,000.

The $5000 will be used for the preservation of historic structures and sites and for the identification and preservation of historic structures that could be affected by housing rehabilitation, another part of the community development program.

The third part of the neighborhood improvement program is the provision of urban design assistance to the Nonantum and Newton Highlands business areas, at a total cost of $10,000.

The Planning Department staff will give the design assistance to encourage rehabilitation of storefronts, including signs.

Small loans or grants may be made available to some businesses to improve their appearance.

Three neighborhood advisory committees will be appointed, one for each target community, to help the community development implementation.

Each committee will consist

Emerson and Lincoln-Eliot schools have high summer enrollment

More than 500 children are enjoying summer programs at two of Newton's elementary schools this summer in a variety of programs, some federally funded.

Emerson and Lincoln-Eliot schools are the bases for federally funded Title I Early Childhood Opportunities (ECHO) IV summer activities, and are examples of optimum summer use of school buildings.

The buildings have been open for six weeks through Aug. 8 for Title I activities for nursery through Grade I level children who reside primarily within those two school districts in keeping with Title I guidelines.

However, Title I activities are not the only activities taking place in either building.

Emerson School is the locus for a Boston State Teachers' College Reading Practicum, a six-credit graduate course in remedial reading, involving upwards of 65 pupils, grades one through eight, and 40 experienced teachers.

Children are seen from 8:30 to 10 a.m. daily, Monday through Thursdays, for a five-week period. Teachers get to diagnose and prescribe individual reading programs for children, while pupils needing remedial help are seen on a two to one or one to one pupil-teacher ratio for 1½ hours daily. The program is supervised by Mary Rice of the Boston State faculty.

Last week George Napoli concluded a four-week instrumental music program which served 52 children grades one through four, as well as the parents of one child who asked if they could study the violin, recorder along with their daughter.

Community School activities at Emerson School, some of which were run during the mornings while ECHO IV activities were taking place, are estimated to have served upwards of 70 persons. This program was under the supervision of Louise Gertchberg.

Lincoln-Eliot School, though larger, has no room to spare, either. Early Childhood Title I activities are using seven classroom spaces.

A combination reading, language and spelling tutorial program, serving 49 second grade through sixth grade children, has been occupying one reading laboratory space and one classroom space for five weeks.

A four-week Italian Language and Culture Program is concluded last Friday with a party for parents and students.

Staffed by two teachers and a parent aide, the program is serving 60 children. For the last three weeks a special teachers Junior High Learning Disabilities Workshop under the direction of Mrs. Lois Sockol, English Coordinator, has been utilizing four classrooms in the process of training four Junior High Reading Specialists to work with learning disabled pupils. These teachers have seen 17 students daily on a 2 to 1 or 1 to 1 pupil teacher ratio basis.

Their second week of training consisted of all-day sessions with afternoons being devoted to speakers and planning sessions for principals, psychologists, guidance counselors, learning disability tutors and reading specialists from Day and Warren Junior Highs.

Recently, when the Title I psychologist and the Summer Title I Principal Joseph Vtka began to look around for a suitable spot to begin to hold a series of meetings with Title I mothers, to begin to get at mutual interest areas, the only spot available tunred out to be the Media Center. Through cramped for space, the group felt no lack of topics for discussion.

At Lincoln-Eliot, Jean Paoletti, under sponsorship of the Community School Program, has run a four-week Arts and Crafts Program for children of all ages on the playground adjacent to the school, serving as many as 30 children.

In operation at both schools has been another federally-funded program known as "Food for Children." This program is aimed at the nutritional habits of school age children. A cold lunch consisting of: sandwich, fruit, juice, a cookie and milk has been made available to children in these programs and to children on these playgrounds on a daily basis.

Summer principals Tom Etre at the Emerson School and Utka at the Lincoln-Eliot School believe in child, parent, community participation in summer school activities. All groups have found reason to be involved at these schools resulting in little or no excess space being available, happier participants and in programs and a summer which feels as though it's been shot out of a cannon!

Create economic growth, don't hurt people in need, Backman urges

"I shall oppose the governor and, if necessary, the entire legislature in regard to the proposed $700 million dollars in Human Services cuts at this time," State Sen. Jack Backman said this week.

"If anyone wants to eliminate fraud, inefficiency, waste in government — great. I'm with them. However, at this time of economic crisis, I shall not sit back and allow this state to go back to the dark ages. Responsible government means meeting the needs of the people. With 350,000 unemployed in Massachusetts, this cannot mean wiping out our Human Services programs of assistance that were begun during the last economic depression," Backman said.

"In the past weeks, I have received many requests for my position in regard to the present economic crisis of Massachusetts and I share the concern of every citizen in regard to the onerous burden that we face.

"It is unfortunate that for too long a period, our leadership of both major political parties has avoided telling the people the hard facts of the economic problems we must and can solve.

"For some time, I have tried desperately to let the people know of our economic crisis and its effects upon all people of Massachusetts, the poor as well as those who do business with the state and have not gotten paid. The plight of our elderly, our children of needy families and of our unemployed have been a major focus of my attention. At the same time, I went so far, several years ago, as to bring a lawsuit against the Commonwealth to emphasize the fact that there were, perhaps, $200 million of unpaid bills of our state. Perhaps most important in the long run, I have filed legislation to try to bring about new economic development for Massachusetts, which is the only long-range answer to our current financial plight.

"But how do you capture the ears of our society as to the common problems of all groups of citizens in Massachusetts?

"To talk about cutting out useful human service programs in Massachusetts at this critical time is utterly unrealistic and shortsighted. It can only result in chaos.

"What are some of the facts that have not been adequately discussed?

"1. In the 25-year period from 1949 to 1974, the earned-income tax base for Massachusetts increased at the rate of 24 percent per year. Since 1974, it has remained almost dormant. "2. There are now 350,000 unemployed in Massachusetts' requiring vastly increased social services and expenditures by the state. "3. In the meantime, there has been an escalating increase of the consumer price index since 1971 of over 30 percent. This price index escalation affects costs of operation of state government, as well as business. "The cost of government has gone up, first by inflation, second by the numbers of persons who have been hit by the economic recession and who require state assistance. "There must be new income to the state to meet these problems or else there will be chaos. With a 30 percent consumer price index increase since 1971, it is not unreasonable to expect the cost of government to climb.

"With a $2.5 billion budget, a 30 percent consumer price index increase adds up to $700 million.

"4. We are fooling ourselves if we think that there can be a way out of this morass without more immediate tax revenue and, in the long run, the economic growth of Massachusetts. In this connection, it it important to note that until this year, there have been no new taxes imposed since 1971.

"What must be done all fits together in one pattern:

"1. We must restore the economic base and growth of Massachusetts. Put the 350,000 unemployed to work at reasonable productive efforts and our tax base will increase and state welfare costs will decrease.

"2. In the meantime, we must increase our tax revenue in order to meet our costs of a responsible government.

"3. The long-range costs of human services programs must be assumed by the federal government. There must be a federal takeover of the costs and administration of welfare, health care and child care. This must be done to relieve the financial plight of the states, all of them, and to equalize the benefits available in all sections of the country.

"4. We must restore credibility in government by allowing the people to know the facts. Open the books wide.

"As early as Nov. 11, 1974, the governor's former chief economic advisor wrote a 16-page memo on a prospective $321 million deficit for the fiscal year ending in June, 1975, and for the $404 million deficit for the fiscal year beginning July 1, 1975, totaling $725 million required in new taxes. This was without considering cost-of-living increases. It was not circulated to the public. I received a copy on July 14, 1975.

"Even at the present time, the published estimates of our budget, by the governor, the House and the Senate fiscal committees, vary as much as $400 million among themselves. This is ridiculous. We must open up all of the books and all of the data to all of the people — so we can make plans and judgements together with all of the facts.

"5. We must restore credibility in government by making certain that our departments run efficiently, including welfare and including our financial departments.

"6. However, in a time of deep economic crisis, I wish to plead with you that we cannot place the burden of our depressed economy upon the backs of the victims of this recession, our elderly, our children, our disabled, our unemployed.

"During the terrible and more severe depression of the 1930's, the government, state and national, responded to a great crisis by instituting more programs that cost money to help people than at any time in history. During the current economic depression, we in government must not respond by cutting out the programs that help those who have been hurt the most by this recession.

"Republicans, Democrats — we are all in this crisis together.

"We cannot delay in getting the hard facts before the public so that solutions can take place.

"One last comment: If, in fact, we need $750 million in new taxes, which is a 30 percent increase in state revenue, every day of delay means we are going over $2 million further in the hole.

"We have the resources in Massachusetts to solve the problems. Let us do it together."

NJC site not suitable for library

If the city ever builds a new main library, it will not be on the soon-to-be-abandoned site of Newton Junior College, if recommendations in a study by the Harvard Graduate School of - Design are followed.

The study, done by 24 students from the design school, recommends preserving the buildings on the property and converting them to use as a health care facility, for housing, or for commercial purposes.

Construction of a library on the site would not be possible without tearing down the existing buildings, which the study says should be left standing. The property is also too small, the study says.

Mayor Theodore Mann has indicated his disapproval of one recommendation, to convert the old Claflin School building to a restaurant.

Mann does not want the commercial area of Newtonville to encroach further on the residential area.

The report was received last week and is being studied by the Planning Department and other members of the administration.

St. Bernard's Rectory had about $1,000 stolen by a male described as 16 or 17 Monday shortly before 4 p.m.

Police report that the housekeeper heard a car door slam outside the rectory at about 3:30 p.m. on 1515 Washington St., West Newton.

The man with a dark complexion and a mustache told her, "I've been watching this place for some time. I know there's money here."

After taking a tool bag with about $1,000 in it, the thief locked the housekeeper in a room and left.

Police searched the area with no results.

Service note

Anthony J. Delicata, son of Mrs. Michael A. Delicata of 360 Nevada St., Newton is attending Officer Candidate School, Newport, R.I., under the Naval Enlisted Scientific Education Program.

The 10-week course is designed to prepare former enlisted personnel for duty as naval officers. It includes instruction in Navy history, tradition and missions, uniform regulations, military courtesy, the Uniform Code of Military Justice and the structure and organization of naval commands.

The course also covers personnel guidance and counseling techniques, manpower management and the principles of leadership.

A former student of the University of Louisville, he joined the Navy in 1970.

Council for Children supports additional taxes for programs

To counter any further cuts in human services, and particularly the budget of the Office for Children, the Newton-Wellesley-Weston (NWW) Council for Children, at its July meeting unanimously passed a resolution "supporting an additional tax program in order to sustain children's services in a fiscally responsible manner."

Subsequently, this same resolution was introduced by Tom Holtey, N-W-W Board member and passed by the state advisory committee of the Office for Children. The committee comprises representatives of the 39 local Councils for Children.

This effort supports the contention of the local councils that any further cuts in human services will eliminate some very needed programs, curtail social agencies' ability to serve children and their families, and result in present and future damage to children's lives. Therefore a tax increase is the only way out of the current dilemma.

The 10 percent budget reduction already sustained has reduced the total appropriations for the N-W-W Council from $130,000 for fiscal year 1975 to $108,000 for fiscal year 1976.

Included in this is Individual Kid money which enables the child advocate to provide special services for children for whom no other resources are available. This has been reduced from $25,000 to $20,000. Last year for a nine-month period, 329 children were helped. This year for a 12-month period, 400 children are projected to require special help.

Total programming requests from agencies for 1976 amounted to $126,840 to serve 453 children. The council was only able to allocate $50,650.

Allocations were based on the priority needs of the three communities that were established in a series of open meetings. All agencies requesting funds were carefully evaluated and monitored by the NWW Council.

The following figures have been released by the NWW Council.

The following figures have been released by the NWW Council to illustrate the curtailment of funds and resulting reduction in services for children and their families:

Day care requests were received from the Newton Community Service Center (Pomeroy House), Wellesley Day Care Center, Hills and Falls Nursery School (Newton) and the Women's Cooperative for after-school care in the Newton Public Schools totaling $55,000 to provide care for 59 children whose families could not afford this service. A total of $27,000 was allocated which would help 29 children.

The Family Life Education and Counseling request totaled $12,000 for counseling and parent education for 200 children and their families. A sum of $4,050 was granted to cover 67 children.

The Infant Tracking Program of the Human Relations Service of Wellesley, Inc. requested $16,840 to provide special consultation services to the Public Health and Visiting Nurses in the three communities who will be visiting all newborn children in their homes. This type of early detection program is the first in the area, and will evaluate the social, mental health and medical needs of the infants and their families. It could only be funded for $5,400.

Adolescent Services had requested $43,000 to provide for the needs of 194 children and $14,200 was granted to help 77 children. The agencies funded were the Multi-Service Center to expand their emergency housing and medical services to adolescents, Freeport, an alternative home, Families Extended which provides foster care and Beginnings, a drop-in center for the Newton Corner area.

The Council urges all concerned citizens who care about children to communicate immediately to their local representatives their opposition to any further human service budget cuts.

Carnival time . . .

The week of July 21 through July 25 was Carnival Week on the Newton playgrounds. Each playground ran a carnival to raise money for youth charities. The booths at the carnivals were initiated and manned by youngsters.

On Hyde Playground, the big attraction was the sponge throw at the leaders. At Angier and Richardson, the big money-getter was the concession stand and the prize booth. At Upper Falls and Emerson the "pitch and put" stand gave the youngsters a real challenge and at Memorial Playground the favorites were the "nerve tester" and the "penny pitch."

Over $500 on the Newton Playgrounds was raised.

Alan J. Schlesinger

Rev. Gilbert S. Avery, III, president of the Newton Community Development Foundation, Inc. has announced that Alan J. Schlesinger of Newton has been appointed executive director of the foundation.

Officers re-elected recently in addition to Avery were vice president Eloise K. Houghton, treasurer Herbert M. Weiss, and clerk Fiora M. Houghteling.

Water Safety Show at Crystal Lake

Water Safety Show

A Water Safety Show will be presented by the children in the swimming classes at Crystal Lake on Thursday, Aug. 7, from 7 to 8 p.m.

The youngsters will display the skills they have learned in their classes from Beginner I through Senior Lifesaving. Some rescue techniques will be demonstrated.

The program will be narrated by Gilbert Champagne, First-Aid Water Safety Chairman, Newton Chapter of the American Red Cross.

National League Champion

St. Bernard's defeated the Newton Boys' Club three games to one in a three out of five series to take the championship of the Newton Recreation Department's National Twilight League.

Recreation Commission member Paul J. Burke presented the John F. (Buck) Donahue Memorial Trophy to Tom Pugliese, manager of the St. Bernard's team, after the final game.

St. Bernard's also took the regular season flag with a record of 13 wins and two ties. Including the playoff games their overall record was 16-1-2.

Norman Walker, Head Baseball Coach at Newton North High School, presented the James (Del) Ryan Trophy to Steve Smith, Mangar of the runner-up Boys' Club.

Each member of the winning St. Bernard's team received an individual trophy from Edwin E. Fraktman, President of the National League.

Mini-Bike Track Closed

The Mini-Bike facility operated by the Newton Recreation Department at the former Newton Infirmary site on Winchester Street, Newton Highlands, will be closed for three Saturdays, August 16, 23 and 30 for vacations.

The tracks will reopen on Saturday, Sept. 6, and remain open Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. through November.

Lunch at McDonald's

Fifteen youngsters from each of the Newton Recreation Department's 27 playgrounds who have shown helpfulness and dedication to their Playground Leaders will be guests of McDonald's on California Street, Newton, for lunch between Aug. 4 and 21.

Brochures

In the continuing effort to acquaint Newton residents with the Recreation Department many varied activities for young and old, an eight-page brochure has been published by the Department.

It has been distributed throughout the City and is available at libraries and at the Recreation Department office, 70 Crescent St., Auburndale. Any Newton resident may call 969-3171 and a copy will be sent to him.

Sepcial Day Camps

Both Special Day Camps are involved in their annual cookouts. The Mason-Rice Camp held its cookout Aug. 5, and the Bowen will have their cookout on Aug. 12.

Annual Parent's Day will be held next week, Bowen on Aug. 14, and Mason-Rice on Aug. 15.

Last Friday both camps went to the Drumlin Farm in Lincoln.

Sqaure Dancing

Square Dancing has become one of the Recreation Department's most popular group activities. During the winter months weekly dances are held at the Day Junior High while this Summer a series of seven dance programs wereheld throughout the City. The final two will be at the Auburndale Playground on Aug. 13, and the Lower Falls on Aug. 20. Time is 7:30 p.m. both nights.

Irving Park of the Garden City Squares notes that the program began with one square back in 1972 and now there are over 120 members.

Tracing the history of Square Dancing, Park says it all began with the pioneers and the fiddlers gathering around the campfire. He noted that the United States Congress is now considering the possibility of making the Square Dance, the National Dance.

Park also points out that Square Dancing gets people together and that many have gotten to know their neightbors in this relaxing and enjoyable activity.

Park's son, Steve, who works at the Auburndale Playground during the summer, began Square Dancing three years ago and is now the caller for the Garden City Squares.

The Garden City Squares have chosen as their flower the Rose because it is "the most colorful flower," according to Park.

Exhibit An Arts and Crafts Exhibit is being planned for the City Hall Rotunda the week of Aug. 11. During the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., residents will have the chance to view paintings, crafts, special and professional exhibits and black and white photographs.

Paper Dome Construction

Paper Dome specialist Martha Akagi will present a series of four programs throughout the City. Monday, Aug. 11, she will be at Newton Centre from 10 a.m. to noon. The program will move to the Memorial School on Aug. 12, Cabot School on Aug. 14 and Hyde School for children from Hyde and Angier on Aug. 15. All programs will run from 10 a.m. to noon.

Outdoor Films

Children's Theatre

The National Theatre for Children will present an audience participation program at the Newton Centre Playground on Wednesday, Aug. 13, at 2 p.m.

Enterprising youngsters grapple with sciences

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
Of the Graphic Staff

While everyone else in Newton was grappling with the heat, some enterprising youngsters were grappling with the more weighty problems of water quality, botany, geology, astronomy, and ecology. They were seventh, eighth and ninth graders, who are part of a 20 day environmental study group sponsored by Newton public schools.

The program is under the direction of Richard Staley, who is an Environmental Science teacher at Warren Junior High School. Staley is also a vigorous member of the Conservation Commission.

The students in the program apply each April and are accepted on a first come basis. The program, which is nine years old, has a loyal following. Each summer's agenda is planned by a planning board made up of students and faculty.

Recently, in order to study water quality, the groups met at the Lynn Marina and spent the day taking water samples and performing 17 tests on them. Using a microscope, they examined plankton which is the microscopic animal and plant life found floating in water. They also took a biological count of coliform, the colon bacillus, and tested for temperature and salinity.

The students used test equipment used by the Massachusetts Marine Educators. George Hahn, a charter member of this organization showed them how to use the equipment. Mr. Hahn is with Newton Junior College.

Among other trips the group took this summer was a 12 mile Neponset canoe trip and some mountain climbing at Mt. Washington. To prepare for this climb, the students scaled Mt. Monadnock and did extensive hiking in the Blue Hills.

During their climb, Staley pointed out that they studied botany and upon reaching the summit studied also astronomy.

Although they climbed in late July, they had the opportunity to see spring plants blooming on the mountain. They also saw plants in a dwarfed state...plants which have been dessicated because of the severe environment. Staley said the moisture had been squeezed out and the plants adapted by "growing scrubby."

On the Neponset trip, the students were accompanied by Bob Stanhope, director of the Trailside museum. Stanhope was able to identify plants all along the trip.

The students also toured the Boston Edison plant to learn about thermal pollution and how electricity is generated.

Staley said the 20 day program attracts "highly motivated" students. In addition to studying about their environment, the students also have the opportunity to develope leadership skills.

This year's leaders are David Keyes, attending Princeton; Isabell Marcus, attending Middlebury College; Ann Sasahara, attending the University of Arizona; Stuart Rothman, attending Lawrence; Faye Bresler, a senior at Newton North High School and student director; Polly Weiss, a Newton South High School senior; Erica Sussman, a NSHS senior and Daniel Picard, a junior at Newton South. One of the program's former leaders is Stuart Freudberg, who graduated with a degree in environmental engineering and is pursuing his master's degree in chemistry.

South side sewers studied

Lt. Governor Tom O'Neill had announced that Massachusetts has received a $383,800 grant from the New England Regional Commission (N.E.R.C.) to fund preliminary studies of M.D.C. sewer sites. One study will affect the West Roxbury, Brookline and Newton sewer districts.

The funds will be used to finance "Infiltration-Inflow studies" (I.I.) which are the first step in the construction process of waste water treatment plants with $350 million recently granted the state by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (E.P.A.).

The I.I. study will affect a substantial portion of West Roxbury, a small portion of Brookline, and the south side of Newton, and will expedite the construction of 3.3 miles of gravity sewers and pipes designed to raise the communities' sewage capacities to 2.5 million gallons per day.

Andrew Fisichelli, assistant director of the MDC Sewer Division, said the study will survey alternative routes for a relief sewer that will be needed in the future, and also check for illegal connections to the system.

Fisichelli said the additional line for the Neponset Valley Sewer System to the Nut Island Treatment Plant in Quincy will be built within three to six years.

The Lt. Governor called the grant "an important step forward for the citizens of this area in our continuing effort to clean up our rivers and to ensure that they remain pollutant-free for future generations."

O'Neill said the revenue and jobs which will eventually be generated by construction of the plants "would greatly benefit the state's economy as well."

NERC, a cooperative effort by the New England states, funds a number of projects throughout the six state region with an emphasis on energy, transportation and economic development programs.

Governor Michael Dukakis is vice-chairman of NERC. O'Neill serves as his alternate.

The I.I. studies determine the volume of a particular town's sewer discharge and ultimately, the optimum size of the proposed treatment plant.

Higher tuitions?

Governor Michael S. Dukakis and top legislative leaders have agreed on a plan for increasing tuition charges at state-operated colleges and universities which eventually will produce at least $70 Million annually and probably more than $100 Million per year in new revenue.

At the present time approximately 100,000 students attending the University of Massachusetts and the various state colleges pay $300 per year in tuition. That charge ultimately will be hiked to at least $1000 annually and possibly higher.

The first increase will become effective a year from this coming September at the start of the 1976 fall academic semester. A provision will be written into the new law that students from poor families, who will be unable to meet the higher charges, may delay payment of their tuition until after they graduate and start working.

While some Democratic liberals in the Legislature will oppose the sharp increase in tuition costs at the state-operated colleges and universities, present indications are that there will be enough support for the measure to assure its passage.

One person close to Governor Dukakis complained to the writer that some legislators have announced that under no circumstances will they vote for the $689.5 Million tax package proposed by Dukakis but that the same law-makers balk at the economies necessary to make substantial cuts in Dukakis' budget.

"There is no way the Cabinet members can make the 20 per cent reductions in their budgets demanded by the House Ways and Means Committee without curtailing public services" he declared. "But when you talk about cutting back public services, many legislators don't want that."

"Everybody is in favor of economies and budget reductions as long as they don't affect them," he continued. "But it should be understood that if the budget is cut to the point where we only need $300 Million in new taxes, a lot of people will be hurt, and a lot of public services will be curtailed or eliminated.

"There are no such things as painless budget cuts when you are talking in terms of $389 Million," the Dukakis aide emphasized.

That's the Dukakis side of the story, and, in fairness, there is some basis for his protest. Many legislators want services for their constituents, but they don't want to levy the taxes to pay for them.

However, the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and a lot of its citizens would be hurt very severely if the Governor's $689.5 tax package — or anything approaching that amount — were approved by the Legislature.

Some industries would pull up stakes and move out of Massachusetts to other states. Jobs would be lost. People who could not move with the industries would be thrown out of work. Persons living in border areas, who now pay taxes in Massachusetts, would move into New Hampshire, Vermont and Maine where the state taxes are not so onerous. Any hope of attracting new business and industry to Massachusetts would go down the drain.

Incidentally, John R. Silber, president of Boston University, has been outspoken in advocating big increases in tuition at the state colleges and universities to place them on a more competitive level with the private institutions of higher learning. He had favored a $2000-per-year tuition at the state colleges and universities. However, it is not likely to go that high in the next few years.

Now they're talking clothing stamps

Analysis by John D. Lofton, Jr.

WASHINGTON—When you talk with Wilbert A. Tatum — the executive director of New York City Mayor Abe Beame's Office of Apparel Industry Planning and Development — he doesn't sound like a fanatic. He's just a very sincere, soft-spoken guy who's worried about inflation and recession in general, and unemployment in the garment industry in particular. He's just concerned, as he puts it, "how all of us — black, white and polka-dot — can do what we must to pull our country into some kind of thing that will allow us to live at least moderately well."

Fine.

But what Mr. Tatum feels must be done is an excellent example of George Santayana's definition of fanaticism, that is "redoubling your efforts when you have forgotten your aim."

What Mr. Tatum feels the Federal Government should start doing is giving clothing stamps to the nearly 40 million people now eligible for food stamps. Under his proposal —which he has made to Rep. Charles Rangel (D.-N. Y.), who has referred it to the House Ways and Means Committee for study — the government could be soaked for an additional $6 billion a year to finance an annual clothing supplement of $600 to the "average four-person, low-income household." Mr. Tatum observes: "A poor person, poorly dressed, his image is destroyed. What it does psychologically is enormous."

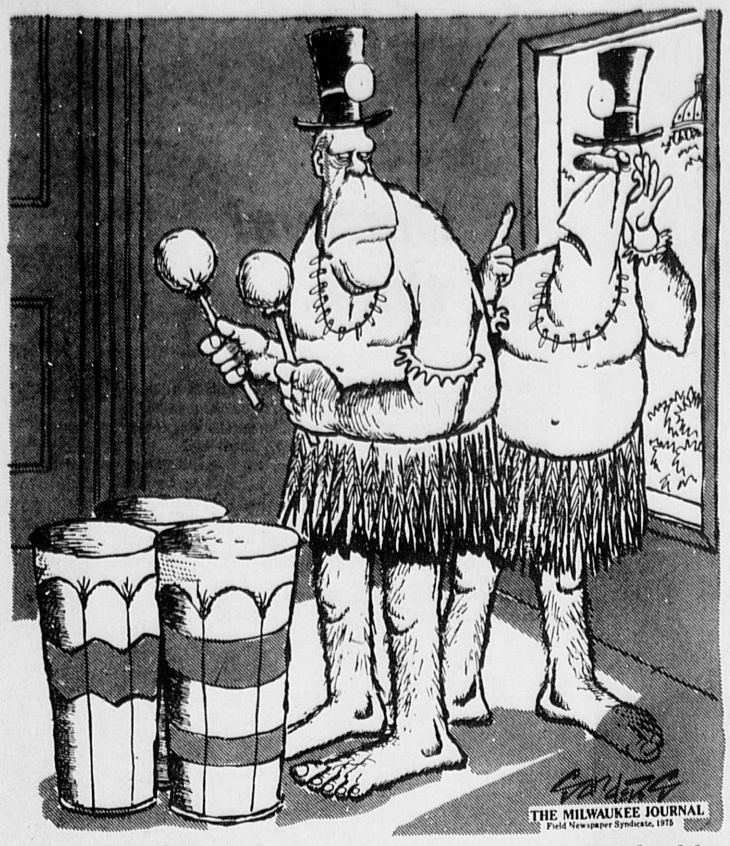

Perhaps.

But there's just one small problem. With the federal government's budget deficit now approaching the $100 billion mark, with Uncle Sam swimming in a sea of red ink which has caused the inflation which has caused the recession which has aggravated the unemployment situation, where will the government get the extra $6 billion a year?

Well, Mr. Tatum says he really doesn't know. He says he cannot be certain. His plan is "just a proposal, nothing hard and definitive."

Incredible. And ironic.

In seeking to come up with a solution to the problems of which he thinks we already have too many, Wilbert Tatum has in fact proposed a solution which would only exacerbate them. Being an official of the New York City government, he, above all others, should know the disastrous consequences of dealing with problems simply by throwing more money at them. He should be keenly aware of the catastrophic economic results of a government continuing to live beyond its means. But it does not yet seem to have dawned on him.

'Here comes the answer to your message that modern health care would be a curse: B . . . a . . . l . . . o . . . n . . . e . . . y!'

Just last week Treasury Secretary William Simon and Office of Management Director James Lynn warned that if all the bills now in the congressional hopper become law, the federal budget deficit for fiscal 1976 could soar to $87.9 billion, and for fiscal 1977 to $79.4 billion. Unless both houses of Congress act promptly to reduce outlays and approve certain recommended cutbacks, they say, such spending could set off a new wave of inflation which would abort the economic recovery now underway. This would be a "catastrophe," Lynn declared, which would hurt the "poor most of all."

Secretary Simon asks: "Are we truly concerned with the country we are going to turn over to our children, or are we going to continue to spend away our heritage?"

This is a serious question, one that the Wilbert Tatums of the world should be asking themselves before proposing such hare-brained schemes as clothing stamps for the poor.

Mr. Tatum says he got his idea a few months ago after he and his 4-year-old daughter passed a shabbily dressed old man on the street, and she asked: "Why doesn't he have nice clothes to wear?"

Well, maybe this individual was a poor person. But then again, maybe he was just one of the millions of poor saps with no money left to buy nice clothes for themselves after paying the taxes to support the 168 federal and other welfare programs which have cost some $138 billion between 1965 and 1973. It's a possibility worth pondering.

Mrs. Gandhi moves ahead

Analysis by Kate Webb, UPI correspondent

NEW DELHI (UPI) — Little more than a month after imposing a state of emergency in India and jailing hundreds of her opponents, Prime Minister Indira Gandhi is moving ahead as if the future is hers.

In the past two weeks, she has left little doubt that not only has she cleared the first hurdles of the emergency with ease, but is trying to steer India toward a heavily modified democratic system reminiscent of that imposed by President Ferdinand E. Marcos in the Philippines.

Internationally, Mrs. Gandhi has been spared most official criticism.

With an eye to international stability, Western governments have generally called the emergency an internal affair. Even Pakistan remained silent. The Chinese, predictably, were the only ones to voice outright condemnation.

At home, with the exception of a newly formed underground, the generally leaderless opposition foundered and spoke of regrouping in six months or more. The few demonstrations, most of them peaceful Gandhistyle rallies, soon died with no press to publicize them across this vast, impoverished land of 600 million.

Opposition news, reports of arrests or any criticism of the government ended on the censors' spike.

The prime minister, acting alone, according to sources close to her, moved ahead unerringly.

Along with the the arrests of hundreds of her political opponents came the arrest of smugglers, "bad characters" and members of extremist quasi-political organizations.

Lavish apartment houses in Bombay and Madras were raided by assessors who then published details of the wealth uncovered.

Many shopkeepers in major cities became ill for days on end in an effort to avoid price control agents. Government workers showed up in their offices in unprecedented numbers, and on time, after the warning they'd lose their jobs if they didn't.

Taxes were lowered for the middle class and land was once again promised to the landless.

A mysterious flow of electrical power appeared in major factories, and basic wages of unskilled and semi-skilled workers were raised a few cents a month (not to be sneezed at in India).

While the public came to grips with the new rules, Mrs. Gandhi put her priorities on constitutional ratification of the state of emergency by the parliament where the outnumbered opposition walked out.

Once the emergency was legalized, Mrs. Gandhi and her chief ministers began telling India—this way of life is here to stay.

"Democracy must be preserved ... we are saving democracy not killing it ... the constitution...the legal system.... must be adapted to Indian conditions...."

The emergency session of parliament passed laws to prevent appeals to the courts on the detentions. On Monday, the Indian government introduced a bill that will erase Mrs. Gandhi's June 12 conviction on two counts of campaign corruption—the action which prompted the present crisis.

The bill amends the political campaign laws that Mrs. Gandhi was convicted of violating. Its passage is assured by Mrs. Gandhi's two-thirds parliamentary majority.

Because the bill is applied retroactively, a Supreme Court hearing of Mrs. Gandhi's appeal against her conviction will be of academic interest only—if the court proceeds with the case at all.

The legal experts who are poring over foreign constitutions to revamp the 25-year-old Indian statutes say Mrs. Gandhi wants to keep the "forms" of democracy.

Foreign diplomats in New Delhi, now largely cut off from Indian life, predict the emergency is only the start of an irreversible change to a more authoritarian state, but add they are waiting to see if Mrs. Gandhi can really push through economic reforms.

"The future of India," an Indian poet said recently, "depends on the price of food. The harvest is supposed to be good this year."

"If we are safe on the food front, we can take any risks on any other front," Finance Minister C. Subramanium said last Thursday.

A new touch to the art of garbology

By Norton Mockridge, syndicated columnist

NEW YORK—The art of garbology is getting quite a bit of attention these days, and garbologists all over the country are preening themselves. Never have they been so proud.

Generally, the true garbologist doesn't exhibit any pride. All too often he works quietly, unobstrusively and a bit ashamedly. That's because the great majority of people think that rummaging through garbage is not one of the great professions of the world.

But Jay Gourley has changed that, at least, to a large extent. Mr. Gourley, you'll recall, is the 37-year-old investigative reporter for the weekly National Enquirer, who was caught going through Henry Kissinger's garbage.

Gourley was loading five green plastic trash bags, filled with Dr. Kissinger's refuse, into his car when an army of Secret Servicemen and policemen swooped down upon him. They were going to toss him into the pokey because he refused to put the bags back on the sidewalk in front of the Kissinger home. But he argued, successfully, that he had a right to take the bags if he wanted to because they were "abandoned" property — anybody's game.

Now it may well be that Gourley is not a professional, dyed-in-the-wool garbologist. He's basically a reporter, and he probably wanted to go through Henry's garbage to find scraps of paper on which to base a smashing expose-type article.

"Henry Kissinger calls Nancy 'Peachy-poo' and Nancy calls the Secretary of State 'Boopsie-boy,' a study of their personal papers revealed today."

That's the kind of newspaper lead that Gourley may have been searching for. And he wouldn't necessarily have revealed that his inside info all came out of a garbage sack.

And so the purist garbologist might well turn his back on Gourley. Because the purist, you see, wouldn't be caught dead digging and scratching through refuse in order to develop a sordid newspaper story. Oh, no. He does it for the sheer beauty of it.

"I can't tell you how exhilerating, how stimulating, how rewarding it is to go through someone's garbage and find out what they're like," said a garbologist I've known for many years. "Give me a man's garbage, and I'll give you his life style!"

Garbologists, as you may have heard, concentrate mainly on public figures—best-selling writers, TV and movie stars, statesmen, prominent athletes and the like—but they also go in for studies of the girl next door, the mousy little guy who lives in the middle of the block, the choir singer who always carried her Bible.

"While we like to see what Sinatra and Raquel Welch and Muhammad Ali throw out," said my source, "I have to admit that the findings are generally predictable. From Sinatra you'll get more booze bottles than anybody in town — and that tells you something, but it's something you already know.

"How much more exciting it is to inspect the garbage of the mousy little guy and find out that he kills two bottles of gin a day! How electrifying it is to discover that the choir singer with the Bible reads Playgirl, cuts out and saves some of the pictures, and scribbles yearning comments on some of the others!"

Yes, the garbologists are serious students of human nature. And they know an awful lot about all of us. So far, of course, they haven't done much with the wealth of information they've dug up, but now that Gourley's led them out of the closet, so to speak, maybe they'll be more daring.— and let us all know what we're like.

Yessir, it's a glad day for garbology!

How long will the jobless control their resentment?

Analysis by Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON — The long hot summer is nearly half over and no one can dispute that it has been hot and often intolerably humid and smoggy. Yet the dire foreboding of violence in the streets at the start of the hot season has not thus far been borne out.

This is all the more remarkable considering the condition in the poverty areas of America's cities. Black teen-age unemployment for the second quarter of the year was 49 per cent. That is an appalling figure, the reality behind it — idle youths embittered at empty days, bringing no promise except more idleness in torrid littered streets.

Since the reports on poverty areas for teen-agers are made only quarterly, this figure will stand through the summer months. The unemployment figure for white teen-agers is 29 per cent. Both figures represent an increase of about 10 per cent over the same time a year ago.

Far from signaling the end of the recession, the high rate of black unemployment that persists is an indication that the economy is likely to be in trouble for some time to come.

Caught between the twin scourges of inflation and recession, the Congress and the Executive branch of government seem paralyzed, unable to reach any common ground for action. And this is in the face of a condition that will not stand still indefinitely, not even, it is possible, for the balance of this long hot summer.

The statisticians carefully steer away from any correlation between the high rate of unemployment and the high rate of crime. But just plain common sense would link the two. Idle youths without money will find ways to get it even if they break the law to do so.

The shocker for the first three months of this year was an 18 per cent increase in the crime rate. In the larger cities, the rate was even higher. Behind this statistic is the reality of muggings, purse snatchings, auto thefts, the grim roster of crimes that have made city streets increasingly unsafe, even though they stop short of rape and murder.

In an interview the other day, Atty. Gen. Edward H. Levi, one of President Ford's excellent appointments, had some frank and pertinent things to say about crime and the public. Public passivity and the frustrating and cumbersome processes of justice put the crime problem in the category of nobody's business.

Why don't "they" do something? the householder asks, as he puts on new locks and an alarm system, or moves to the suburbs. This last is less and less of an escape as urban crime spreads to the white suburbs.

The seeming acceptance by the public of the disastrous rate of black unemployment matches the passivity toward the upward-spiraling curve of crime. The two seem allied in a dead sea of stagnation.

In America's major cities, an increasingly predominant black majority is locked in. This grew out of the migration from the South when the mechanical cotton picker and other kinds of mechanization replaced field hands in the decade of the '50s.

In retrospect, it is astonishing that this mass movement of hundreds of thousands of the dispossessed took place with little or no aid in housing, jobs, education or any other of the needs to resettle a people wholly unprepared for living in a metropolis.

The end result certainly could have been expected. The resettlement has taken place at a fearful cost in human suffering and in the quality of life not only for the newcomers but for those who felt the pressures of the influx.

Concerned organizations such as the Urban League, currently meeting in Atlanta, and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People shout to the housetops about the worsening economic position of the blacks. But the impact on the larger public is hardly perceptible.

From those who find themselves in the same plight as the blacks — without jobs and with unemployment benefits running out — the reaction is resentment and even hostility.

The doors to the black enclaves in Detroit, Washington, New York, St. Louis are not locked. Yet to millions who live within these enclaves the exits appear to be closed. The only question is how long they will wait with a passivity which matches that of the general public.

Keep lanes closed

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to John Driscoll of the Turnpike Authority with a copy to the Graphic)

Dear Mr. Driscoll:

Immediately following the recent fire on the bridge over the Massachusetts Turnpike in Newton Corner, and before the beginning of the current program of repair, the two easternmost lanes of the bridge were closed to traffic. During that time the traffic problem on and near the bridge improved significantly in the following ways:

Traffic entering the bridge proceeded in a slower, more orderly, and safer manner

Traffic on the bridge was more effectively channeled

No unusual traffic congestion resulted

Recognizing these improvements the Newton Corner Neighborhood Association voted unanimously at a recent public meeting to request the Massachusetts Turnpike Authority to take the following action:

The two easternmost lanes of the bridge should remain closed indefinitely as an experiment to smooth the flow of traffic and to increase traffic safety.

A study should be begun as soon as possible to determine the feasibility of keeping those two lanes closed permanently.

The middle lanes, which have been closed only since the beginning of the repair program, could be reopened when the repairs are completed.

Repair and improvement of the safety of the pedestrian walk-way should proceed at the highest priority.

Back 40 years

This is the last column by Phil Newsom who is retiring after 40 years as a world wide correspondent and foreign news editor for United Press International, the largest commercial news service in the world. The first man who relayed the news of the attack on Pearl Harbor, Newsom looks back on the history he has so intimately been involved in.

By Phil Newsom,
UPI Foreign News Editor

Nothing new under the sun?

Of course there is, in each new day, in each new life and even in death before time moves in to fill the vacuum.

Time and relativity, which comes first? Or are they the same?

To the 40-year-old man, 40 years is an obvious lifetime.

But to the man a score of years and more older, 40 years is still the beginning.

Peace in our time?

The late Neville Chamberlain, former British prime minister, thought he had found it at Munich.

Richard Nixon sought it in Vietnam but along the way fell victim to the cyclonic winds of Watergate at home.

These are among the reflections of one who has just completed 40 years with what now is United Press International but in 1935 simply was United Press, and is now entering what he hopes will not be an inactive retirement.

I observed my 40th birthday lugging a heavy duffel bag across a windy and bitterly cold airport at Taegu during the war in South Korea. Gen. Douglas MacArthur had come in just ahead of me, his plane sweeping in just under our wingtip, and so all the jeeps were busy.

I noted to a younger Unipress colleague recently that as night editor on the Sunday of Dec. 7, 1941, it was I who relayed first to the world the news of the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor.

"My God," he said. "I wasn't even born then."

Time and relativity.

Is the world a better place after 40 years?

Well, instant communications perhaps have made us more aware than were our forebears of the inter-dependence of man and the indisputable fact that this is one world.

We are more efficient in keeping men alive. And more efficient in killing them.

We still fight tribal wars as we have since the dawn of history, the Goths, the Visigoths, the Saxons, the Franks, the Han, the Khmers and the Nungs.

And in 1975, the Semitic Arab fights the Semitic Jew.

In 1945, at the end of another war to preserve democracy, individual liberties seemed a certain thing, with no real need even to clearly define them.

Foreign editor Phil Newsom

In 1975, two bitterly opposed groups of freedom fighters battle to the death in Angola to determine which is to dictate the terms of how the free Angola man is to live in a free Angola.

After 1945, we went almost directly into the cold war highlighted by the Berlin airlift. We interfered with Italy's internal affairs to insure that no Communist government took over there.

Today we have detente, and if an historic compromise is to permit the Communists into the Italian government now, Washington shows little visible concern.

I am the son of a small-town editor of a Nebraska weekly and grew up amid the smell of a printshop. I can't remember any other ambition than to be a newsman as good as whatever talent I had would permit.

And I have been fortunate.

For most of 40 years I have been in the mainstream of the news as it recorded world history.

I have worked in some 50 countries, seen three American wars, a gaggle of revolutions and such oddments as Captain Galvao's kidnaping of the cruise ship Santa Marie in an ill-timed earlier revolt against the Portuguese dictatorship.

I have also been fortunate in being able to list among my friends some of the world's great newsmen working for the printed word, radio and television.

These men and women would laugh and be uncomfortable if you told them that frequently in covering the great news stories they placed ideals above personal safety.

I remember one in Korea who, after a particularly hairy incident, was offered the silver star. He turned it down, saying "medals are for soldiers."

I remember a shaken colleague who climbed the stairs to the UPI office on Louis Pasteur avenue in Algiers, blood dripping from a thin knife wound along his cheek. It was a warning delivered in the silence of a darkened doorway that the rebels as well as the French and the French censor were watching him.

An I remember my roommate, Gene Symonds, in Japan. Gene escaped snipers' bullets at the Chosen dam in Korea but he died in a Singapore race riot.

Opinion of the budget

To the Editor:

As a critic of the Newton School Committee's budget process, a member of the Newton School Committee and a Newton Taxpayer, and in view of the long-overdue, sudden criticism and publicity that the School Committee is now receiving regarding the budgetary process, I feel compelled to reiterate my position on the school's budgeting process.

Also, because I do not make a habit of repeating everything which has already been said at least seven times before, I have been noted as one of the more quiet and less voacl of the School Committee members.

I wish to make it very clear that in my opinion it is not the 10- or 15-minute speeches most School Committee members make before they vote that's important, it's which way they vote. I, along with School Committeeman Alvin Mandell, did not vote in favor of this years budget, and clearly we are not the majority of the School Committee.

As a budget analyst of one of the larger insurance companies in Boston, and a novice to the school administration's budgeting procedures, from the start I had great difficulty interpreting and analyzing the budget.

As Mr. Lebner, chief budget officer of the city, has said, "The estimated figures for programs shouldbe briken down on a school-by-school basis." This to me is the only type of budget presentation which would permit the most efficient and easiest analysis. It is a process of value, and one which I had sought from the school administration.

In closing, again my purpose for writing this letter was to clarify the position of and help identify those members of the Newton School Committee who are not the majority and who have tried to represent the city in a responsible manner, those members being Alvin Mandell and myself.

McLaughlin answers Ralph's charges

To the Editor:

S. Lester Ralph's accusations are an obvious attempt to create a political issue to get himself reelected mayor of Somerville.

In order to do this he has blantly lied about me. Ralph stated that I have told Miles Mahoney, that I would do all the hiring at the Middlesex County Hospital. That is a total lie in fact when Nat Harrisson of the Lowell Sun asked Mr. Mahoney if this was a fact he said that he had never received such a statement from me or Commissioner Danehy. (Mahoney was a Ralph appointee).

Ralph further stated that many capable people have been terminated. This is totally untrue. Not one permanent employee has been terminated since my election as County Commissioner on April 9 and this is a matter of public record, which again will point out that his is another blatant lie of Mr. Ralph's.

Ralph says that he now takes the position that County Government can no longer be effective. What he neglects to say is that he feels that way because he can no longer use political patronage to further his political machine in Somerville. For example, William Fothergill who currently holds a $22,000 a year job was appointed by Ralph. What were his credentials for the position? He was one of Ralph's campaign manager in Somerville.

This position for Fothergill is only one plum that has been passed on to him. He was Ralph's handpicked building inspector for Somerville before Ralph became County Commissioner. Ralph has recently appointed Fothergill's daughter as City Suditor of Somerville. The Fothergill family contributed $2,400 to Ralph's ill-fated campaign for attorney general in 1974.

A further example is his first assistant Andrew Puglia, who held a $14,500 job. He was a former Somerville school committeeman and is presently a Ralph supporter on the Somerville Board of Aldermen.

Paul Haley Sr. who was a former member of the Somerville Board of Aldermen was appointed by Ralph as a per-diem court officer for the county. It just so happens that Paul Haley Jr., is presently a member of the Board of Aldermen in Somerville.

Ralph also rehired the brother of Somerville State Rep., Vincent Piro to a position in the County Engineering Department, in addition to that, Peter Piro, a third brother is a member of the Somerville School Committee and is a Ralph supported candidate for Alderman-at-Large.

These are but a few of the positions that Ralph has given to people who can help him keep his strong political machine in the City of Somerville. He is upset because he knows that I will not sit by and allow him to continue to rape the citizens of Middlesex County for his own personal gain. Instead, of running the county via political patronage I have proposed and the Legislature has accepted a professional personnel department.

Through this department, jobs will be advertised in all of the 54 cities and towns of Middlesex County and not in just the smoked filled rooms of Somerville.

Mayor Ralph opposes this professional approach and would prefer to continue the use of the patronage system.

Mayor Ralph states that he and Paul Tsongas were elected as a reform slate in 1972. They were no sooner elected when Ralph immediately made a back room deal so that he could defeat Tsongas as chairman of the Middlesex County Commissioners.

Ralph is always stating that Danehy is the worst thing about Middlesex County Government. If this is so, where was Ralph in 1974 when Charles Clough of Concord, the origniator of Citizens for Middlesex County Reform, was a candidate against Danehy?

Was Ralph there leading the charge for the reformer as Clough had done for Ralph two years earlier? No...he was running for attorney general, which is another example of the total hyprocrisy Samuel Lester represents.

Ralph's basic problem is that he is an egomaniac and believes he should totally control everything. His record number of campaigns since 1969 could only be surpassed by that of James Michael Curley (not that I would ever want to so compliment Ralph by putting him the same category as Jim Curley). Since 1969, Ralph has been involved in so many campaigns one would have to wonder where all of the money to fund these campaigns has come from.

Examples

1969—Mayor of Somerville
1970—Defeated for the State Senate in Somerville
1971—Mayor of Somerville
1972—County Commissioner
1973—Mayor of Somerville
1974—Attorney General
1975—Mayor of Somerville

Lester Ralph says he wants Middlesex County Government to work yet during the two years that he had total control of it, he used and abused the patronage system.

If he is truly interested in making Middlesex County a model government for others to follow, as I am trying to do HE SHOULD RESIGN his position as county commissioner because he has demeaned the integrity of the office.

Michael E. McLaughlin,
Commissioner

Excellent coverage

To the Editor:

Thank you for your excellent coverage on the article last week on the School Committee vs. the Board of Aldermen.

Obviously, there is no real winner in matters of this type, but should there be a winner, it would be the taxpayers of the City of Newton, as indeed it should be.

Appreciate efforts

To the Editor:

The Newton-Norumbega Association express its appreciation of Mayor Mann's efforts towards resolving the Norumbega land situation.

We are optimistic that the "no rezoning" vote of the Board of Aldermen will be implemented and that the first step will be the purchase of the park land by the City, so that Newton may have a new public Norumbega Park along the Charles River.

Marcus Lieberman, president
Newton-Norumbega Association

Workers may set up individual retirement programs, IRS says

Massachusetts workers not covered by pension programs may be able to set up their own individual retirement savings programs and gain significant tax advantages, George Delegianis, acting Internal Revenue Service district director for Massachusetts, announced recently.

Any employee under age 70 who hasn't participated in a retirement program during the year can set up an individual retirement savings program, the IRS official said. Husbands and wives who are wage earners may each qualify for their own individual programs.

Delegianis said that those who are eligible can contribute 15 percent of their annual earnings, up to $1500, whichever amount is less, into the program. A major advantage of the program, Delegianis added, is that no tax is due on the contributions or interest or other income earned by the contributions until money is withdrawn. Because this is a retirement program, withdrawals usually wouldn't begin until the individual was 59 and a half older. At that point, the individual would be in a lower tax bracket than during his or her earning years.

Massachusetts residents who would like additional information can contact their nearest IRS office or call 1-800-392-6288 toil free.

Grateful

Here is a copy of a letter received by Chief Frederick A. Perkins, Jr., of the Newton Fire Department that we wish printed in your next edition:

Dear Chief Perkins:

On the night of July 4th there was a Molotov Cocktail thrown through the window of one of my tenants here at 61 Chapel Street.

I was informed from on the site witnesses and from my own tenant that if it had not been for the very quick response of the Newton Fire Department, the damage would have been extensive.

I have also personally witnessed the promptness on the part of the Fire Department on other occasions, and I want to extend my thanks and appreciation for a job continuing to be well done.

Please extend my gratitude to the units covering this area, for they, and your department are drserving of the praise.

Drinan acts to get federal funding for resource recovery facilities

Congressman Robert F. Drinan introduced legislation which would enable recovering significant amounts of energy from municipal trash which is at present either incinerated or buried.

The "Solid Waste Energy and Re-ource Recovery Act of 1975" is the first major bill filed in the House of Representatives on in spite of the fact that residential and energy waste recovery' commercial trash could account for more than 13 percent of the energy needs of Massachusetts' utilities alone.

"Energy recovery from solid waste has now become possible through the use of trash as a fuel in electricity generating power facilities," Drinan explained.

"Up until recently trash could only be used as a supplementary fuel, but new demonstration plants have the capability to produce electricity, steam or sythetic fuels from solid waste alone.

"According to the Environmental Protection Agency, (EPA) the most recent statistics indicate that between 400,000 to 500,000 barrels of oil could be recovered each day in the more densely populated areas.

"Recovering energy from trash makes a great deal of environmental sense in addition to tapping a previously unused energy source," Drinan stated.

"We are increasingly becoming a 'throw-away' society, discarding more than 135 million tons of solid waste in the United States each year.

Current estimates show that one-third of our cities will be running out of suitable disposal sites in the next five years unless immediate action is taken," he said.

Under the provisions of the Solid Waste Energy Recovery Act, cities and towns would receive grant assistance to plan and implement energy waste recovery facilities.

Grants of up to 85 percent would be made available to municipalities for obtaining the technical and management expertise necessary to plan, install and operate the plants. Then implementation grants and loan guarantees would be targeted for the actual construction of the energy recycling systems.

In addition, the EPA would be directed to accelerate their research, development and demonstration efforts in the energy waste recovery area.

"Energy recycling programs can work and are needed," Congressman Drinan maintained, "but the costs associated with these programs often cannot be met by towns and cities alone. Trash-fueled electricity and steam generating plants are common in Europe and Japan, and we have a number of operating demonstration facilities in this country.

However, it is now time to move forward rapidly so as to bring this technology to the average American community. From an energy as well as an environmental viewpoint, this country must utilize its available resources to a much greater degree than ever before," he concluded.

VOICE makes itself heard

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

"I pay the taxes, but my voice has never been heard."

The speaker was a citizen, Howard Passman of Dorcar Road, Newton Centre, but could have been any one of 50 people attending the first announced public meeting of a new political group named VOICE.

VOICE was started this summer as a political action group for politically moderate people of all parties or no party.

It has attracted not only moderates but some conservatives.

There are several liberal political groups in Newton, such as Newton Coalition for New Politics, and a newly formed umbrella organization for liberals, Newton Campaign for '75' but none for those in the middle or to the right politically.

The meeting brought together many of the originators of the group, citizens looking for a means of expressing their political viewpoints, and candidates for alderman and School Committee looking for votes and endorsements.

A statement of "platform goals and fundamental philosophy" distributed at the meeting met with some criticism. Some citizens complained that it is too vague; others thought it too rigid; still others wondered how to go about changing some standpoints.

Essentially VOICE's platform, arrived at by its executive committee of founders, favors tight land-use controls, low-density housing accepted by the neighborhood, "high-quality education for our children within the constraints of a reasonable tax burden," deferring implementation of revaluation until all communities are revalued, "fiscal restraint" and fiscal responsibility from all branches of municipal government, and the preservation of the neighborhood schools.

VOICE intends to make endorsements for the upcoming election, and according to Chairman Donald Levitan, "would like to stay alive after the election and be productive in the city."

Endorsements will be made after a candidates' night and a screening by a committee. If a candidate is found to be compatible with VOICE, he will then be invited to an open meeting for an opinion from the membership.

Levitan and the vice-chairman, Kenneth Hartford, favor endorsements for the preliminary elections, but policy has not been decided.

In addition to the 50 citizens attending the meeting, at least 33 members of the Board of Aldermen and candidates for the Board and the School Committee attended, some of whom were openly hostile to VOICE.

One noncandidate and non-officeholder, Sheila Decter, asked, "Must we accept the platform, or are you willing to hear other opinions? Is the basic statement subject to change?"

Ald. Sidney Small, a VOICE member, replied, "The platform is a good and reasonable statement," and went on to imply that people who disagree with the platform should not join the VOICE organization.

The next meeting of VOICE is Aug. 13 at 8 p.m. at the Post 440 building, 295 California St. It will be an open meeting that should do much toward clarifying VOICE's political positions.

Correction

In the election story that appeared on page one of last week's Newton Graphic, Ward 3 aldermanic candidate Paul Daley was incorrectly identified.

Sammarco given suspended sentence for July 4 incident

A Needham man was given a one-year suspended sentence and fined $500 upon conviction in Newton District Court Tuesday of three assault and battery charges.

Rocco W. Sammarco, 26, of 73 Highland Ave., Needham, was originally charged with assault and battery on a police officer at the July 4 melee in Upper Falls, but Officer Rupert G. Baker agreed to have the charge reduced to assault and battery upon a civilian since he was not in uniform at the time he made the arrest.

Judge Monte Basbas agreed to a settlement with defense lawyer William Matthews and prosecutor Cosmo Borgioli after the officer agreed to the lesser charge.

A conviction of assault and battery on a police officer carries a minimum 90-day imprisonment and a $1,000 fine.

Officer Baker testified under oath that he saw Sammarco squat behind a car on private property near the intersection of Chestnut and Eliot streets at 11:25 p.m. and throw a bottle that splattered at Baker's feet.

Baker said when he apprehended Sammarco, a former prize fighter, "he threw a punch at me."

Matthews told the court that his defendent "got carried away that night" and had too much to drink.

Sammarco frequently visits Upper Falls taverns, since Needham is a dry. town, Matthews said, and noted that his client is gainfully employed as a carpenter in Needham with his brother.

MBTA needs more Green Line money

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) will ask the Urban Mass Transportation Administration, Department of Transportation, for an additional $9.2 million grant to complete the Green Line System Improvements Program.

Robert R. Kiley, chairman of the board of directors, said that inflation and escalation of construction costs since 1971 when the original grant application was filed have contributed to the need to seek additional federal aid for the program. Another contributing factor, he said, has been a major change in the scope of power improvements, also unforeseen in 1971.

The Green Line Systems Improvements Program, begun in September 1973, is designed to modernize the street car lines in preparation for the arrival of the 175 Light Rail Vehicles that will replace the overage President's Conference Committee (PCC) cars. Originally estimated to cost $38.1 million, the program is now estimated to cost $49.7 million as a result of the aforementioned increases in costs and scope.

The additional $9.2 million and local share funds, $2.4 million, will be used for the traction power system at the Riverside and Reservoir substations; traction power modifications to the Riverside Line; A.C. tunnel lighting and supplemental conductors; overhead power modifications on the Lechmere Viaduct, and a wayside radio system with fire reporting capability.

The award of a $1,394,400 contract for traction power improvements on the Riverside Line was also authorized by the board of directors of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA).

The contract will be executed with the L. K. Comstock Company, Inc., and Manzi Electrical Corporation of Lawrence, a joint venture, lowest of six bidders.

Under the contract, traction power substations will be built and equipped at both the Riverside and Reservoir Yards and a trolley wire system installed at the Riverside Yard. In addition, a temporary substation will be built and equipped at Riverside to insure the availability of adequate tractionpower or the new Light Rail Vehicles, scheduled to start arriving in January.

The traction power improvements are part of the federally-aided Green Line System Improvements Program.

Task force to monitor Human Services activities

State Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs' has announced that the Committee is moving to establish a Human Services Oversight Task Force to monitor the activities of the executive branch of human services departments.

"If we are to fulfill our constitutional responsibilities and if we are truly serious about wanting to give the taxpayers of this state their money's worth, we in the legislature must exercise an oversight function over executive agency activities. The work of this committee will complement the work of the Committee on Ways and Means," Mofenson said.

"We all want improved human services at the lowest possible cost'" Mofenson continued, "and indications are that most of the savings will come from administrative cuts and reorganization. But before we can make sensible charges, we must understand just what the circles and squares on reorganization charts really do. We have to find out specifically what the problems are and where good intentions are being strangled in administrative red tape."

Representative Mofenson and Human Services Senate Chairman Jack H. Backman said that Citizens for Economy in Government and Citizens for Participation in Political Action have indicated their eagerness to work on Human Services Oversight Task Force.

Mofenson said that he believed that a combination of activist citizens groups and current legislative staff could "pave the way without adding another financial burden to the state."

"The key to the success of any such effort is the level of cooperation we receive from the executive agencies. If they work with us, we will be in a better position to maximize the efficient delivery of needed services. If they hold back needed information, we will be losers."

Lions help purchase hospital eye equipment

Newton-Wellesley Hospital's ability to perform outpatient eye surgery has been enhanced by a $750 gift from the Newton Lions Club.

Donated for the purchase of surgical eye equipment, the gift will provide instruments that permit a greater vareity of operations on an outpatient basis, allowing the patient to return home the same day the operation is performed.

An instrument used in glaucoma surgery also will be purchased.

Presented to Dr. Ralph H. Hinckley, Newton-Wellesley's chief of ophthalmology, by Herman Aborn, member of the Newton Lions Club, the gift complements previous eye equipment contributed by the organization.

The club has provided the hospital with a cryosurgical instrument for freezing cataracts and enhancing glaucoma surgery, as well as a motorized examining chair for the eye clinic.

The Newton Lions Club also annually sponsors glaucoma and lazy eye clinics in cooperation with the hospital and the Newton Public Health Department.

Two men to serve one year for break

Two Jamaica Plain men were each sentenced to one year in prison after Judge Monte Basbas found them guilty in Newton District Court Tuesday on charges of breaking and entering in the daytime.

Sentenced were Herbert Hinton Jr., 29, of 42 Walden St., and Gregory M. Young, 27, of 974 Parker St., Jamaica Plain.

Officer Paul F. Ginnetty testified that he and Officer Harold J. Travers saw the two parked in the driveway of 564 Dedham St., Newton Centre, on May 26.

At that time the two appeared to be fixing their car, and the officers left on another call.

On their radio, they heard that two men fitting their description were wanted by the Brookline police for an attempt to break into a home there.

When other officers arrived on the scene, the two had broken into the Dedham Street house.

Judge Basbas recommended that the Young be transferred from the Billerica House of Correction to Deer Island, which would be nearer his family.

The judge also recommended that Hinton serve his sentence at the Charles Street jail where he is currently serving a sentence handed down from the Brookline court.

Charges dismissed against Goodman

Charges against a Lower Falls teenager were dismissed in Newton District Court Tuesday when the owner of the motor vehicle he allegedly tried to break into did not appear in court.

Judge Monte Basbas ruled that charges be dropped against Goodman,17, of 34 Lafayette Rd., Lower Falls, because the owner of the car who lives in Ohio did not appear in court.

Goodman was arrested on July 19 at the Holiday Inn in Lower Falls on charges of attempting to break into an automobile and possession of a burgalarious tool, but police did not witness the alleged incident.

Appraisal changes not made yet

Newton's revaluation firm will not notify homeowners of final disposition of their hearings on property appraisals until the end of August, a spokesman for Cole-Layer-Trumble said this week.

Because of the three-month extension granted Cole-Layer-Trumble to finish its work, and the intervention of vacation time, the company was unable to fulfill its commitment to have reappraisals and final decisions on property values made by July 31.

Nobody has been notified yet, the spokesman said.

Mayor Theodore Mann recently ordered the $90,000 final portion of C-L-T's revaluation fee withheld because of questions about whether the firm has compiled with its contract.

retirement, said, "This city will be forever grateful to Ed Bolduc for the work and dedication he has given over the past 30 years."

The mayor said he will name an acting street commissioner within the next two weeks.

The appointment of a permanent street commissioner will depend on the mayor's plan for reorganization of the Department of Public Works is accepted by the Board of Aldermen. The mayor plans to submit it to the Board next week.

Under the plan, the street commissioner's position would become director of the highway division of the department.

Bolduc, as street commissioner, has been responsible for the maintenance of the city's streets, parks and playgrounds.

Bolduc is a graduate of the U.S. Army Engineering Center and the Army Command and General Staff College. He is a retired lieutenant colonel, Army Corps of Engineers.

His professional affiliations include membership in the American Public Works Association, the Massachusetts Association of Highway Engineers, and the Bituminous Concrete Engineering Association.

Bolduc and his wife, Kathryn, live at 20 Star Rd., West Newton.

Of the 32 arrested for illegal swimming, 20 were residents of Newton who must have found no legal way of escaping the heat.

The arrests started shortly after 5 p.m. Saturday, with a large crowd of 13 picked up in a police van at 1:20 a.m. Sunday.

Only two out-of-town people were arrested there Sunday night, who were among those fined by District Court Judge John Eaton, visiting from Concord.

Pines bills confirm right of women to choose names

Two of State Rep. Lois G. Pines' (D-Newton) bills dealing with women's right to choice of name were recently signed into law by Gov. Michael Dukakis.

Chapter 367 of the Acts of 1975 clarifies the right of women who have chosen to retain their own names at marriage to register to vote in those names and regulates voter registration of persons whose names have changed.

Chapter 84 of the Acts of 1975 prohibits discrimination because of an individual's choice of surname. In addition, penalties can be imposed for noncompliance.

Rep. Pines said, "The voter registration law prohibits cities and towns from arbitrarily denying women the right to vote unless they adopt their husband's surname. Unfortunately, this has been a not uncommon occurrence in the past."

Expressing her concern for a woman's right to choose the name by which she wishes to be identified, Pines noted, "A married woman who wishes to be identified by her birth-given surname often meets with unfair and illegal discrimination. Although there is no statute in Massachusetts law requiring a woman to adopt her husband's name at marriage, custom encourages her to do so. Some women, particularly those who have established themselves in a profession prior to marriage, desire to retain their maiden names. They will now be able to do so without harassment from public officials and bureaucrats."

A third bill, Senate 924, would establish a simple procedure for the choice of name at marraige.

"Both Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti and former Attorney General Robert H. Quinn have asserted that women have under common law a legal right to retain their own surnames at marriage. The laws we have just passed codify the common law," noted Rep. Pines.

Representative Pines added, "Because increasing numbers of individuals are exercising their legal option to choose their own names, a procedure for name choice at marriage needs to be established. This bill would provide for the right of the parties to a marraige to adopt the present or birth-given name of either party, to retain or resume birth-given names, or to adopt a hyphenated combination. The bill also would mandate that the probate court grant a change of name to any petitioner, as long as such a change would not be against the public interest."

Senate 924 is now in the Senate, having received a favorable committee report.

peak hour volume, and there are adequate gaps in the traffic stream, then the flashing signals can be operated.

These lights can be activated, particularly in Newton where many of the signals are installed primarily for pedestrian safety.

Another serious problem the city faces, is drivers "bypassing traffic signals and going onto residential streets."

An example of this is the use of Waverly Avenue by motorists going to the turnpike. However, Waverly Avenue has been used so regularly that is it is now classified as an arterial road.

Tannozzini says the problem of the shortcut needs a "systems approach" to avoid inducing difficulties in other streets from traffic delay on arterial streets. The solution is not simply to add traffic signals.

For signals can increase traffic accidents if they are installed in unwarranted conditions. Traffic signals inherently increase rear-end collisions, but reduce right angle conflicts.

And motorists stopped in one place will find still another short cut. Although signalsplaced in a warranted situation, Tannozzini says, receives driver appreciation.

Trying to balance pedestrian safety with driver delay can be a delicate business. In addition the state mandates that a full green signal be used, to avoid having drivers jump the signal. Eventually, Tannozzini forecasts that cities will build simple overpass systems to avoid stops and conflicts.

Meanwhile this city will begin to install fully actuated signals utilizing detectors. Tannozzini says this is cheaper, safer and "as efficient as having a policeman." These signals would be used, except in certain business districts. Flashing signals could still be used in off peak hours.

After that the next step might be coordination of green lights. Right now, Tannozzini would like to see "as much green time squeezed out as possible." For he looks toward the time that fully actuated lights can be linked to a central computer.

To help pay for improvements such as this, Tannozzini says that four cents "of every gallon of gasoline goes into a Highway Trust Fund to be utilized to improve local street a safety and capacity."

Since no system is perfect, citizens have recourse. The traffic commission in Newton is the body which can make recommendations and has the power to establish trial periods. The commissioners are Edwin H. Wiest, Police Chief William F. Quinn, Fire Chief Frederick Perkins, Acting City Engineer Philip Jones, Planning Director Charles Thomas and John L. Simmons, secretary of the commission.

The traffic commission may make recommendations to the aldermanic Street Traffic Committee. Their recommendation and votes would be presented before the full board of aldermen. State approval would be needed for any regulatory changes.

Director

The Family Connection of Southwest Boston Community Services is an information exchange, referral and educational center which serves Roslindale, West Roxbury and Hyde Park. Families who need resources of any kind can call 323-0300 to get information or drop by at 4262 Washington St., Roslindale Square.

Last Sunday, July 27, The Family Connection's video crew coordinated a program of theater, singing, mime and dance at Copley Square. Young people who have been learning about camera techniques and interviewing skills in workshops under media coordinator Noel Evans interviewed people watching the performances at the Square and got the reactions of children and adults.

A video viewing of these tapes will be held tomorrow from 10 to 11 a.m. at The Family Connection's office. Children and parents are invited to watch this interesting program. Bring your friends!

A video showing of all children's plays which have been done at video workshops at Fairmont Development, The Family Connection, and High Point village will be shown for the community on Weds., August 20. Time will be announced later.

Men in southwest Boston interested in joining a men-only group should call 323-0300. This program will be open to married, single, widowed and divorced men over 21.

The Family Connection will celebrate its second anniversary today. The staff is grateful for the participation and support of the community and looks forward to continuing services here for a long time. The Family Connection is one of 12 community-based programs sponsored by Southwest Boston Community Services.

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

Maple Troubles—If the leaves of your maples or other ornamentals have tiny "pimples" or felty patches of red or yellow on them, don't be too worried about it. Many ornamentals, especially maples, get the blotches and it's due to a tiny mite that's too small to be seen by the naked eye. The patches seem to be the plant's responses to the presence and-or feeding of the mites. Actually, these growths do no harm to the leaves or trees, although they do get a lot of people stirred up.

Being a mite you'd think that Kelthane (a good mite killer) would knock this pest out, but it doesn't work on it. Sevin (an insecticide) knocks this pest out, if applied early enough. A dormant spray of lime-sulfur in early spring will also control the spindle mite or others. However, if you don't want to use chemicals, then forget about it because these blotches caused by the feeding of Eriophyid mites don't do a bit of harm to the tree.

By the way, now's a good time to look over your Japanese Yew shrubs and rhododendrons. If there are holes chewed in the leaves, it's the work of the black vineweevil. Spray the foliage and the area underneath and around the plants with chlordane or Lindane. Diazinon might be helpful. Spectracide is Diazinon, but is for homeowner use.

of seven members, five area residents, to be appointed by the mayor and two aldermen from the ward in which the community lies. The chairman of the committee will be elected by its members.

The three committees will advise the community development coordinator on potential improvement projects for the target areas.

An office for administration of the community development will be in operation by late summer or early fall, according to Planning Director Charles Thomas, who also serves as community development director.

The neighborhood advisory committees will probably be appointed this month.

How can you help them "find themselves"?

If you can help your young people feel there's a law of good governing their lives, you're giving them something to hold to.

And there is such a law It's rooted in God, divine Principle, and His love for each of His children.

Perhaps you could offer your teen-agers the opportunity to attend a Christian Science Sunday School. They can learn more about the Bible and Christ Jesus' teachings, and how to experience God's law of good. Anyone up to age 20 is welcome.

Come let us reason together

By DR. WILLIAM KNOX

The compulsion for completion

There seems to be a built-in human characteristic for completion. Draw a circle...leave it slightly open...hand the pencil to your partner...he-she will have the urge to complete the circle. I knew a man who worked nine years to get his doctor's degree. He didn't need it...he had started it...wanted it...felt compelled to complete it...and did. Some housewives are neurotic about housecleaning. They clean and clean...can't stop...just keep going...drawers... cabinets...closets...floors...and they get a good feeling...the feeling of completion.

I've seen this compulsion in action when it comes to marriage. Harry had been divorced two years. He had met a woman who was also divorced and the relationship grew. The more it grew the more he began to question the wisdom of marrying Helen.

A couple of big problems puzzled him. One was that she was a spender. Her father had given her money freely. Her first husband loved her so much that he too gave her all he could, working two jobs to keep up with the demands. Now as Harry dates Helen he follows this same pattern of taking her to the best places...costly week-ends ...bringing her expensive gifts. He knew he couldn't keep up this pace. But he also knew that a pattern had been established...one that would be difficult to break.

Harry lay awake nights in his modest apartment thinking about how he could keep up with what Helen was used to. Three men had conditioned her to feel that it made them happy to give to her beyond their means. Yet...he loved Helen. He loved to see her wear the beautiful lingerie he'd given her as they lounged together in the evenings. He loved to see the way she adroitly arranged the roses he had brought...the way she held the wine glass as she sipped the expensive wine he had supplied...loved the way she kissed him...the way she made love...how could he walk away from this?

He was struggling within himself. He couldn't stop. It was as though he was on a toboggan, sliding faster and faster down the hill...unable to stop...yet knowing he would hit the ravine at the bottom. Harry had to complete this relationship...he had to marry Helen...even though disaster resulted.

Harry married Helen. The marriage lasted two years. Harry was financially broken...emotionally shaken ...no longer loving Helen...at last she left him.

As much as we respect the person who can complete what he-she starts, the compulsion can have its destructive elements. There's no substitute for reason.

Summerthing's "Jamboree" at the Zoo

Jamboree's activities will include a print shop, plant place, the clay kingdom, fibre-play, painter's palette, theatre forms, and faces, games, and nature's things. This season two new arts-learning areas have joined the jamboree, the music-makers and the mixed-media corner, especially for high school students.

The Franklin Park Zoo is free and so is "Jamboree." Refreshment stands, rest areas, picnic areas and free parking are available for all. The Children's Zoo is located in the Franklin Park Zoo too and is open from 10-5 evejryday. Admission is 75c for adults and 25c for kids. Know Your Onions

Onion may hold the distinction of being the only vegetable capable of making anyone cry at any time despite their mood. But there are a few other onion "personality traits" grandma may have never revealed.

For instance, did you know that tin objects can be polished to a bright sparkle by rubbing with a raw onion? Or that brass ornaments will glow when polished with a soft cloth dipped in the juice of a boiled onion?

Whether or not you try these tips, there are some important onion facts you should know: Pungency of flavor is not entirely related to variety; growing locations and soils make the difference. Dry storage is desirable since humidity encourages root growth and decay. Don't store onions near potatoes. The onions will absorb moisture from the potatoes. Nutrition facts: One raw onion 2½" in diameter provides 50 calories, and acts as a good detergent food for dental health. One cup of cooked onions equals approximately one-fourth of the daily recommended allowance of Vitamin C.

Back-yard frontier

By POLLY BRADLEY
Mass. Audubon Society

Back when I grew up on the prairie, I thought it was borning scenery. However, after years of living in New England, I found that when I drove home this summer the prairie was suddenly strange and fascinating.

I'd flown home before, but had never driven. It's a long drive...but every hour I drove farther than my pioneer ancestors had gone in a day when they went West from Massachusetts to the prairie country just after the Civil War.

I was looking forward to hitting the three line. East of this line...which is really a zone some twenty to thirty miles wide...if the land is left alone, it reverts to trees. West, it reverts to grass except in the river bottoms and up and down the little valleys in damp, protected spots between the rolling hills. Even farther West, it gets flatter and drier and more treeless until eventually the plains hit the Rockies.

By the time I reached Manhattan, Kansas, the land was soft, rolling grassland in every direction except in the town where trees had been planted and nurtured, and in the valleys where enough water collected for trees to grow naturally.

There I visited my friends Gwen and Don, who own a quarter section...160 acres—in the tall grass prairie of the Flint Hills in Kansas.

Our three children tromped over the hills with their three children looking for the cows and horses, who had found a remote corner to hide in.

While searching, they found chunks of flint with chips knocked out, which we imagined were leftover relics of the Indians who once came her to get flint for arrowheads. The children chipped rocks, delighted with the sharp potential arrowheads that flaked neatly out of the flint.

I talked to Gwen and Don about the prairie and the range. Good range land isn't natural prairie...almost none of that exists any more, except old neglected cemeteries which were never put to the plow. There are proposals for a Tall Grass Prairie National Park to allow at least one large prairie area to revert to its natural state.

Good range land is managed to keep most of the weeds out of the grass, and the grass doesn't grow tall because it's eaten by the cattle.

Overgrazing not only causes erosion but makes the weeds grow more easily, and a wise rancher doesn't put too many cattle on too little land.

At Kansas State University, where Don teaches, there are experimental areas where the range is managed by various different methods, and the range seems to do best for growing cattle when it is burned periodically. Some experts think the prairie may have burned frequently in Indian days, from fires set either by the Indians or by lightning, keeping trees from growing.

After I left Gwen and Don's, I looked at the range land with new eyes. The good ranchers' fields were obvious, not overgrazed, not weedy, but with soft waves of grass. Just on the other side of the fence, there might be numerous weeds and clumps of last year's dead grass.

Gwen and Don also pointed out something I'd never noticed before: the stone fences of the prairies. They aren't the typical stone walls of New England, but tall fence posts the shape of a railroad tie, carved out of limestone or sandstone and linked together with barbed wire. Here in the prairie, trees were scarce and wood available...so now stone fence posts remind Kansans and Oklahomans of their pioneer heritage, just as New England's stone fences remind us of our forefathers who cleared the wilderness.

BRUCKNER FESTIVAL

LINS, Austria (UPI) — Karl Bohm will conduct the Vienna Philharmonic Orchestra in the opening concert of the Linz Bruckner Festival Sept. 6. The Cleveland Orchestra, led by Lorin Maazel, and the Munich Philharmonic will be among the guest groups performing later.

REX WILLIAMSON

LONDON (UPI) — Nicol Williamson will return to Broadway for the first time in five years to play the role of King Henry VIII in the new Richard Rodgers-Sheldon Harnick musical "Rex," which is scheduled to go into rehearsal next January.

Williamson last appeared on Broadway in 1969 with a modern dress interpretation of "Hamlet."

Pendleton to play in "country clothes"

"Rich golden colors of a Western sunset . . . grays with the warmth of pewter . . . feminine, flattering, affordable sportswear . . ." was the introduction by Pat McKevitt, Fashion Coordinator for Pendleton Woolen Mills as the tailored collection was previewed during the recent American Designer Showings for fall . . .

Long known for their sensibly priced quality sportswear, Pendleton refers to these fashions as "Country Clothes" — we predict they will be worn to the office, afternoon bridge game as well as evening PTA meeting. Clothes should "feel right" as well as be in tune with today's look, and these fashions combine the two in colors that will brighten up the most somber of fall days.

Muted neutrals abound with new nutmeg and rust colors for contrast . . . deep natural blue greens, the rich, winey tones of bordeaux, unabashed bright reds and mellow persimmons surrounded by warm golden wheat and camel. A palate of fall colors that will challenge the foliage.

Leading off in the showing, in pewter donegal tweed, was an almost full circle cape, with matching big skirt and black funnel neck pullover. This is the outfit that will save you when the weather is foul and you've not been able to visit your hairdresser. (See photo). It's also the ideal costume while attending football games — the cape is nifty over matching or contrasting black trousers.

Styles in dark and light pewter grey included a loose rool sleeve topper with mandarin collar and tie belt. Pewter was also shown in fine man-tailored glen in a classic blazer and matching skirt. In sweater knits, a big, bulky tweed cardigan with a swingy four-gore pewter flannel skirt.

Glen plaid in the nutmeg colors, the big top with a high mandarin collar, top side pockets, flippy matching nutmeg glen plaid bias skirt worn with a rust rib turtleneck.

Bordeaux Pendleknit Lindbergh jacket in pure double knit wool, so perfect for traveling, worn with a matching mid-length skirt and zephyr rib turtle-neck. Worn with the turtleneck, and filling the neckline, ropes and ropes of pearls.

In a blaze of Independence, a red melton big top over happy tartan red pants and a black funnel neck pullover — a Saturday afternoon walk-in-the-park outfit.

Pendleton's charming blonde Pat McKevitt doing the commentary, she explained that skirts were being offered in a wide variety of styling from flippy bias cuts to the longer button-fronts — a definite challenge to pants this coming fall season.

"Tartans," said Pat, "are Pendleton's forte and no collection would be complete without them. With Paris now touting authentic clan plaids, we have our own fall favorites. Leading off is the bold tartan red in a mandarin collar melton big top, with turtleneck and pant to color match.

"We also boast the bright Matheson red tartan as well as the predominantly dark green MacFarland Hunting tartan which we show in a long cape and matching bias skirt. The darkest, most dramatic tartan, Black Watch, is offered in an easy shirt topper with matching contour pant."

For the more sophisticated, there are Knockabouts. Proud of its origins in the beautiful Pendleton Indian blankets, the firm has adapted Indian designs in colorful fashions. A striking Navajo stripe long skirt is dressed up with a softly feminine Persimmon shade belted over-blouse. There is also the buckskin plaid blanket cloth stag jacket with its own long skirt to be worn with a midnight zephyr rib turtleneck.

"Here's a look I love," said Pat, "this red clay melton hooded country coat is worn comfortably over a tweed hooded pullover with kangaroo pouch pockets — over a red clay rib turtleneck and matching pants."

Always a color favorite, camel, in supple flannel and deep-surfaced fleece were shown in a roomy fleece steamer coat and flowing cape. Camel joined navy, with a warm splash of concord grape in separate shirt jac and plaid swing skirt. Camel and navy also worked beautifully in coutre-look patchwork jacket and dirndl skirt.

Natural earth tones in a loose mushroom flannel smocked jacket, belted or left loose, worn with a mushroom flannel four gore skirt topped with a light chocolate sleeveless scoop faggoted pullover.

In a holiday mood, Pendleton offered a bright red Chinese collar skirtdress as well as a fabulous sky blue ultra crepe dress, the shirtdress with slightly widened tie belt and a Norfolk jacket with an eight-gore swing skirt.

The entire showing was classically elegant, sportswear as it ought to be in the kind of separates American women have been enjoying for many years now because they respect the wearability and good taste that has been the Pendleton hallmark.

Information please

This is the reader's column. If you have a question or a recipe to share with other readers, please write to: Information Please, Transcript Newspapers, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Ma. 02026.

Question. A neighbor asked me to drop you a line inquiring about the recipe for making a cherry liquor using Bing cherries. I hope to get the recipe before the cherry season is over. Thank you for your help.

Mrs. Libbie Schultz, Milton

Answer: Last time I shopped for produce, the cherries were still reasonably good—here's hoping there are still firm, ruby Bing cherries available. The recipe is an easy one—the rock candy can be purchased at most candy stores. I bought mine in Waldman's Candy Shop on Harvard Street, Brookline. The recipe comes from a gourmet cook, Mrs. Reba Gordon—our thanks to her for:

REBA GORDON'S BING CHERRY LIQUOR
1 pound Bing cherries
1 pound rock candy
1 quart vodka

In large sterilized jar, place washed cherries (do not pit or remove stems) rock candy and vodka. Cover jar and place in a cupboard. After 2 or 3 days, shake jar gently. Your cordial will be ready. (Those who get "tipsy" easily chould approach this cherry recipe exercising supreme caution.)

Question: Have you ever heard of a recipe where the ingredients for marinating chicken included plum jelly? I know this sounds unusual, but I recall seeing such a recipe and cutting out the recipe but cannot find it, and so I would greatly appreciate your help. Since I do not have a back yard or a barbecue apparatus of any kind, please do not print that type of recipe.

Mrs. S.P., Roslindale

Answer: Here's a recipe and it is a real "winner" taking first place in the 1973 Delmarva Chicken Cooking Contest. Though the recipe is given for oven baking, it can be prepared on an outside grill for readers who are interested.

FOUR SEASONS CHICKEN
2 broiler-fryer chickens, quartered
1 jar (10 oz.) damson plum jelly
one-third cup soy sauce
one-third cup dark corn syrup
¼ cup corn oil
2 teaspoons ground ginger
2 teaspoons monosodium glutamate one-third cup onion, chopped one-third cup green pepper, chopped
2 cloves garlic, minced

Mix together in a saucepan all ingredients except chicken; heat thoroughly. Do not boil. Place chicken in a shallow container and pour marinade over chicken. Cover with aluminum foil and marinate in refrigerator 1-½ to 2 hours or overnight. Remove chicken and place on rack in foil lined baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees approximately 1 hour, turning and basting with remaining marinade. Serves 4

Readers who share their recipes are "super" nice!! Our thanks to the reader who signs her letter "Just Another Cook" for her mouth-watering dessert Chocolate Sundae Pudding.

CHOCOLATE SUNDAE PUDDING
1 cup regular all purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa two-thirds cup sugar
½ cup milk
½ cup chopped walnuts
2 tablespoons melted butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla
Topping (recipe follows)
1 cup boiling water
Whipping cream

Sift flour, measure and sift again with baking powder, salt, cocoa and sugar into a mixing bowl. Add the milk, nuts, butter, and vanilla. Blend well and pour the mixture into a greased 9-inch square baking pan. Spread Topping evenly over the first mixture. Pour 1 cup boiling water over all. Do not stir. Bake in 350 degree oven for 50 minutes to 1 hour or until slightly crusty on top and firm. A pudding will form on top with a fudge sauce layer below. Serve hot with plain or whipped cream—or, if desired, with vanilla ice cream. Serves 6

Topping: Combine ¼ cup granulated sugar, ½ cup brown sugar, 3 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa, ¼ teaspoon salt and 1 teaspoon vanilla.

Question: I've read for years about mint julep drinks which are supposed to be right out of the Scarlet O'Hara era and since I've had mint growing in my back yard for years and never used it for anything, I thought I would like to experiment and learn how to prepare a famous southern drink. Thanks for any assistance you can give me.

Mr. T.K.W., Westwood

Answer: It seems that Southern people have many variations of this cool, refreshing summertime drink. Here's one for you to try:

1. Use very tall, 14 or 16 oz. containers, either glass or silver. Silver mugs frost better than glass and mugs with handles are best of all because they keep warm hands from coming in contact with the outer surface of the container, thus melting the frost. If glasses are used, the thinner the glass, the better.

2. Use only fresh young mint leaves.
3. Use shaved or finely crushed ice.

For each drink desired, muddle (bruise) 4 or 5 fresh mint leaves, ½ teaspoon superfine sugar and 1 tablespoon of water in a tall glass or tankard. Be careful to bruise the mint gently; don't crush the leaves, for this releases the bitter inner juices. Fill your julep glass or silver tankard with crushed ice. (For a really professional-looking julep, wet your containers in advance and prechill in the refrigerator or freezer for at least ½ hour before serving.) Add 2 ounces of bourbon. Do not stir. Garnish with sprigs of mint and serve with straws.

Food and Fashion

by Ruth Lenson

Across the kitchen counter

"All I want for August are my two front teeth" . . . is a song many youngsters six or seven years of age will be singing if fate has decreed that they be "toothless" at this time of the year; but surely, through careful maneuvering, they will manage to get their fill of the most enjoyable of all vegetables . . . golden sweet corn.

For best eating, look for fresh, succulent husks with good green color. Silk-ends should be free from decay or worm injury, and stem ends should not look too discolored or dried. Select ears that are well covered with plump, not too mature kernels. If you purchase corn at the super market, look for corn displayed in a refrigerated case, or with some means of cooling. Keeping corn cool is one of the most important keys to the delicious flavor we all enjoy.

This sweet flavor of corn is due to the sugar content in the kernels. This is at its peak when the corn is picked. If the corn is not cooled quickly and kept cool, the sugar rapidly turns to starch and the sweet flavor is lost. Many growers today hydrocool the corn — this method of cooling involves the spraying of the ears with ice water quite soon after being picked. Refrigerate your corn promptly and plan to use it that day or the next before the favor fades.

Thinking of freezing corn? Husk, silk, trim, wash and sort ears according to size. Heat in boiling water; small ears, 5 minutes; larger ears, 7 min. Cool in ice water and drain. Package in moisture-vapor proof containers and freeze immediately.

The classic way to enjoy corn is on the cob, chomping as you go up and down the rows of tender, sweet kernels. But there are also other delicious ways to enjoy fresh corn. Following are some new methods of corn-cooking:

Cooking corn on the cob: Drop the husked, de-silked ears in boiling water which has been salted; allow water to return to a boil and cook (according to size) only about 4 to 10 minutes.

FRESH CORN VINAIGRETTE
8 ears of fresh corn
½ cup salad oil
¼ cup cider vinegar
1½ teaspoons fresh lemon juice
3 teaspoons chopped fresh parsley
2 teaspoons salt
1 teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon dried leaf basil
¼ teaspoon cayenne
2 large tomatoes, peeled and chopped
½ cup chopped fresh green pepper
½ cup chopped scallions

Husk corn and remove silks. Fill a large kettle half full with water. Place over high heat; bring to a boil. Add corn, cover and return to a boil. Remove from heat and let stand for 5 minutes. Drain and cool. In large bowl mix oil, vinegar, lemon juice, parsley, salt, sugar, basil, and cayenne. Cut corn off cob and add to bowl with tomatoes, green pepper and scallions. Mix well, cover and chill several hours. Serve in bowl lined with salad greens. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Zippy corn vinaigrette serves as a relish or salad at barbecues and other summer food-fests.

FRESH CORN FRITTATA
4 ears of fresh corn
4 slices bacon
2 tablespoons chopped fresh onion
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon sugar
⅛ teaspoon pepper
¼ teaspoon dried leaf thyme
¼ cup grated Parmesan cheese
4 eggs
3 tablespoons water

Husk corn, remove silks, wash, and cut kernels off cob. In large skillet cook bacon until lightly browned, remove and drain. Pour off all but 1 tablespoon bacon fat. Add onion and corn to skillet and cook until tender, about 5 minutes. Add salt, sugar, pepper, thyme and Parmesan. In small bowl beat eggs and water until well mixed. Pour all at once into skillet; stir to mix well. Cook without stirring over medium heat for 3 to 5 minutes, until set. Place briefly under broiler to brown top. Cut into wedges to serve. Makes 4 servings.

FRESH CORN PANCAKES
½ cup unsifted all purpose flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
1¼ teaspoons salt
1 tablespoon sugar
¼ teaspoon pepper
2 eggs, separated
1½ cups fresh corn cut off cob
¾ cup milk
3 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted

Mix flour with baking powder, salt, sugar, and pepper in a mixing bowl. Beat egg yolks and mix with corn and milk. Stir into dry ingredients along with melted butter. Beat egg whites until they stand in soft peaks and fold into the butter. Drop from a tablespoon onto a hot greased griddle. Cook until golden brown, turning once. Makes 3 dozen 2½ inch pancakes.

CORN-CORN MUFFINS
3 ears fresh corn
two-thirds cup milk
2 tablespoons instant minced onion
1 pkg. (12 oz.) corn muffin mix
1 egg, lightly beaten
Dash of pepper

Cut corn kernels off cobs (makes about 1½ cups); set aside. Mix milk with minced onion and let stand for 10 minutes to soften. Add to muffin mix along with egg and pepper and mix only until mixture is moistened. Stir in reserved corn kernels; spoon into greased muffin tins. Bake in a preheated hot oven, 400 degrees, for 25 minutes or until nicely browned. Yield: 12 muffins.

BROILED FRESH CORN-ON-THE-COB
6 ears fresh corn
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
¼ teaspoon salt
one-sixteenth teaspoon ground black pepper
½ teaspoon lemon juice

Remove husks and silks from corn. In a small saucepan melt butter; add salt, black pepper and lemon juice. Brush over corn. Place under broiler and broil until golden brown, turning the ears as they brown. Yield: 6 portions.

The bride's dress and the attendants dresses were all made by Mrs. Priscilla DiLuzio. The flowers were from the gardens of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Boud of Watertown.

Pauline Trigere is showing a honey of a women's wear collection for fall and winter. She favors colors and combinations such as honey wood, honey bear, honey and brown and honey and black. Trigere also likes clothes in violet, lilac and deep purple.

Most people see you in profile, which is a good thought to keep in mind when you choose a hairstyle, makeup and clothing. When you apply makeup, check both right and left profiles in a mirror to make sure that foundation and blush are blended well into your hairline, and that eyeliner and shadow do not extend too far.

Bright sunlight calls for bright, sunny makeup in eye shadow, liner and lipstick.

The fall jewelry collection at the American Indian Arts Center in New York City includes designs by Navajo Don Johnson, working with heavy stipled silver encrusted with coral or turquoise and often lined on the reverse with rows of precious ores.

A new skirt look for fall has the look of French sailor's trousers, with bold vertical zippers making a front panel from waist to hips.

Choose sunglasses for usefulness as well as beauty. The best have green or gray lenses dark enough to filter out at least 70 per cent of the light and reduce invisible violet and infrared rays.

The most elegant apron around has to be a mink pinafore, new from Saga of Scandinavia.

New slips are shaped like skirt and dress silhouettes, flared, slim or streamlined. One new design is made of a knit blend of nylon and spandex to hug the body.

Family health worker course offered at NU

Applications are now being accepted for a new one-year certification program, the "Family Health Worker Program," offered by Northeastern University's College of Pharmacy and Allied Health Professions.

The program is disigned to train family health workers by offering a university-based program of studies carrying college credit and leading to a Certificate of Completion.

The family health worker is a professional who provides primary health-care service with the supervision of a nurse, social worker, physician or other socialist or therapist. He may work in a private office, a neighborhood health center, outpatient department, home-health-care agency or other agencies.

Interviewing, assisting during clinical examinations, health-screening procedures, care of equipment, personal health care and basic rehabilitation procedures are some of the skills in which a family health worker is trained.

Tuition is fully covered by a grant from the Department of Health, Education and Welfare. Students are responsible only for costs relating to transportation, meals, books and insurance. Classes will be scheduled so that travel time and costs will be kept to a minimum.

Applications must be submitted by Aug. 15. Notification of acceptance will be given by Aug. 25 and classes will begin Sept. 29. All applicants must have a high school diploma or GED and not n re than one year post-high school education. Candidates should submit a copy of their high school record and two letters of reference.

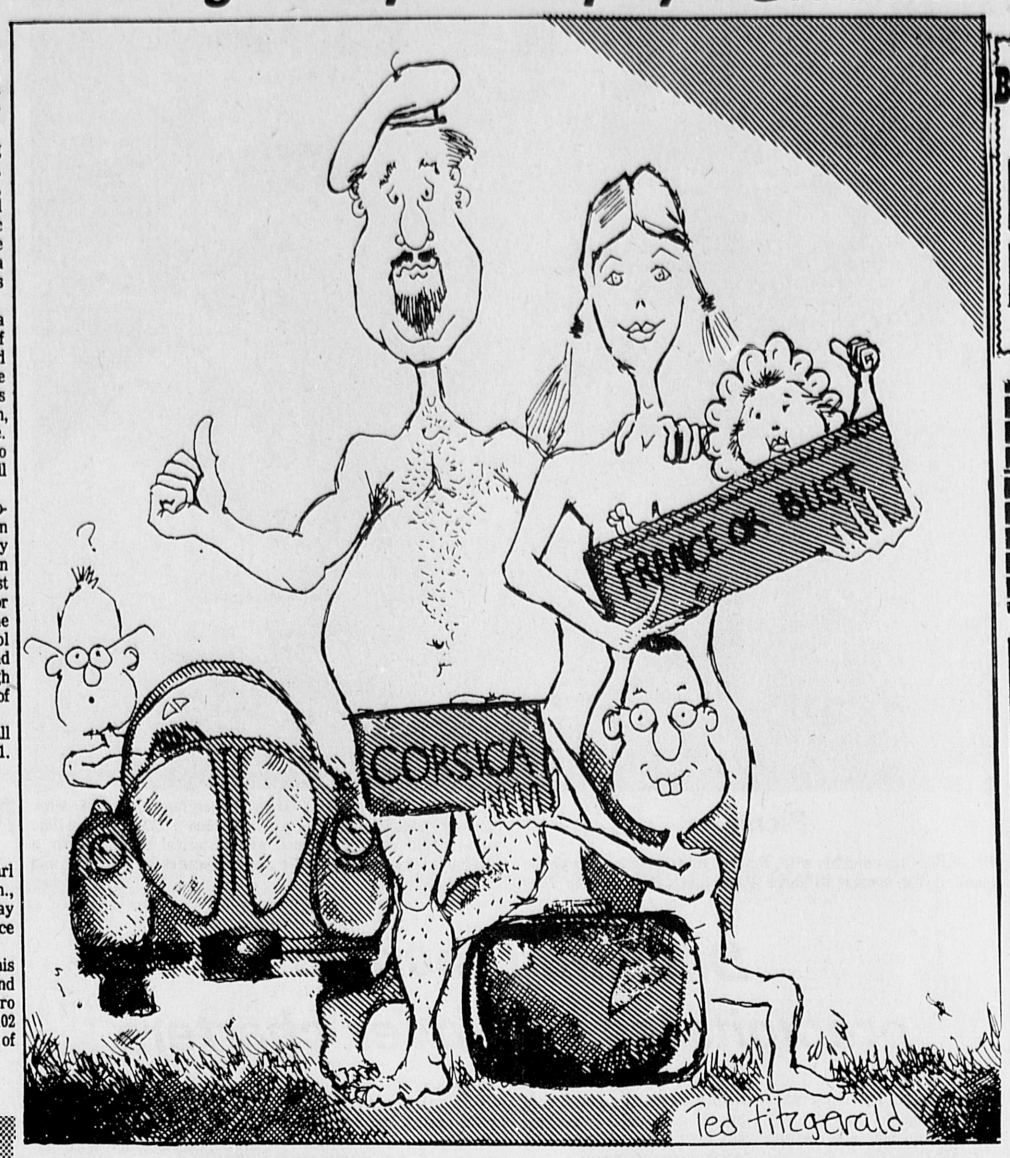

For further information, call Mrs. Judith Palais at 437-3321.

Latest global philosophy: "Grin and bare it!"

By JACQUES CLAFIN

BRUSSELS (UPI) — Unclad bodies of all dimensions and nationalities are making organized nudist travel the fastest growing European vacation pastime.

The bulk of the nudist pack is flocking to Yugoslavia, that land of not-so-orthodox communism, where 24 nudist colonies have been set up over the past decade. West Germany and France, especially the French island of Corsica, also are favorite nudist haunts.

Organized nudist travel is on the upswing at a time when inflation is keeping the tourist industry in the doldrums. A tour operator in the Netherlands says nude tours are up 20 to 30 per cent this year.

Gone are the days when naked hippies wading in the water represented the extent of nudism beyond the portals of walled-in nudist colonies.

The French Naturist Federation says, for example, that more than half its 70,000 adherents are in management and the liberal professions. Entire families make up 80 per cent of French nudists.

West Germans account for more than half the foreigners in Europe's biggest nudist center at Montalivet-les-Bains on the French Atlantic coast. Next are Scandinavians, Dutch, British and a small, but increasing, number of Americans.

The popularity of nudism among Germans is hardly novel. Germany has a centuryold history of organized nudism, and the Allensbach Demoscopic Institute reports that between six million and eight million Germans spend their summer holidays in the nude.

"Today people have fewer hang-ups," says a spokesman for Stockholm's Nature Friends, a 350-strong nudist group with its own island in the Stockholm archipelago. "They want to be more natural instead of wearing expensive clothes to impress people."

Adds Marcel Godard, an official of the French Naturist Federation: "Naturism in France is becoming explosively popular. We have an increase in numbers of 15-20 per cent every year."

In a nudist camp, says Godard, "A company director looks exactly like a worker. I have known people who are friends for years at a camp and only find out much later that one is a director of a factory and the other only works there."

The Yugoslav Tourist Association says 110,000 foreign nudists are expected this year — 10 per cent more than last year — and they're good for $25 million.

Yugoslavia seeks to attract nudists with colorful brochures beckoning "those who seek a return to nature, to a primitive Biblical state."

The traveling nudist in Europe can spend the summer in thatched huts, trailer parks, or communities boasting 400-room plush hotels.

Singles are generally barred from organized tours, and etiquette in nudist hotel communities calls for clothing at the table and no picture-taking without the subject's okay.

A two-week package at a nudist hotel in Yugoslavia, including the round trip by air from, say, Brussels, costs about $318 per person.

At Sylt, a West German island in the North Sea, the only fenced-in beaches are reserved for dog owners. Twothirds of the bathers on Sylt are nudists.

In the Netherlands, four North Sea beaches are being earmarked for nudists, following a court victory by the Dutch Federation of Naturists. One Dutch newspaper forsees the day when small corners of beaches will have to be staked out for the non-nude.

But nudism, like suffrage and free speech, is not universal. In the Middle East, for example, it hasn't got a chance, due to strict Moslem practices in the Arab world and orthodox Jewish influence in Israel.

In Spain, tourists who defy the ban on nude swimming face $100 fines and expulsion.

In Greece the fine is $140. But the Aegean island of Naxos has become the country's unofficial nudist center, and authorities there look the other way.

In Italy, nude beaches are a rarity. In Switzerland and Belgian all nudist colonies are private.

In the Soviet Union a few patches of beach on the Baltic and the Black Sea are reserved for nude bathing.

In England some 80 naturist organizations have access to about 20 unofficial nudist beaches. A nudist club has converted one of Dwight Eisenhower's wartime headquarters in Devon into Britain's first naturist hotel.

But the future of English nudism is bleak. The weather is bad, skinflick books presented as naturist magazines have given nudists a bad name and, some say, nude swimming spoils the fishing.

Recently, the local fishing club at Haverhill appealed to the East Anglican water board to stop women from swimming nude in a nearby lake.

"We are furious about this," the fishing club said. "It spoils our angling. We must put a stop to it before it becomes permanent."

Jellyfish invade N.E. beaches; but they are not dangerous

Warm weather and blue skies are luring thousands of vacationing New Englanders to the beaches this summer. Just about as many vacationers have stayed on the beach never going near the water once they saw the millions of undulating transparent blobs drifting aimlessly in toward the shore.

According to New England Aquarium Curator Louis Garibaldi, the arrival of these blobs - jellyfish or Aurelia as they are technically known is seasonal. They have been seen however, in greater numbers this year because of the warm weather. During calm weather they rise to the surface of the water.

Entirely dependent upon tide and wind for mobility, only a very slight onshore wind will push jellyfish - with bodies 98 percent water - into shore.

"Aurelia aren't dangerous," said Garibaldi, "they resemble Frisbees with a four-leaf clover marked in white, and half-inch tentacles."

Jellyfish of other species, such as Portuguese man-of-war, distinguishable by its blue inflated bag, are dangerous because its tentacles are barbed and connected to poisonous glands.

"Jellyfish of the poisonous variety are not usually found past the southern shore of Cape Cod," said Garibaldi. "However, they may drift farther north." One of the Lion's Mane species, normally found in Arctic waters and considered poisonous was recently picked up by Aquarium staff at Central Wharf. It measured about 12 inches in diameter.

If a bather is stung by a jellyfish, a good antidote is found close at hand, hot dry sand. Hot sand works as an abrasive and helps break down foreign protein.

Garibaldi noted that by September the current infestation of jellyfish on our beaches will be over. Left unsaid, of course, is the fact that by that time most vacations will be over too.

Picnic

Dr. Walter Clark and his wife, Ruth, of Newton, enjoyed a picnic lunch at the popular Odiorne Point State Park on the New Hampshire coastline. Dr. Clark's brother,James, and his wife, Marjory, joined them. The park includes a 137-acre coastline property for natural science and historical studies with a carefully laid out system of paths to features of scientific and historic interest.

Two jazz pianists at Harvard's Sanders Theatre on August 8

Jazz pianists John Lewis and Marian McPartland, performing together for the first time, offer "Glories of the Jazz Piano" at Harvard's Sanders Theater on Friday, August 8 at 8 p.m. as part of the MUSIC 200! Bicentennial concert series.

Lewis is known best as the leader of the Modern Jazz Quartet, which retired in 1974. The quartet, which became the major force in "third stream music," combining jazz and classical styles, played together longer than any jazz group in history—twenty-two years. Lewis also played with Dizzy Gillespie, Lester Young, Charlie Parker, and Miles Davis, and appeared as Ella Fitzgerald's accompanist. A visiting artist in jazz at Harvard this summer, Lewis' teaching career has included work at the Manhattan School of Music, the Lenox School of Music, and the City College of New York.

Miss McPartland, whose career in jazz music has been unimpeded by her having "three strikes against her," (being English, white, and a woman) began her solo concert tours after playing with Benny Goodman, Duke Ellington, Dave Brubeck, Billie Holliday, and the McPartland Quintet. This will be her third Harvard concert, following successful performances at Sanders last summer and at the Loeb Drama Center in January.

"Glories of the Jazz Piano" will feature solo programs by each pianist topped by a series of jazz duets, improvisations, and reflections of the performers' contrasting styles. Tickets for the concert, at $4.00 and $3.00, are available through the Holyoke Center Ticket Office, 495-2663. McPartland and Lewis are presenting the next to last evening in the MUSIC 200! series, with singer Mabel Mercer offering the final concert on August 15.

Museum of Science New admission rates

With continuing inflationary trends and increasing financial burdens on nonprofit institutions, officials at Boston's Museum of Science have found it necessary to reassess its admission fees.

In an effort to minimize any increase, the Museum is maintaining its adult admission at the current rate, but is raising its children's admission by twenty-five cents. The new fees parallel those charged by other museums and cultural institutions in the Greater Boston area.

The complete rate schedule is as follows:

$2.50 adults (17 through 64).

$1.50 children (5 through 16); and seniors (65 and over), students, and active duty military with IDs.

Free, members and children under 5.

Reduced rates, $1.50 and $1.00, Monday through Thursday, 2 to 5 p.m., Sept. through Mar., exclusing school vacations and holidays.

Planetarium programs 50c above Museum admission. Children under 5 not admitted.

Woman's view

Let's hear it for career women

NEW YORK (UPI) — Consider the career woman and advancement. Like the tortoise, she gets ahead only by sticking her neck out.

The loman who makes it in the still male-dominated executive suite does it by taking risks.

Who says so? Margaret V. Higginson, who's up there, and Thomas L. Quick, who's equally successful and whose boss is a woman. The two have combined their experiences of climbing the corporate ladder —plus research on how other women have done it —into a nononsense book titled, "The Ambitious Woman's Guide to a Successful Career". It will be published in early September by the American Management Associations' book division.

To be "upwardly mobile" (their phrase), a woman needs ambition, motivation, education and experience, they say.

Then there's that added quality of daring which must overcome the conditioning received in their early years. Usual traits of this conditioning are passivity, dependency, diffidence, suomissiveness, docility, inferiority and noncompetitiveness.

But the motivated, aggressive woman stifles her qualms about how well she will handle more responsibility, unusual tasks, a chance to speak before a group inside or outside the company —and she takes on the job.

If she is given an opportunity to take a job never before held by a woman, she grabs it, even though she realizes she has only a 50-50 chance of succeeding.

If she has too little responsibility or salary in her present job, she directly or indirectly asks her boss for more. If she is turned down, she persists.

When she is in a job she does well and enjoys, but which offers no possibilities for promotion, she leaves it for a more promising job.

If she finds she is being consistently shot down, campaigned against, or harassed by someone in her department or company, she takes measures to change the situation.

"Don't for a minute assume that an ambitious woman always shows her claws," say Higginson and Quick. "She may not be an outspoken, conspicuous superwoman; she may camouflage her daring under a pleasant 'feminine' exterior—if she can mamage it."

In the ambitious woman's favor are candor, high self-esteem, high energy level, competitiveness, a healthy attitude about being a female, and ease in relating to men.

Some obstacles the authors found were women's lack of specific career goals, failure to channel resentment over discrimination into a positive direction and not letting it interfere with performannce, and failure to resolve sex role conflicts.

In that last area, Mrs. Higginson in an interview talked of her own career-home setup. "I'm married to a man who's good for a working woman," she said. "He wouldn't say, 'Dear, the rug needs vacuuming.' He would simply go get the vacuum cleaner.

"I think more and more couples are sharing, often exchanging, roles."

Mrs. Higginson is an editor at the Research Institute of America, Inc., a private business research firm. Previously, she was research director for the American Management Associations and a manager in a consulting firm.

Her husband Bill moved upward, through sales for an airlines and the American Aasociation of Advertising Agencies, to vice presidency of a food company.

Quick is managing editor at Research Institute, where he helped to launch two bi-weekly publications. His boss is Barbara Whitmore, an executive director at the institute.

Both agree that the barriers against women in the top echelon of management are fewer —"But I wouldn't say they're crumbling," said Quick. "Rather, they're being chipped away."

The state of Illinois once attempted to make license plates from a compressed soybean paper product. The experiment had to be dropped because livestock ate the plates from cars parked in farming areas.

The underground workings in the Cripple Creek mining district of Colorado cover about 1,600 miles in length.

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Cancer of the uterus is the most common form of the disease found in Colombian women, the Health Ministry says.

Some 13,000 women between the ages of 25 and 50 die of cancer in Colombia annually.

The Health Ministry has opened a series of free detection clinics in various Colombian cities.

Declining tourism precipitates war over charters

TEL AVIV (UPI) — Those five stars on the skyscraper hotels along Tel Aviv's costly new beachfront are getting dimmer these days.

Tourism to Israel has dropped 22 per cent since the peak year of 1972, scaling down the intake of foreign currency needed to finance defense expenditures and to keep the economy healthy.

The financial problems besetting the tourism industry have precipitated an all-out war between two government ministries, El Al Israel Airlines and the hotel association. The umpire is none other than the cabinet itself, which has referred the matter to committee.

The Tourism Ministry is siding with the hotelmen in attempts to promote the one virtually unused method for attracting more tourists to Israel — charter flights. El Al, backed by the Transport Ministry, argues it will go broke if charters start landing in big numbers.

Tourism officials accuse El Al of hurting the national economy to keep the airline profitable.

Besides the worldwide recession that has kept international tourism down, the plight of the 300 hoteliers here has been exacerbated by the increase in the number of hotel rooms in the country in recent years.

"We are going through a severe crisis right now," said the spokesman for the hotel association, Ya'acov Avi-Natan.

The new rooms were planned during the boom years preceding the 1973 October war, when a 15 per cent annual growth in tourism was projected. Only within the past year have they begun opening their doors.

There were 17,900 hotel rooms in 1972 and 20,350 by the end of 1974, ranging from the Hilton, which faces a polluted stretch of the Mediterranean, to Hagoshrim, a kibbutz with guest houses and a swimming pool in the far northern hilly region near Lebanon.

By the end of this year there will be 20,700 rooms, Avi-Natan said.

The occupancy rate this year averages 40 per cent, and for the peak summer months, 50 to 55 per cent.

The number of tourists dropped from 728,000 in 1972 — the record year — to 625,000 last year, when visitors spent $250 million, also a record.

The forecast for this year is 560,000 tourists, Avi-Natan said.

Undoubtedly a contributing factor in the drop in tourism have been Arab guerrilla arracks inside Israel.

Tourism officials don't like to talk about it, showing a reluctance akin to advertising the presence of sharks off the coast of a resort town.

"The security factor is one big problem," one tourism official said. "The terrorists are very open about hitting us and hitting tourists who want to come here."

So with this bad news in hand the hoteliers are demanding a change in government policy to permit more charter flights to Israel.

Chiefly, they are eyeing the lucrative market in the United States, with its five million Jews. Surprisingly only 10 per cent of American Jews have visited Israel since its founding in 1948, Avi-Natan said.

A round trip group fare ticket from New York to Tel Aviv via El Al costs $770, though the airline's spokesman, Arnold Sherman, said the lowest possible fare is $680.

Tourism Ministry spokesman Michael Gidron said a charter flight from New York would cost only $440.

El Al, restricted by the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board to New York's JFK International Airport for landing rights in the United States, argues that if U.S. charter flights went into operation it would cost the airline $16.3 million in losses next year.

El Al has been fighting with the CAB for 10 years to get permits to land in other American cities. If it did, Sherman said, El Al would like to institute a "no frills" flight that would decrease the cost of coming to Israel.

Some charters have been flying to Israel since 1968. There are unrestricted flights from Scandinavia and controlled charters from Europe that are permitted to carry only pilgrims and students. They don't add much to the tourism total and Sherman said the charters "have proven to be bust."

Both Gidron and Avi-Natan disagree.

"What we would like to see is charters from places where El Al does not operate," Gidron said, indicating it would involve all major American cities but New York.

"There would be a definite improvement in tourism if there were more charter flights," Avi-Natan said. "The charters will cause an increase, though we don't think they will immediately remedy all our problems."

"Acadia National Park" film at Science Museum

Maine's spectacular Mount Desert Island, where mountains meet the sea's edge, is the setting for a color film shown August Friday nights at Boston's Museum of Science.

"Acadia National Park," a 30-minute production of Eastman Kodak, spotlights the popular park, located on the coastal island of Mt. Desert. The film is offered Museum visitors at no charge above general admission to the exhibit halls ($2.50 adults; $1.50 ages 5 through 16, and students, senior citizens, and active military).

It will be shown August 8, 15, 22, 29, and September 5, at 7 and 8:15 p.m.

An interview with a leading park naturalist serves as the narration for the film, which provides an introduction to the flora, fauna, and natural history of the area.

In addition to the film, Friday evening visitors may attend the Bicentennial Planetarium program, "Star Spangled Sky," shown at 8 p.m. Within the domed theatre, audiences are taken on a 40-minute trip through time and space to witness highlights of American astronomy's 200 years. A popular feature of this program is the re-creation of Paul Revere's midnight ride. Admission is 50c above Museum admission.

Other Bicentennial offerings include an expansive new Pierce Hall of Medical Science where exhibits on Blood, the Hip, Medical Instruments, Nutrition, and Highlights in American Medical History are complemented by updated favorites on the Heart, Lung, Drugs, Appendectomy, Foot, Acupuncture, Tooth, and Ether Dome.

A doctor's treatment may be figured mathematically

A new mathematical way to help medical doctors decide whether to treat a patient for suspected illness is the subject of a paper by two physicians at Tufts-New England Medical Center in a special issue of the July 31 New England Journal of Medicine devoted to medical decision-making.

The article's authors, Dr. Stephen G. Pauker, of 48 Concord St., Newton Lower Falls, and Dr. Jerome P. Kassirer of Weston write: "The dilemma of whether or not to administer a certain drug or carry out a certain operation in a patient without an established diagnosis is familiar to physicians. In many clinical situations considerable uncertainty exists about the presence or absence of a given disease because no further confirmatory diagnostic studies are available."

What the two internists propose is a cost-benefit analysis into which are factored the known risks, benefits, etc., of a given treatment (or non-treatment) for the suspected disease.

Ideally, note the physicians, "One would choose to treat only patients with the disease and avoid treating those without the disease...however, when the presence of the disease cannot be ascertained with certainty, treatment will sometimes be withheld from patients who have the disease and sometimes given to patients who are free of the disease."

A good example is a suspected case of appendicitis: physicains know from experience that an appendectomy carries with it a certain surgical risk. But, point out Drs. Pauker and Kasirer, when the risk of death and other complications is greater if nothing is done, and when appendicitis is likely but cannot be proved without surgery, the decision to remove the suspected inflamed appendix is justified.

Drs. Pauker and Kassirer, in their U.S. Public Health Service-sponsored report, look explicitly at the relation between the benefits and costs, i.e. risks, of treatment and integrate them into a simple mathematical formula that relates the benefits and costs to the probability of the patient having the disease. Their formula does not require a computer; in fact, any physician with a rudimentary knowledge of mathematics and access to basic medical statistics can carry out the procedure described in detail in the journal article.

Dr. Pauker is assistant professor of medicine at Tufts University School of Medicine and assistant physician on the cardiology service of New England Medical Center Hospital (NEMCH).

Dr. Kassirer is professsor and associate chairman of the department of medicine at Tufts and associate physician-in-chief at NEMCH. Their report is issued from the Clinical Decision-Making Group at Tufts, the Medical Service at NEMCH and Project MAC at Massachusetts Institute of Technology.

He just might lose his shirt.

Sweat shirt literature helps some people get things off their chest. Gripes against our social system, for instance. Or our economic system, where the gripes concentrate on profits.

The young man in our picture forgets that he bought the shirt with the money some worker earned for his labor. And labor is a major beneficiary of that sale—since employees get 2/3 of the corporate income dollar.

The manufacturer of the shirt could not survive without a profit, nor could the retailer who sold it. No matter how you feel about profit—without it, neither labor or management, nor retailer or wholesaler could survive.

The very price of the shirt is established by the profit system. If one merchant takes too great a profit his price may be high. This in turn will encourage a competitor to take less profit at a lower price in order to get a bigger share of the shirt business.

In a word, profit is an incentive to beat the competition with new and better products at more attractive prices—all of which results in more and better jobs.

Profit is a built-in part of the American economic system which has given us by far the highest standard of living in the world.

So let's not lose our shirt—or our head.

We all profit from profits.

Host golf tourney

Newton will be the scene of a national golf tournament of prestige and importance when the 75th United States Women's Amateur Championship is played at Brae Burn Country Club August 11-16. These ladies are prominent local golfers active in plans for the tournament, Mrs. George W. Gibson of Waban, ladies golf champion of Brae Burn, and Mrs. Gordon B. Jones, of Needham in charge of housing for the 150 contestants coming from all over the United States.

Golf championship begins Monday . . .

Newton chosen as site for Women's Amateur tourney

Newton has the distinction of being chosen site of a major national golf tournament. This is the first time in a number of years that such an important golfing event has been held in the Greater Boston area. The 75th United States Women's Amateur Championship is being held next week at Brae Burn Country Club, August 11-16.

150 top quality women golfers from all over the country are entered. The format calls for them to play an 18 hole qualifying round on Monday, August 11. The 64 low scorers will then proceed in match play, leading to a 36-hole final on Saturday.

For spectators who enjoy the finest of golf there will be something going on at Brae Burn every day, except no play until noon on Wednesday and Friday. With all 150 entries playing Monday, it seems as though that would be a great time to watch.

The event is sponsored by the U.S. Golf Association which has invited all former champions to attend and help celebrate the Diamond Anniversary. The famous Glenna Collett Vare and Patty Berg will be among them.

Many fine players who have made golf history in recent years are entered, but of most interest here are the New England ladies including the new Mass. State Champion Jeanne-Marie Boylan of Milton; the 1974 Mass. Champion Debbie Simourian, star lady golfer at Woodland Country Club; Bonnie Rothwell and Mrs. Edward McAuliffe of Wellesley, Mrs. Peter Ainsworth, Westwood, Noreen Friel, Woburn, Jennifer Brown, Raynham and Vicky Vincent, Norwell.

Brae Burn is rich in the traditions and history of the game of golf. It has been the site of three previous national championships and is the only U.S. Club to have been the site of more than one Curtis Cup Match. The three national championships were won by three of the most historic figures in the game. Walter Hagen won his second Open at Brae Burn in 1919. Bobby Jones won his fourth amateur championship in 1928. Miss Harriot Curtis won the women's amateur championship at Brae Burn in 1906.

Winner of the national amateur receives a gold medal and her Club receives custody of the Championship Cup presented to the USGA by Robert Cox, Member of Parliament, of Edinburgh, Scotland. He was visiting this country in 1896 and donated a permanent trophy, with the stipulation that the Championship be played that year at Morris Country Golf Club, Morristown, N.J., a course he had helped to lay out in 1894.

The national amateur has been held every year with the exception of cancellations during two World Wars.

The President of Brae Burn, Robert S. Kretschmar, and many Newton members are active in preparations for the tournament.

Season tickets at $10, daily tickets at $3, will be available at the gate.

Lots of action in Newton youth baseball leagues

St. Bernard's were champs in Twi-Division National League, but many teams did well

By BUDDY BERGER

In these days when all the football camps around the country are opening up, one tends to forget about the assorted baseball leagues that we have right here in our own little community. I'm speaking, of course, about our Newton Twi-Division Leagues, both National, for the 16-18 year olders, and the International league, for the 13 to 15 year olders.

The National Division just finished their final playoffs this past week, with St. Bernards coming out victorious. Most local sports fans probably know this. But what they probably don't know is the other teams in the league, who played on them, and just where they finished in the league. But this is a thing that you can't ignore.

All these boys playing in the league always gave their best, and the teams that didn't quite make it as far as the play-offs, or the quarterfinals for that matter, usually didn't get too much recognition. And there was an awful lot of good talent playing in this league.

As said earlier, St. Bernards are the champions, for the second time in three years. Newton Centre, who had a tough year this summer, were the defending champs. Leading St. Bernards to a 13-0-2 record were catcher Wayne Johnson, who was the premier slugger this year in the League, and pitcher Ed Aucoin, who turned in a fine 6-0 record.

Add to this a fine shortstop, Bob Cunningham and a scrappy little second baseman, Sal Yeradi, and St. Bernards put together a hard-hitting, smooth-fielding, fundamentally sound team on the field for every game. They were just a team that seemed destined to win everything this year, and they did.

Runner up this year, not only in the regular season, but also in the finals, were the Boys Club, who finished 8-6-1 in the season. This team was one team who really looked excellent on paper, but just couldn't put it all together in the season. Unlike St. Bernards, who were thoroughly consistent throughout the year, this team showed flashes of brilliance, but unfortunately, fell into a lot of dips. The team was almost all suberb athletes, coming from North High. The big hitters were Dana Foley, Jack Ryan, and Steve Cononico.

They had excellent fielding in the likes of Mike Tocci at second, Bob Kinsella at catcher, and the outfield with Ryan, Foley, and a rookie, Bob Hilton. Cononico was the top pitcher, and when he could get out of his other league commitments. Steve DiBennedetto was his usual self, stopping hard ground balls at third, and doing a great job as pitcher and batter. Just seeing how much there is to write on them, you can see why they were a bit of a disappointment with their near five hundred record.

THIRD PLACE PANTHERS

Third place in the league went to the Upper Falls Panthers. This team had the problem a lot of teams have when the problem arises, a bit too much youth. But this should help them for the future. Top players on this team were shortstop - centerfielder Mike Malkasion, co-captain on the 1975 Newton South baseball team, and Joe Gentile, the catcher on the team and the best hitter. Also helping out the team was first year man Don Ferreri, the team's best pitcher, and infielder-pitcher Kevin Corbet. As said before, they should improve next year with their youth, with players like Mike Cushner, Bob Tresca, Tom Young, and Ferreri helping them out.

Grabbing the last play-off position this year by ending up in fourth place was another team that was good looking on paper but just couldn't put it together in the regular season, the Mosca Club. They ended up on a 5-8-2 note. In the beginning this team had all the prospects of a championship team, but certain problems, such as lack of attendance by certain players, caused one forfeit, and a lot of games where second-stringers had to be put into action for quality first line players.

The team was led by Richie Hunt, a former Newton North player. He consistently hit the ball with authority, and played a flawless centerfield. And when he was needed late in the season as a pitcher, he won a couple of ever big ball games.

Other players who did a good job were Mike Mosca, Pete Wise, Mike Lafferty, and Mike Bradly. One player who, like DiBennedetto, had other league commitments was Tom Irvine. But when he did pitch, he showed signs of being the best chucker in the league.

We now come to the teams who didn't make the play-offs, but had some good quality players on their team.

Newton Centre, last years champs, lost players this year due to age, and had to rebuild. But there were some players on this team who did have good years, even though they were playing on a non-contender. This was a team that was mostly anchored by their pitching corps, which was led by Mike DiSabito, and Dave Chused. Mike Talliag, the catcher, Lou Mastrimoni, and Lenny Kraicer were other players who gave good efforts.

And last but certainly not least, for they gave some of the top teams some tough games, were the Matthews Club. As said, they proved not to be a patsy in the league just because of their position in the standings. Many a time they would be staying close, just to have victory snatched out of their grip in the last couple of innings. Leading this team was catcher-pitcher Dave Prince, who always gave a solid performance, and pitcher-infielder Dave Hudson who just about always showed a good stick.

So that was this year's Newton twi-National-Divison, a league that held some suprises, some disappointments, but all in all, a lot of fun for the athletes who played in it.

Next week; a look into the International Division.

St. Bernard's tops Boys Club in three out of four to take National League flag

By DAVID BERGER

This was the week the National Division of the Newton Twi-League planned to give us Boys Club and St. Bernard's in that long awaited smash thriller, the National Division's championship playoffs. The show would star Steve DiBenedetto, Ed Aucoin plus a huge cast of big-name players and all-stars who would amaze us with their batting skill, leave us in a state of wonder with their flawless fielding, and overpower us with their flying fastballs.

Indeed, there were glimpses of all those things. Yet somehow the production, intended as high suspense, often dropped to the level of simple mediocrity. Perhaps it was the easy way Bernard's dominated, whipping Boys Club in three out of the four meetings. It might have been the fact that whenever the games got close you would be able to count on Bernards coming up with the "big hit" or that key fielding play that doesn't show up in the box score but wins ball games. But most of all the factor that made this series just average was the inability of Boys Club to hit any pitcher that St. Bernard's put out on the mound.

Boys Club was only able to pound out twenty hits in the four games series, an average of only five per game.

The inability of Boys Clubs swingers was shown quite clearly in the all important first game of the series. Greg Pappas, one of Clubbies' aces, started the game and pitched fine ball, only giving up three runs. But against the ace of Bernard's staff, right-handed fire-baller Ed Aucoin, Boys Club could not capatilize on any of their opportunities. Aucoin, although he had a lot of stuff, was wild and walked nine.

Boys Club had a couple of great chances to get at Aucoin, particularly in the fourth inning when they had the bases full and Mike Smith up, to be followed by Mike Tocci and DiBenedetto. But Aucoin was able to rear back a little farther, kick his leg a little higher, and fire the ball past Smith to strike him out and end the threat.

Boys Club also had two other times where they had two or more runners on base in the same inning, but could not capitalize. This, along with fine St. Bernard fielding, was what finally turned the tide in favor of them.

In the second game St. Bernard's demonstrated the two other main points that made them the fine team they were, hitting in the clutch and the ability to come from behind. Down six-to-three going into the sixth inning, and against the ace of the Boys Club staff, Steve Cononico, Bernard's was able to come up with a big six run sixth inning and win going away, nine to six.

Leading Bernard's in this game was Jack Garabedian who had two hits including the game winner, a two-out bases loaded triple which drove home all three runs. Picking up the win for Bernards was Dom Russo, while Ed Aucoin came in and pitched the final inning, retiring all three batters to register a key save.

THIRD GAME

In the third game Boys Club finally managed to play up to their standards, and showed their ability to battle back as they won in the seventh and final inning with an amazing five run rally. This was undoubtable the most exciting game of the series, as one could feel the pressure on Boys Club, and their comeback was truly a great one.

What made this feat all the more remarkable was the fact that Boys Club accomplished this against the two best pitchers Bernards had, Ed LeBlanc and (of course) Ed Aucoin. Aucoin (who was destined to appear in all four of the play-off games) came in right in the middle of the fateful seventh, and gave up two hits and two key runs.

Credit really must be given to the whole Boys Club team, as they stayed alive and gave 100 per cent all the time and really showed what they were made of.

But, alas, all good things must come to an end and Boys Club chances for a comeback did too on the very next night.

Mantle sticks up for Martin

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — When Mickey Mantle says it, he does so with a straight face, so some people who don't know the whole background aren't sure whether he's joking or not when he says, "You know Billy Martin, he's the guy the Yankees got rid of because he was such a bad influence on me."

For those who don't know, Mickey Mantle is joking.

He honestly feels Billy Martin was as much a bad influence on him as his two twin brothers. And there's no doubt in his mind whatsoever that neither of the brothers ever did a single thing to hurt him.

"Yeah, Billy was a terrible influence on me," Mantle deadpanned at Saturday's Old Timers' get-together at Shea Stadium, only an hour or so after the official announcement naming Martin the Yankees' new manager. "I was MVP twice while he was with us, won the Triple Crown once and led the club in everything the year he was traded. So what kind of bad influence could he have been?"

Not much by those yardsticks, but the Yankees' brass didn't see it that way at all at the time. They always were concerned Martin might lead Mantle astray in his nightly pursuits off the field and that was among the reasons which entered their thinking in trading Martin to Kansas City in 1957.

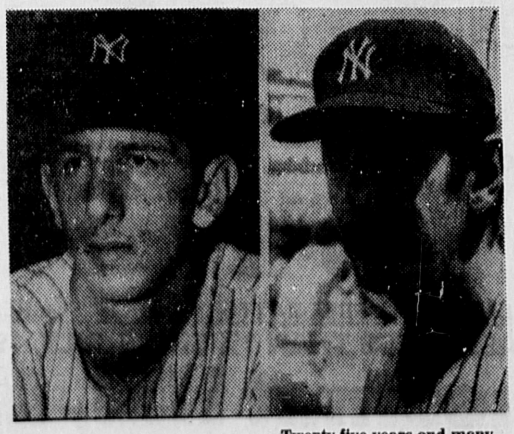

Billy Martin has had some problems since then also, mostly off the field, not on it. Significantly or not, many of the Texas players who looked upon him as another Great White Father when he first came to the club near the end of 1973 offered suspiciously little protest when he left it two weeks ago.

Brad Corbett, the Rangers' owner, said some of the younger Texas players were in such mortal fear of artin that "they were too scared even to play."

This is a side of Billy Martin that Mickey Mantle has seldom seen. The side Mantle knows best is the leadership side Martin demonstrated at Minnesota, Detroit and Texas. He took over bottom clubs in each of those places and brought two of them to the top and the other one to second place.

"I'll tell you what kinda manager I think Billy is," volunteered Mantle, a teammate of Martin's for seven years with the Yankees. "He's the same kind of manager as Ralph Houk and Casey Stengel. I think he picked up things from them both. If Billy was leading men off a cliff, he'd be the first to step off."

Ralph Terry, another former teammate of Martin's, said the new Yankee manager's greatest asset is desire.

Billy Martin, then and now

Twenty-five years and many baseball battles have come and gone since these pictures were made. At left, Billy Martin is seen in 1950 as a brash, young rookie in the spring training camp of the New York Yankees; at right, after he was named the new Yankee skipper Saturday. UPI

"He has so much of it," pointed out Terry. "If he's playing with you, baseball is fun, not work. He makes it that way. If you're pitching and he makes two-three errors behind you, you still want him on your side. You know he's going to make it up to you somehow, some way."

pChief ingredient Martin brings to any ball club is a special type of inner fire which can't help but motivate players. For awhile, anyway. Then they backslide because it's human nature and not even Billy Martin can change that.

"Any time he takes over a ball club, the psychomotor of that ball club is bound to be lifted," offered Ryne Duren, another ex-Yankee. "He creates controversy and brings up the level of performance wherever he goes. I think that's great."

Joe DiMaggio played with Martin two years. He knows both sides of the 47-year-old former Yankee second baseman.

"Billy was always a brash kind of fellow," said DiMaggio. "He's a great kibitzer, a terrific kidder, but he gets his temper up sometimes and then, look out! He's done very well as a manager, yet he has had his problems. I'd say his biggest fault is that he has to learn to communicate better with the people who run the ball club."

Most of those who ever played with Billy Martin speak of him with warm affection. They like him, and Whitey Ford, one of the Yankees' coaches, likes him as much as anybody.

"I remember one spring when we were training in St. Petersburg, my wife, Joan, and I rented a house on the beach while most of the other players stayed in the hotel," said Ford.

"Billy and Darrell Johnson were among those staying in the hotel, and Casey had a midnight curfew. We had a bed in our garage, and I told Billy and Darrell instead of going back to the hotel and getting fined if they were ever out late, they should come sleep in our garage.

"Sonuvaguns," laughed Whitey Ford. "They lived there all spring."

SOCCER TALK

by PAUL ELDRIDGE

Figuring that Ade Coker, Shep Messing, Bill Wilkinson and Steve Melleden have received enough ink, we decided to interview their wives. Besides they're nicer and better looking than their husbands.

Joan Coker, Arden Messing and Carol Wilkson all said that the boys are very quiet and relaxed around the house. And, before a game, they are so easy going, you wouldn't even know a game was coming up. Linda Melledew says that Steve is a perfect husband, but before a game he gets very nervous.

All three of the English players hope to stay in soccer when their playing days are over. Ade hopes to become a coach in his native Nigeria. While Bill and Steve haven't quite made up their minds whether to coach or not. All they know is that they want a job dealing with the sport.

Shep, according to his wife, Arden, hopes to become a lawyer and deal in sports contracts. He would like to work for Bob Woolf in New York. If he does, then Soccer General Managers, like Casey Frankiewicz, had better look out.

I asked Arden what the reaction of people i when she tells them that he husband is a soccer player. Her answer was, "They are not impressed. I would be better off saying that he was a professional bowler."

All of the girls said that they get worried when their husbands are knocked down during the course of the game. As Carol Wilkinson puts it, "It is all part of the game, but I feel a whole lot better when he gets up."

The young ladies, one and all, said that they enjoy being married to soccer players. And Carol and Linda said that they wouldn't mind if their sons, Nathan and Steve Jr., follow in their father's footsteps and become soccer players themselves.

In talking to both the husbands and their wives, I found an understanding and appreciation of each other.

I would like to thank Jimmy Jaymes and Glen Cerny for giving a little girl a big thrill. My daughter, Marybeth, does a takeoff of Jaymes and they gave her a chance to do her thing during their post game wrap-up last Saturday night.

While we think of it. It is vacation time, so for the next two weeks, Jimmy Jaymes and Glen Cerny will pinch hit for me.

The League of Ireland representatives fired pretty well in the draft of the three European club tournaments that were made on Zurich, Switzerland last week.

Bohemians, the new league champions, though drafted away, picked somewhat of a plum in Glasgow Rangers for the Champions Cup. Both Home Farm and Athlone, the Cup-winners and UEFA Cup, respectively, are favored with home games. And they cannot be too displeased at their prospects in their European debuts against the French Racing Club of Lens and Valerger from Oslo, Sweden.

Leading Irish League. (Northern Ireland) sides, Linfield and Coleraine, have drawn a couple of tough ones.

George Scott loves the Boston fans

BOSTON (UPI)—He may be a Milwaukee Brewer, but George Scott still has a soft spot in his heart for the city of Boston.

Scott, the newly elected captain of the Brewers, thinks the Red Sox may have the best team in the American League, and thinks that Boston fans are definitely "the best anywhere."

"The Boomer" earned his nickname and his reputation in Boston, and the trade which sent him to Milwaukee a few years ago wasn't the most popular move the Red Sox ever made. But in a 10-minute speech to sportswriters Tuesday, Scott said the Red Sox easily have the best team in the East Division, and are "not that far behind the Oakland A's" as the best team in the league.

"I honestly don't see anyone in our division who can catch them," he said. "If you want the truth, I don't think Baltimore Orioles have the strength to do it. The Red Sox are too deep.

"Everyone complains about that Reggie Smith trade, but listen, Rick Wise is one of the best pitchers in our league right now. And Bill Lee's gonna win some games. He'll throw that garbage up there, but he'll win some games."

Scott, who was a member of the 1967 American League champion Red Sox team, says last year's Boston nosedive can't happen again.

"People who think they're gonna fall down are wrong," he said. "Look, I'm happy where I am, but that team can play baseball. And Boston deserves a winner. The fans are great. They come and cheer the team on, always. If I can't win the pennant in Milwaukee, I want Boston to win it."

Local stars oppose each other on tube

In a rare occurrence, the Monday night baseball game of the week this week featured two players of local prominence. Hurling for the victorious St. Louis Cardinals was lefty Jack Curtis, formerly of Newton. At third base for the Pittsburgh Pirates, who currently are in first place in the Eastern Division of the National League, was Richie Hebner of Norwood.

With so few local young men in the major leagues, it's indeed a rare occasion when two of them get on national television in the same game.

America the anxious

By RICH GROSSMAN

Many commentators have observed that should the United States ever come under surprise attack the most opportune time would be on Super Sunday. It is suspected that the invadors would march down Commonwealth Avenue from Boston unmolested and capture Newton City Hall without firing one shot. The fervor with which Americans participate in sports is a deep rooted emotion which originated in the days of the American Revolution.

Whether it was throwing rocks at Red Coats or hog-tying Tories to Liberty Polls, the average American has always been fond of sports. One might not deem rock throwing a hobby that takes much skill, but consider:

Have you ever tried to knuckleball a field marshall?

Have you ever thrown a slider at a "leftennant" and received half a dozen rounds of musketfire in return?

Such were the trials and tribulations that faced many Bostonians years ago. Among these early patriots we suspect that there were several prospective twenty game winners.

Of course we all know that rock throwing by itself would not constitute a successful revolution, although the War for Independence was not long in starting. Bunker Hill saw the first heavy fighting of the war in 1775. On June 17th of that year the Yankees faced the Red Sox (uh....Red Coats) in one of the fiercest baseball games ever played. Before the game Yankee manager, William Prescott uttered those famous words, "Don't swing until you can read Joe Cronin's signiture on the ball."

The Red Coats stayed off Yankee attacks in the first and second innings (sustaining limited losses), but in the third the Yanks devastated the Red Coats. In fact the Yankees drove the Red Coats out of Charlstown and into Boston, effectively ending their road trip. The rest is history.

Today Americans still take their sports seriously and have spent more time and money participating in and watching sports than ever before. We now consider England among our best allies although it wasn't always so. Why just several years after the Revolution we had a scrap with England over a football game that took place on June 16, 1812.

Tony C struggling

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — Tony Conigliaro has known better days.

At 20, he was the American League home run king, considered the Boston Red Sox' most outstanding long ball hitter.

Now, at 30, he's struggling to go from the Pawtucket Red Sox of the AAA International League, which he considers "DLeague ball," back to Boston, strong leaders of the American League East.

And Conigliaro, who was knocked out of baseball after he was nearly blinded by a pitch in 1967, is finding that these just aren't the best of times, that his comeback journey through the minors is anything but a pleasure trip.

Conligiaro has been with Pawtucket since June 24, and in the minors he has endured one minor trouble after another, including an eight-day injury and a series of thefts.

In Pawtucket's six-game series with the Richmond Braves which ended Sunday, Conligiaro went 3-for-16. His batting average is just above .200.

"On my first trip down here, I had eight bats, a hat, two gloves and all my practice shirts stolen," he said. "It was just ridiculous. And I had a box of bats sent from Boston and it was stolen before I ever saw it."

Prior to the Braves series, he suffered a muscle spasm in his back and was sidelined for eight days.

"The bad thing is that I couldn't do anything. I couldn't even take batting practice or warm up. I just sat around for a week."

And then there's that commanding first-place lead the Boston Red Sox hold in the American League East.

"My whole problem is that I won the job with them and was batting fourth," he said. "Then we came into New York and I faced Catfish Hunter. I laid down a bunt and was tearing to first base and tore a groin muscle. I missed 23 days and the guy that took my place, Jim Rice, started hitting like a madman.

"That's what frustrates me the most, thinking about that. If I didn't get hurt then, I might still be playing up there."

St. Bernard's

The hero once more was Eddie Aucoin who pitched a three-hit shut-out, ending any chance Boys Club had of making a Cinderella-like comeback. Bernards scored the winning run in the very first inning, and although they would score four more late in the game, one could tell right away Bernards would only need but one run.

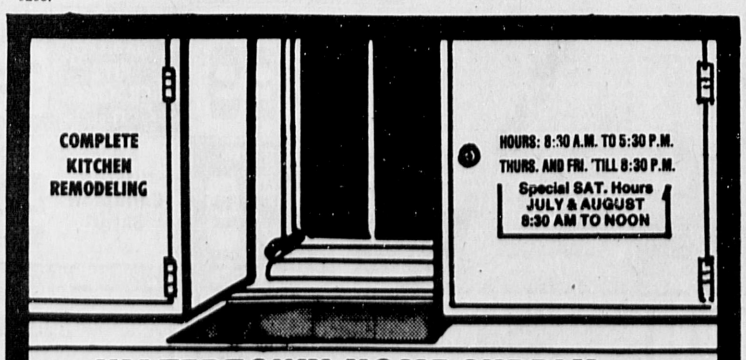

SERIES STAR

In picking a star of the series, there can only be one choice: Eddie Aucoin. This young man pitched seventeen superb innings and picked up two wins and one save. He was the winning pitcher in both the first game and the last and was the dominating factor in both. In his seventeen innings he gave up only three runs, of which only one was earned. For the record, folks, that a microscopic 0.53 earned run average.

Tribute really must be paid to this outstanding young pitcher. Congratulations to Eddie Aucoin and all the rest of the players on St. Bernards a team that, including the play-offs, lost only one ball game, and had the best regular season record besides winning the play-offs.

Congratulations to Boys Club who put up a valiant effort in the play-offs after having a fine regular season, coming in second, and in the play-offs being the only team to defeat St. Bernard's all year. But, most of all, congratulations to all the boys who played in the play-offs and regular season who were the biggest winners of all; if not in ball games than in enjoyment.

Mt. Ida Jr. College offers career program

Director admissions

Mount Ida Junior College has moved ahead in career program development. Some of the professions one can attain after just two years are medical assistant, dental assistant, legal secretary, executive secretary, careers in retailing, interior decorating, graphic design, fashion illustration, recreation leadership, child development, human services, and others. Practical experience is obtained through field placement and externships.

Also offered are several programs in liberal arts, which lead to transfer into many four year colleges and universities across the country.

Peggy Adler, director of admissions, is pleased with the school's enrollment, which has steadily increased and now stands at 700 students, coming from all academic and socioeconomic backgrounds. More than fifty per cent of the students receive financial assistance.

Mount Ida's purposes are to offer a general education that will appeal to each student, to prepare students for gainful employment and rewarding careers, and to prepare students to transfer to excellent senior colleges. The college seeks to achieve educational excellence through individual attention for each student.

Mount Ida is a fully-accredited two year college, granting A.A. and A.S. degrees. The school was established in 1899 and is proud of its continued success in offering quality education.

Canoe Camp in Sudbury for young people

The Elbanobscot Environmental Education Center in Sudbury is offering Canoe Camp from August 18-29 for young people age 13-15. Designed to provide basic canoeing-camping skills during the first five days, the program nevertheless will appeal to the Tom Sawyer side of everyone since campers will spend the next five days on a leisurely overnight trip travelling via canoes, exploring and camping on the Sudbury, Assabet and Concord Rivers.

Some small-time rock climbing and white-water canoeing is included for those who would like a little adventure without anxiety.

The major emphasis of the program is on cooperation within the group for mutual benefit: making decisions, choosing and paking the appropriate food and gear, and having a good time together.

Interested persons should call the Registrar at Elbanobscot, 443-9933.

FLY ONE OF THESE FLAGS ON YOUR HOME DURING BICENTENNIAL

OFFERED AT REDUCED PRICE AS A TRANSCRIPT NEWSPAPERS Bicentennial Public Service

50-star Old Glory

$7.50 for either Complete Flag Kit

Please add $1.00 for postage and handling on mail orders.

The Transcript Newspapers offers at cost as a patriotic public service two magnificent home flag kits . . . either the 50-star Old Glory or our nation's traditional First Flag, the 13-star Betsy Ross — both 3 x 5 foot in size with double sewn stripes. Both kits are complete with a 6-foot baked-on gilt finish 2-piece steel pole and matching 5-inch wing spread Eagle top ornament — 2-way heavy rust resistant stamped steel bracket with screws — full color flag history brochure, mounting instructions — all carefully packed in a 2-piece storage carton. Order either or both kits today — for yourself, for gifts.

Stop by the Transcript Newspapers Office, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Mass. or mail in the coupon to get one or both of these fine flag kits.

"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1775 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex, village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.

To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day, if you will . . . especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1976.

What About Pet Turtles?
By RICHARD W. BRYANT,
Director of Education
Animal Rescue League

The Food and Drug Administration's recent ban on interstate sales of pet turtles has prompted several inquiries from concerned readers.

For the benefit of those who have not read about the decision, here are the details in brief: as of July 1, the distribution and sale in interstate commerce of small pet turtles is banned by the FDA because of the "turtles' potential for spreading disease." Turtles can transmit bacteria that cause salmonella infection (commonly known as food poisoning) in humans.

The ban applies to live turtles withshells less than four inches in length, as well as to fertile eggs. It does not extend to shipments for scientific, eductional and zoo exhibits; nor does it affect the sale of turtles in the states where they are raised.

Since 1972, all turtles transported interstate for sale were required legally to be examined and certified free of salmonella. This program, however, was difficult to administer and also left open the possibility that a turtle could become infected after certification and sale.

What does the new ban mean to people who already own turtles, or who work with them for educational purposes? Primarily, it emphasizes the need to exercise a few simple, commensense precautions:

—handle turtles as little as possible and teach children that turtles are animals to watch, not play with.

—make sure you and your children wash your hands thoroughly with hot water and soap after handling a turtle, his container or its contents.

—don't allow children to kiss the turtle (or any other pet for that matter).

—never adopt a turtle which you find in its natural habitat.

Having a problem with your pet? Write to Pet Care Corner, Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, Mass. 02117. Space permitting we will try to answer your inquiries in this column.

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

Maple Troubles—If the leaves of your maples or other ornamentals have tiny "pimples" or felty patches of red or yellow on them, don't be too worried about it. Many ornamentals, especially maples, get the blotches and it's due to a tiny mite that's too small to be seen by the naked eye. The patches seem to be the plant's responses to the presence and-or feeding of the mites. Actually, these growths do no harm to the leaves or trees, although they do get a lot of people stirred up.

Being a mite you'd think that Kelthane (a good mite killer) would knock this pest out, but it doesn't work on it. Sevin (an insecticide) knocks this pest out, if applied early enough. A dormant spray of lime-sulfur in early spring will also control the spindle mite or others. However, if you don't want to use chemicals, then forget about it because these blotches caused by the feeding of Eriophyid mites don't do a bit of harm to the tree.

By the way, now's a good time to look over your Japanese Yew shrubs and rhododendrons. If there are holes chewed in the leaves, it's the work of the black vineweevil. Spray the foliage and the area underneath and around the plants with chlordane or Lindane. Diazinon might be helpful. Spectracide is Diazinon, but is for homeowner use. It's good for ants and many lawn and garden insect pests.

Grass Clippings—Most lawn mowers now have attachments which catch the grass as you mow it. These clippings make a fine mulch around trees, shrubs and in the vegetable garden. When you use the clippings as a mulch, the sun soon turns them into hay, and when fall rolls around the material has gone into the soil to make valuable humus.

Grass clippings contain a very large percentage of nitrogen, which is a good reason why the mulch is such a good soil-builder. As a mulch, lawn clippings surpass most others, being easy to handle, will remain in place nicely, and will give your crops a neat appearance. They practically disappear into the soil by fall. In a compost pile, the grass furnishes heat (due to rapid release of nitrogen as grass decays) and helps "ripen" a compost pile quicker.

Some people prefer to leave the clippings on the lawn where they can feed the grass roots. The average person mows his lawn about 30 to 35 times a season, and he mows about three feet of grass in height.

Museum of Science New admission rates

With continuing inflationary trends and increasing financial burdens on nonprofit institutions, officials at Boston's Museum of Science have found it necessary to reassess its admission fees.

In an effort to minimize any increase, the Museum is maintaining its adult admission at the current rate, but is raising its children's admission by twenty-five cents. The new fees parallel those charged by other museums and cultural institutions in the Greater Boston area.

The complete rate schedule is as follows:

$2.50 adults (17 through 64).

$1.50 children (5 through 16); and seniors (65 and over), students, and active duty military with IDs.

Free, members and children under 5.

Reduced rates, $1.50 and $1.00, Monday through Thursday, 2 to 5 p.m., Sept. through Mar., exclusing school vacations and holidays.

Planetarium programs 50c above Museum admission. Children under 5 not admitted.

"Acadia National Park" film at Science Museum

Maine's spectacular Mount Desert Island, where mountains meet the sea's edge, is the setting for a color film shown August Friday nights at Boston's Museum of Science.

"Acadia National Park," a 30-minute production of Eastman Kodak, spotlights the popular park, located on the coastal island of Mt. Desert. The film is offered Museum visitors at no charge above general admission to the exhibit halls ($2.50 adults; $1.50 ages 5 through 16, and students, senior citizens, and active military).

It will be shown August 8, 15, 22, 29, and September 5, at 7 and 8:15 p.m.

An interview with a leading park naturalist serves as the narration for the film, which provides an introduction to the flora, fauna, and natural history of the area.

In addition to the film, Friday evening visitors may attend the Bicentennial Planetarium program, "Star Spangled Sky," shown at 8 p.m. Within the domed theatre, audiences are taken on a 40-minute trip through time and space to witness highlights of American astronomy's 200 years. A popular feature of this program is the re-creation of Paul Revere's midnight ride. Admission is 50c above Museum admission.

Other Bicentennial offerings include an expansive new Pierce Hall of Medical Science where exhibits on Blood, the Hip, Medical Instruments, Nutrition, and Highlights in American Medical History are complemented by updated favorites on the Heart, Lung, Drugs, Appendectomy, Foot, Acupuncture, Tooth, and Ether Dome. A newly opened Red Cross Blood Donor Center, operating Friday evenings from 4:30 to 8:30 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays from noon to 4 p.m., is a unique aspect of the Pierce Hall.

The state of Illinois once attempted to make license plates from a compressed soybean paper product. The experiment had to be dropped because livestock ate the plates from cars parked in farming areas.

The underground workings in the Cripple Creek mining district of Colorado cover about 1,600 miles in length.

Horticultural Hall in Boston is national historical landmark

Horticultural Hall in Boston, home of the Mass. Horticultural Society, has been recognized as a national historical landmark, according to an announcement today by Roger Cheever, executive director of the society.

Nominated by the State Historic Preservation Officer, both Horticultural Hall and Symphony Hall, which face each other on Massachusetts Avenue, will be listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

The National Register is the official list of the country's cultural resources worthy of preservation and includes buildings and sites significant in American history, architecture, archeology and culture.

The society has just completed a major renovation of the lobby of the building. The first floor of the building also houses a number of exhibition halls and classrooms, from which the society presents a range of shows, lectures and classes for its members and the general public.

On the second floor of the building, the society has its main offices, and also offices from which it publishes Horticulture Magazine, one of the oldest and most respected magazines in its field. The society's library, on the same level, is the most comprehensive library of its kind in the country.

Also housed in Horticutlural Hall are many of the headquarters of the specialized plant societies in the New England region.

"We are extremely pleased to be named to the National Register," said Roger Cheever, executive director of the society, "as it is an indication not only of the historical significance of the building, but the continuing importance of the Mass. Horticultural Society."

Founded in 1829, the Mass. Horticultural Society is a non-profit, membership group, which among its other projects, sponsors the famed N.E. Spring Garden & Flower Show at Commonwealth Armory each year.

CANCER DETECTION

BOGOTA, Colombia (UPI) — Cancer of the uterus is the most common form of the disease found in Colombian women, the Health Ministry says.

Some 13,000 women between the ages of 25 and 50 die of cancer in Colombia annually.

The Health Ministry has opened a series of free detection clinics in various Colombian cities.

Operation Head Start

By ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Ten years ago a ceremony was held at the White House to announce the launching of Operation Head Start, the jewel in the crown of President Lyndon B. Johnson's grand plan to abolish poverty in the United States.

Head Start was designed to help the preschool children of the poor overcome deficiencies in nutrition, health care and education. It was one of many new programs rushed into operation in 1965, the first year of LBJ's "unconditional war" on economic and social deprivation, and it proved to be, one of the most popular.

Antipoverty chief Sargent Shriver estimated the new Office of Economic Opportunity, in its first nine months of operations, had used its billion-dollar budget to help 1.2 million persons directly and nearly two million indirectly. For the second year, Congress was authorizing $1.8 billion and lots of new activities.

Today, Johnson and his Great Society are dead. There is no OEO, and the war on poverty has become a rearguard bureaucratic skirmish fought by a handful of isolated social welfare programs scattered among old-line government departments, such as Health, Education and Welfare, Housing and Urban Development, and the Labor Department.

The last vestiges of the once-fiercely independent OEO have been transferred to a new Community Services Administration to be tucked away in HEW. That also will be home for the Community Action Programs, which gave big city mayors headaches in the 1960s with their "Go Fight City Hall" battle cry.

The Job Corps survives in the Labor Department's manpower program, with $370 million budgeted for it and other "institutional" youth training. VISTA, which was to be the "domestic Peace Corps," was relegated to the $105 million ACTION agency which also took over the Peace Corps and other federal volunteer programs.

And Head Start? It is part of HEW's Office of Childhood Development with $434 million to spend on a target "clientele" of 379,000 kids. That's 182,000 fewer children than the first Head Start summer enrollment 10 years ago.

Stickers will give milage estimate

Eighteen auto manufacturers have agreed to participate in the 1976 voluntary "fuel economy" labeling program for automobiles and light-duty trucks. The program, jointly sponsored by the Environmental Protection Agency and the Federal Energy Administration, provides that participating auto makers place stickers on all new light-duty vehicles, giving estimates of how many miles per gallon each can be driven.

Participating American auto makers are: American Motors, Chrysler, Ford, General Motors, Avanti, and Checker. This is the first year that American Motors will participate. Foreign manufacturers in the program include: Volkswagen, BMW, and Mercedes-Benz, Germany; British Leyland and Roles Royce, Great Britain; Isuzu, Honda, Toyo Kogyo, Nissan, Toyota, and Mitsubishi, Japan; and Saab-Scania, Sweden.

The fundamental objective of the labeling program is to reduce energy usage in transportation by (1) influencing consumers to purchase vehicles that get good fuel economy; (2) encouraging manufacturers to produce such vehicles; and (3) increasing public awareness of what factors influence fuel.

The miles-per-gallon figures that appear on the labels are derived at the time EPA tests motor vehicles to certify that they meet federal auto emission standards. The vehicles are shipped by the manufacture to EPA's test lab in Ann Arbor, Michigan, where they are placed on a platform (dynamometer) and are driven on two pre-set driving cycles — one simulating city, and the other a highway driving pattern. The hydrocarbon, carbon monoxide, and carbon dioxide emissions collected during the two cycles are used to calculate city and highway fuel economy figures.

Manufacutres may choose to label their cars with either general or specific fuel economy data. Specific labels will provide miles-per-gallon figures for a specific vehicle configuration. Each specific label will give the vehicle's engine size; the number of cylinders in the engine; the number of barrels in the carburetor; the type of transmission (automatic or manual, and how many speeds if manual); the vehicle's inertia weight; the rear axle ratio; and the type of emission control system. The general label will give miles-per-gallon figures that are derived by taking results from all test vehicles within a car line-engine size groups, and then averaging those figures according to the expected contribution of each specific vehicle to total sales of cars in that group. A car line-engine size group is limited to cars that have the same engine size, same number of cylinders, same type of carburetor, same type transmission (manual or automatic), and the same emission control system.

Last Corvette convertible

ST LOUIS: Auto dealer Bob Kaiser with the last Corvette convertible to roll off the assembly line. Kaiser bought the car from the GM assembly plant across the street from his dealership and has decided to keep it for himself—at least until he gets an offer substantially above the $8,300 he paid for it. (UPI)

The very last Corvette convertible goes to . . .

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — For 27 years Bob Kaiser has worked across the street from the Chevrolet plant where they make the Corvette — watching as the shiny new convertibles rolled off the assembly line headed for their new owners.

This week the last Corvette convertible came off the line. Kaiser bought it.

Getting a new Chevrolet isn't anything new for Kaiser, since he owns a dealership for the General Motors car. But he said his white Corvette with the bright red interior will be the first he has ever kept from himself.

"I've always wanted one," he said, "but they've been in such demand I didn't think it was fair for me to drive it."

The convertible has for the most part gone the way of the dinosaur and the 25-cent gallon of gas, a victim of a heightened awareness of auto safety and the increased popularity of air conditioning.

Kaiser said sales for convertibles fell off until motorists realized the cars wouldn't be around much longer.

Kaiser has watched a lot of Corvettes come off the GM assembly line. He started as a salesman at the dealership, worked as sales manager and finally took over the franchise 30 months ago. He knows Corvettes well and knows the $8,300 he paid for his could prove to be a bargain.

The Corvette is not only one of the top choices of sports car buffs — it's also a favorite target of car thieves. Kaiser said he'll keep a close eye on his.

Particularly since it cannot be replaced.

All but 300 of the more than 426,000 Corvettes made since 1953 came out of the St. Louis plant, including 38,000 1975 models. But Kaiser hasn't had any easier time getting them than any other dealer. In contrast to layoffs at other plants, the Corvette assembly has had to work overtime.

A prospective Corvette owner may have to wait as long as six months for his new car, depending on the equipment he wants. Kaiser says there's good reason for the demand.

"I think the car is reasonably priced, compared with some of our imported sports cars," he said, "and it's got outstanding features. It's a great car to drive. Young people like it, old people like it — everybody likes it."

Kaiser says he might part with his car eventually. Not right now, though.

"When I realized I would get it," he said, "I figured I'd hold on to it. It's really quite a thrill."

Gremlin

Gremlin—the first U.S. subcompact car—offers a new grille treatment for 1976, improved liftgate and numerous changes in trim and ornamentation. Mechanical features on six-cylinder engines emphasize improvement in fuel economy and efficiency of operation, with carburetor modifications for better fuel-air mixture, an optional economy axle ratio and optional overdrive with manual transmission. Several optional appearance packages are available, including the popular Levi's blue denim interior and a sporty X trim. Standard engine on the 1976 Gremlin is the 232 CID six, with a 258 CID six and a 304 CID V-8 optional. For the fifth consecutive year, buyers of American Motors cars are covered by the company's exclusive Buyer Protection Plan for 12 months or 12,000 miles. A nominal charge extends the plan to 24 months or 24,000 miles.

New grille is feature on '76 Gremlin

DETROIT—Engineering and mechanical refinements in all American Motors passenger cars of 1976 provide improved economy and efficiency of operation. Additional changes contribute to better driveability, comfort and convenience in the new Gremlin, Pacer, Hornet and Matador models.

Highlights of these improvements are:

—Electric choke on six-cylinder engines with manual shift, and on 360 CID 4-barrel V-8, for lower emissions and quicker warm-up.

—Carburetor revisions in sixes that improve fuel-air mixture for better combustion.

—A new thermostat design that gets the 232 CID and 258 CID sixes to normal operating temperatures faster.

—Optional axle ratios for better gasoline mileage and to match individual driving requirements.

—Fuel systems that incorporate revised vent lines with a new check valve, a new fuel return line and a modified carburetor venting system to prevent fuel loss in a collision.

—Forged 14"x6" styled aluminum road wheels offered on all 1976 AMC cars.

—Choice of 20 optional appearance, luxury and performance packages: Six for Gremlin, five each for Hornet and Pacer and four for Matador.

Other features in 1976 American Motors cars include speedometers with new symbols and new treatment of speed divisions, optional radial tires, availability of front disc brakes for all models, improved interior dome lighting, standard warning lights for parking brake and seat belts, warning buzzer for the ignition key switch, overdrive for six-cylinder Gremlin, Pacer and Hornet models with manual transmissions, and choice of three-speed automatic or fully-synchronized manual transmissions on any model.

Nine models in five different body styles are offered by American Motors for 1976: the subcompact Gremlin sedan with rear liftgate, the compact Hornet line with fur body styles, the intermediate Matador series with three body styles, and the unique wide small car that spans most market segments—the two-door Pacer.

Appearance changes have been held to a minimum on all the new models, although both Gremlin and the Matador couple feature new grilles. Other AMC cars incorporate trim and ornamentation refinements.

Engine sizes for the passenger car lineup remain unchanged in 1976. All are designed to use non-leaded gasoline.

Standard engine for Gremlin, Pacer and Hornet is a 232 CID six. Matador has a 258 CID six, except for the station wagon which has the 304 CID V-8. Optional for Gremlin and Hornet are the 258 CID six and the 304 CID V-6. Pacer offers an optional single-barrel or new two-barrel version of the 258 CID six. Matador options include the 304 CID V-8, and two or four-barrel 360 CID V-8's.

All 1976 American Motors cars feature a solid-state, breakerless electronic ignition system as standard equipment. It serves as a further aid to vehicle economy, improved engine efficiency and reduced emissions. The maintenance-free system delivers higher starting voltage at any ambient temperature and precise control of ignition timing so that engines fire cleaner and burn fuel more thoroughly.

Among many appearance and performance options offered for 1976 are DR70x14 polysteel radial raised-letter tires, colorful vinyl roof coverings, heavy-duty suspensions, and a new lock-up center console for use with front bucket seats, or with Pacer individual reclining seats.

A choice of 20 exterior body colors are available for 1976, including 11 new hues. Interiors have been improved and new seat trim styles and upholstery material are employed, paced by a plush velvety luxury package for the Matador coupe, called Barcelona.

All four car lines are available in a selection of eight exterior colors—Alpine White, Silver Frost Metallic, Sunshine Yellow, Sand Tan, Burnished Bronze Metallic, Firecracker Red, Medium Blue Metallic and Ever Green Metallic.

Other 1976 colors are reserved for specific car lines. Exclusive for Pacer are Aztec Copper Metallic, Seaspray Green, Brandywine Metallic, Marine Aqua and Golden Jade Metallic. Matador and Pacer share Autumn Red Metallic. Sienna Orange, Dark Cocoa Metallic and Nautical Blue Metallic are available for Gremlin, Hornet and Matador. Brilliant Blue is offered for Gremlin, Hornet and Pacer. Limefire Metallic is reserved for Gremlin and Hornet. Clasic Black is offered for Gremlin, Hornet and Matador.

After three years "non-smokers rights, bill finally becomes law

After a three-year effort by Bay State health professionals, legislators and private citizens, Massachusetts now has a law to help nonsmokers in their quest for smoke-free breathing areas.

Governor Michael Dukakis has signed into law "An Act to Prohibit or Restrict Smoking In Certain Public Places," which will go into effect October 9. With this Act, Massachusetts joins at least 19 other states that have passed laws restricting a habit that is harmful to both smokers and nonsmokers. Representative Lois Pines (D-Newton) is the author of the bill.

The legislation prohibits smoking in public elevators, supermarkets, and MBTA conveyances. Also, smoking is restricted to designated areas in museums, libraries, hospitals, nursing homes, trains, airplanes, and other mass transit conveyances.

The law also states that "an appropriate number of signs" shall be posted to show the designated No Smoking areas. The American Lung Assn. in Massachusetts are offering a limited number of these signs, conforming to all legal requirements, free of charge. The signs, as well as other materials, are available to anyone who would like to set up these No Smoking areas, either by law or voluntarily.

Rev. Walter E. Kloss of the American Lung Assn., a co-sponsor of the bill, said that, "though the Act does not cover all public places we originally intended (notably schools and Government offices), it sets a healthy precedent for both smokers and nonsmokers. Actually, the law should just be used as a last resort when all other attempts at getting a smoker to stop have failed."

"In fact, a recent survey throughout the Commonwealth has shown that most smokers will usually comply with a No Smoking request. And of course, national figures indicate that 64 percent of adult Americans are nonsmokers...a clear majority. This law, then promotes a sort of "peaceful coexistence" between smokers and nonsmokers."

The new No Smoking law drew active support from many legislators in both the House and Senate. Representative Pines was joined in the House by Representative Garreth Lynch (D-Westfield), an admitted smoker yet a strong supporter of "non-smokers rights." Senator Chester G. Atkins (D-Acton) helped to carry the bill through the Senate.

For more information, contact The American Lung Association of Boston. It's a matter of life and breath.

Uruguay - Will there be elections?

MONTEVIDEO (UPI) — The chief political question in Uruguay is whether the country will have presidential elections next year as scheduled, or an extension of President Juan Maria Bordaberry's term.

For years, Uruguay liked to think of itself as the democratic Switzerland of Latin America. For a time, it even tried government by committee with a rotating presidency. But all that has changed.

Bordaberry, 47, was elected in November 1971 for a five-year term, but two years ago staged a coup d'etat backed by the armed forces, allowing him to dissolve Parliament and assume extraordinary powers.

Taking the offensive, the military men in the past three years have virtually wiped out the leftwing Tupamaro urban guerillas, once capable of pulling off daring operations.

With total support from the military commanders, the president imposed rigid press censorship, virtually dissolved the political parties, prohibited public demonstrations by labor or political groups, outlawed the country's leftist labor federation and banned Communism and Socialism.

The armed forces, which traditionally kept out of Uruguayan politics, were gradually incorporated into the anti-Communist government to the point where they now share operation of the country with civilians.

Bordaberry has said publicly several times that he will not remain in office "a minute more nor a minute less" than the end of his term on March 1, 1977.

However, the text of a memorandum Bordaberry sent to the armed forces leadership during a week of friction in May appeared to indicate he had considered a request from the military men to prolong his period in office.

A version of the memo supplied by reliable sources shows the president saying he has no selfish ambition and looks upon the idea of an extension as "a new duty imposed on me by the circumstances and not for the satisfaction of any personal appetite."

Uruguay has been plagued by economic problems in recent years, beginning with the end of the Korean War when the demand for its traditional exports of beef fell off.

The peso has been devalued 31 times since Bordaberry became president, 11 times in 1974. The cost of ving has shot up 100 per cent each of the past three years.

Nor do Bordaberry and the army officers always agree, despite their close working relationship.

The week in May was the roughest period since the coup of June 1973. Its visible detonator was disagreement over actions of Eduardo Peile, acting president of the National Meat Board.

Bordaberry objected to Peile's policy of favoring small and medium cattlemen over the larger operators and fired him. The armed forces demanded Peile's reinstatement and ordered news media not to publish statements from the president's office unless they were cleared by the high military command first.

The crisis was settled when it was announced that Peile would remain on the meat board, but only as one of its members. A few days later, the board elected him vice president and it continued to carry out the policy he had introduced.

In late June, the government announced it had smashed an attempt by the Tupamaros, operating out of neighboring Argentina, to re-establish operations in Uruguay. Three guerrilla suspects were killed and 22 arrested in various raids, the government said.

In a recent patriotic ceremony, Labor and Social Security Minister Jose Etcheverry Stirling referred to reform of the constitution to protect the people "from the organized action of Marxist totalitarianism, at the service of foreign interests which used our institutions and our liberties to try to eliminate them forever." He did not spell out what the revision would involve or whether it would change the date of the November, 1976, elections.

Of the 69 highest mountains in the United States, 54 with elevations of 14,000 feet or higher are located in Colorado.

It costs from $14,167 to $29,662 to open a new restaurant in California, the Bank of American says.

Massachusetts travel notes by Department of Commerce

The Department of Commerce and Development of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts offers some places of interest to visit this summer and fall. The list follows:

Windsor Mill Crafts Center - formerly Windsor Mill, once famous for the canufacture of quality textile print fabrics, is being restored as a major crafts center. Located on Route 2 in North Adams, Mass., the center provides visitors with tours of the "Windsor" and its three resident craft studios.

Included in the hour-long program are visits to studios in glassblowing, hand pottery and instrument making, a slide presentation, and a visit to the exhibit area where goods handcrafted at the mill are displayed. Tours at Windsor Mill begin at 1 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

The Ninth Annual Plymouth Outdoor Art Show, which brings entries of 400 artists from all over Massachusetts and is viewed by close to 10,000 people, is scheduled from Sept. 13 through Sept. 21 in Brewster Gardens, Plymouth, Mass. The 10-day event, sponsored by the Plymouth Guild Art Assn., in cooperation with the Plymouth area Chamber of Commerce, is one of the highly acclaimed art exhibits in Eastern Massachusetts.

Boston Ballet Co. performing this week at Jacob's Pillow

The Boston Ballet Company brings two exciting programs to Jacob's Pillow during the week of August 5-9. The first includes the earthy "The Road of the Phoebe Show" (Choreography: Talley Beatty), with music by Duke Ellington and Billy Strayhorn, and "Tarantella," a dazzling and high-spirited piece by George Balanchine.

The alternate program includes Norman Walker's abstract contemporary ballet, "Concerto," set to Gottfried Stolzel's Concerto in D. The program will also include "Rags" (Choreography: Ron Cunningham), set to American ragtime tunes by Scott Joplin and others.

The Boston Ballet Company is New England's only professional ballet repertory company, and although the company has been in existence only eleven seasons, the Boston Ballet is one of America's largest dance companies. Under the guidance of artistic director, E. Virginia Williams, the Boston Ballet has performed the works of top American and European choreographers, and the company has presented some forty world premiers.

The company performs a repertoire of some seventy works—including such standard pieces as "The Nutcracker" (with orchestra under the direction of Arthur Fiedler), as well as new works by new choreographers under its "Choreographers Series."

The Boston Ballet gave more than fifty performances in the Boston area during the 1974-75 season, and has toured nationally for several seasons with support from the National Endowment for the Arts. The Boston Ballet is also the resident ballet company with the Chicago Lyric Opera.

Jacob's Pillow is located 150 miles from Boston, near Tanglewood, off Massachusetts Turnpike (Lee-Pittsfield Exit).

Performances—Tuesday thru Saturday—Tuesday at 7:30 p.m.; Wednesday, Friday and Saturday at 8:40 p.m. and Thursday and Saturday matinees at 3 p.m.

Drug, orgotein, not yet proven helpful for arthritis sufferers

A recent national newspaper article about the drug orgotein (trade name ontosein) for arthritis was headlined "Amazing New Drug Offers Hope for Millions of Arthritis Sufferers."

Calling it a "wonder drug" and "a real breakthrough" it quoted a physician in Denmark who has conducted tests on 200 patients as being very optimistic. It is the opinion of the Massachusetts Chapter of the Arthritis Foundation that this is another in a long line of exaggerated and premature reports.

For several years the Arthritis Foundation has been aware of orgotein as an experimental new drug for arthritis, chiefly as a result of inquiries and information from management consultant firms which had received promotional material from the manufacturers of the drug—presumably in efforts to stimulate stock sales.

The Chapter is aware of very few reports in the medical literature on testing of the drug to back up the claims of the company.

Orgotein is a product of Diagnostic Data Inc., a small company in Mountain View, California. It is a metalloprotein made from calves liver, is not a pure compound, and is given by injection. It has been approved for use in the U.S. in veterinary medicine, particultarly for treating inflammation in horses.

Orgotein for use in humans is only now beginning to get into serious in-depth testing.

"We are a long way from knowing whether or not it will turn out to be effective and safe as an anti-inflammatory arthritis agent," a foundation official said.

In the mantime, the Chapter has seen no real evidence that orgotein is even the equal of aspirin in effectiveness.

The findings so far have been inconclusive, and the feelings of the experts are negative rather than optimistic.

Although orgotein might eventually find a place in the treatment of arthritis, it will certainly not be a "wonder" or "breakthrough" drug.

British gardeners start digging for economy

LONDON (UPI) — When beleaguered Britons faced the threat of starvation in World War II, their government told them to get out and "dig for victory."

Now, faced with what the government has called their worst peacetime economic crisis, the watchword is "dig for economy."

Local councils in urban areas rent out communal plots of land known as allotments to their citizens. In the postwar years, when vegetables were cheap, allotments lay neglected, festering with weeds. Many were rented to professional market gardeners.

But suddenly vegetable prices have rocketed and allotments are in demand again. This spring local authorities had 57,000 more applicants for allotment plots than there was land available.

Seed merchants report a 20 per cent increase in sales of vegetable seeds, while the demand for flowering plants has declined.

Council officials agree that the alarming rise in the cost of vegetables accounts for the gardening boom. Four years ago fresh cabbage cost 12 cents each, the housewife could buy a cauliflower for 19 cents and new potatoes were a mere 5 cents a pound.

Prices in grocers shops this summer average 27 cents for cabbage, 48 cents for cauliflower, while new potatoes have become a luxury at 38 cents a pound.

"This is the biggest rush to allotments since the war when imports of vegetables were banned," said John Halhead, the man in charge of allotments in the London suburb of Sutton.

An increase in the number of high-rise apartments and a craze for home freezers have contributed to the grow-it-yourself habit.

Allotment cultivation is an egalitarian pastime. Plumbers, clerks and bookmakers jostle for space in the potato patch with psychologists and senior government officials.

Even the diarist of The Times secured an allotment — after months of waiting — and now regales readers with progress reports on his runner beans and news of last evening's homegrown salad supper.

"There is a different sort of person going in for allotment gardening nowadays," said Bill Milligan of the National Society for Leisure Gardeners.

"People are looking upon gardening as a healthy recreation and as a pleasant way of spending the weekend with the family rather than bashing away for hours on the motorway for just a couple of hours at the seaside."

Most gardeners find that a plot of 10 square rods (30 feet by 90), the regular size for an allotment, can support a family of four for the summer with some vegetables left over to give away to neighbors or sell to the local grocer.

A typical allotment will have a patch of potatoes, two rows of lettuce and some Brussels sprouts, carrots, beetroot and onions, with a few rows of runner beans or fruit bushes to complete the picture. Seed merchants report that gardeners are experimenting with new plants, particularly herbs.

'Scenes from American Life' interesting social commentary

By RANDY MUDARRI
Graphic Theater Critic

The Boston University Summer Repertory Theatre's production of "Scenes from American Life" is a social commentary by the author, Newton's A.R. Gurney Jr., on 20th Century life in America as experienced by WASP upper class society. The play comprises of about three dozen scenes in two acts. There is no plot, per se. Each scene tells its own little story.

A pianist opens the show with a medley of tunes that couldn't be more American: "America, the Beautiful," "Mickey Mouse," "Blowin' in the Wind," "Take Me Out to the Ball Game," "We're in the Money," "As Time Goes By," etc.

A better opening could not have been conceived; the mood is set, the leading character (America) is invisibly present in music. There is no question as to what this play will involve. America.

The title is very apropos. Practically every scene can be identified with by the people in the audience. Ever been up against "the system?" In this case, a scene focuses upon a citizen, registered as an Independent, trying to vote Republican. Ah, bureaucracy in all its splendor.

At a christening, a serious young woman wants to hold the baby and "talk" to it. "Responsibility!" she stresses, as she proceeds to spill her drink on the baby. "A second baptism," some chuckles.

At a tennis match, the scoring system is explained to a child, "Love means nothing." Think about it.

These are but a few of the scenes, the point being that the play is alternately humorous and cynical. Other scenes unveil the existence and absurdity of racial and religious prejudice, dwell upon Americans' various leisure activities, and even an Italian barber scene that reeks of sympatico.

When you stop to think about what the author had tried to do, you realize what a monumental task he had before him. In the play, time progresses from the Depression Era through Hitler, the McCarthy hearings, and on past the 1970's into the futur.. Gurney accomplished what he set out to do. By chronicling and scrutinizing facets of American life in the 20th Century, Gurney provides a social commentary on where America has been and where it is going.

The cast is composed of eight players (Laurie Campbell, John Newton, Anthony Pasqualini, Pamela Singer, William Snickowski, Melodie Somers, Daniel Von Bargen, and Sheila Keliher Walsh), each of whom plays several roles in the production. The acting is excellent overall, which is why no one player can be singled out above the others. Each player is able to display a wide variety of characterizations (thanks to Gurney, of course).

:rops are minimal, many are mimed. Each player is dressed in a gray suit or dress, with minor affectations required for certain scenes. The scene changes, a minor area that can be quite irritating when in incompetent hands, were very smooth and noteworthy in themselves. Harold Stone's direction is taut, keeping the pace fresh. Pianist Ralph Jenkins is theonly player on stage at all times. Jenkins has virtually no lines or roles, but just sitting at his piano, playing and observing, he is an integral part of the show and measures up to the task.

"Scenes from American Life" leads me to wonder what an objective non-American (if one exists) would think of our life. How would we appear? You, too, will be left wondering and thinking, during the play as well as fater. If you enjoy plays for their artistic merit, and enjoy being forced to think and ponder, "Scenes from American Life" is for you. You can see it through Aug. 16, alternating nightly with Eugene O'Neill's "Ah, Wilderness!" at the Boston University Theater at 264 Huntington Ave., Boston, near Symphony Hall.

Three students prepare for Emerson 'Carnival'

Jennifer Alpert of Auburndale, Michael Rosovsky of Newton, and Kathy Sias of Newton Centre have been cast in the Emerson College Youtheatre productions to be presented in August.

Jennifer, a seventh grader at Warren Junior High School, has been cast as Brenda, the plate balancer, and as a chorus girl in the Youtheater production of the Broadway musical "Carnival!"

This is her first time at Emerson as a part-time student. She is a regular in the Pomeroy Peanut Players of West Newton.

Michael, a second year student with the Emerson program, is a fifth grader at Underwood Elementary School. He has been cast as the trapeze artist and Ralph the strongman in "Carnival."

Kathy, a sophomore at Newton South High School, has been cast as Paula, the umbrella girl, as one of the four bluebirds and as a rope dancer.

The show will be performed at Emerson College the week of Aug. 11. Ticket information and reservations can be obtained by calling 262-2010 ext. 278.

Country Players select director for season opener

The Newton Country Players, winners of New England's "Best Production Award, 1975" have tapped John Deming of Newton Highlands to direct their season's curtain-raiser, Richard Rodgers and Oscar Hammerstein's Pulitzer Prize-winning musical, "South Pacific."

For the Players, Deming directed "And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little," also an entrant into the New England Theatre Conference Drama Festival. On an organization level, he has served as an officer and a member of the Board of Directors for the past three years.

On stage, Deming has appeared as Simon Gascoyne in the award-winning "The Real Inspector Hound," both during its regular run and at the Drama Festival and he portrayed all male roles in "Eve's Complaint," both at Newton Springfest '74 and again at the NETC Drama Festival.

Other directoral credits include "Antigone," "Remarkable Incident at Carson Corner," the musical "Sky High," "Ten Little Indians," "Twelve Angry Men," "Impromptu," "A Trophy for Mr. Heartfelt," "The Marriage Proposal" and "The Lottery."

Deming acted in or directed approximately 15 plays while an undergraduate at Marietta College, Ohio, where he received a BA in Public Speaking, Drama and English. He was awarded a Master of Science degree in Speech Pathology and Audiology at Emerson College, and has taken a number of extension courses at the U. of Maryland and U. of Vermont.

The production will be available for programming to sponsor groups and theatre parties interested in fund raising at the Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldridge St., Newton, with its seating capacity of 200. Organization bookings for alternate mid-week or Sunday dates will also be considered.

Adult social center has varied activities

STEPS, the adult social-recreational drop-in center of the Lutheran Church in Newton Center has now been open for three months.

Its primary goal is to enable those people living in the Newton-Wellesley-Weston area who are having trouble coping to have a place where they may visit, develop friendships, participate in programs, learn what is going on in their community, have lunch and enjoy themselves. The atmosphere is warm and friendly and the feeling is low key.

A special program or demonstration is planned for each session on Tuesday from 12:30 to 4 p.m.

In addition, a vareity of crafts, games, needle work, music, ping-pong and reading matter, are always available. Responsibility for planning programs is shared by clients and volunteer staff.

For further information call Irene Freedberg at the Newton-Wellesley - Weston Community Mental Health and Retardation Center, 969-3360.

Comedy John McKay and Patricia Merrill run for their lives in Woody Allen's comedy, "Don't Drink the Water," currently in performance at the 88 Dinner Theater in Nashua, N.H., through Aug. 29. The comedy about American tourists who are mistaken for spies and take refuge in the American embassy in a foreign country is staged Wednesday, Friday and Saturday evenings.

Too many lose sleep over insomnia

Few people are harmed by an occasional tense day or sleepless night, but at the rate which patients request sedatives and-or tranquilizers from their physicians, one would think such an occurrence is "the end of the world."

These two calssifications of drugs—often called downers—are the most frequently requested, prescribed and misused preparations in the United States. "Only about one-tenth of the sedatives and tranquilizers prescribed are actually necessary," says Dr. James Cooper, assistant professor of clinical pharmacy at the University of Rhode Island.

"Experiments and studies on healthy young males, and observations on others, indicated that sleep deprivation is compatible with necessary performance for a long period of time," he added. "Such a loss of sleep does not create a cumulative sleep debt, which must be eventually paid back."

One of the worst problems of sedatives and tranquilizers, Dr. Cooper pointed out, is that the user becomes dependent on them. "They do have a legitimate use during a period of bereavement and emotional upset such as a divorce," he said. "But within a month or two, the patient becomes reliant on them rather than his or her own inate ability to deal with tensions."

The category of drugs Dr. Cooper is describing includes such frequently prescribed barbituates as Librium, Valium, Serax and Tranxene and some non-barbituates such as Quaalude. All of them will relieve anxiety. But they also lower sensory perception, reactivity to the environment and alertness.

"When taking these drugs for sleep, it is important to consider what is going on the next day," Dr. Cooper said. "Operating moving objects may be dangerous, and the ability to make important decisions or judgments may also be impaired."

A number of these drugs also have a residual effect which means they affect the body for more than a one day span. Frequently a patient who feels he or she needs sleep medication may find the same benefits from taking the dosage every other day or every third day.

Their effect is also easily multiplied by other medications such as antihistamines, most major tranquilizers, and some analgesics such as morphine and Demerol. Alcohol and downers can be a deadly combination and should never be mixed, the URI professor said. "Taking sleeping pills after a big party often leads to a quick trip to the emergency room for overdose treatment if the user is lucky enough to have someone notice his prolonged sleep from which the individual cannot be aroused."

One of the most frequently sedated groups in this country are the elderly who live in long-term care facilities.

"Patients are agitated because they are disoriented when they are deprived of family contacts and confused by their institutionalization," Dr. Cooper said. "Sedation is used as a restraint. Not only does this limit the patient's ability to interact with his or her environment, it can lead to stasis pneumonia because of lack of movement. Because the medication gives the patient a greater feeling of balance than he or she actually has, it may lead to falls and broken bones," he said.

Towers auctioned

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

The land where the Towers at Chestnut Hill were to be built was sold at public auction Tuesday, probably signaling the end of any plans to build the luxury condominium complex.

The 17-acre parcel went to the only bidder, the First Pennsylvania Bank N.A., the holder of the foreclosed $1.7 million mortgage, which with accumulated interest had reached $2.2 million.

Mario DiCarlo of Newton, a co-trustee of the Chestnut Hill Towers Trust which owned the land and had hoped to develop it, attended the auction, but the other trustee, Albert J. Goodman of Detroit, was absent.

The effect of the sale of the land on the agreement between the Newton Community Development Foundation and the Chestnut Hill Towers Trust is not clear, although a lawyer for the Boston firm representing the Philadelphia bank has said in the past that if the property were sold, the agreement would no longer be binding on the owners.

The Board of Aldermen attached the agreement that the Towers would help NCDF build 50 units of low- and moderate-income housing instead of providing 10 percent of its housing to the Newton Housing Authority for its subsidized housing program.

The total financial assistance that the Towers would give is $162,000, of which some has already been paid.

City Solicitor Howard Levine said this week that it is clear to him that the agreement is attached to the permissive use.

Therefore, it may be interpreted that if a new permissive use is sought by a new owner, the Board of Aldermen may attach the same type of agreement to the new permissive use.

The auction held this week had been postponed three times while the trustees tried to reorganize the trust after filing a petition of bankruptcy.

The trust ran into trouble in 1973, when Ald. Mark White discovered that the permissive use to build the 428-unit condominium buildings had expired. During the delay in getting the permissive use extended by the Board of Aldermen, the trust lost its commitment for construction financing and was never able to finance the project again.

In addition to the $2.2 million owed the First Pennsylvania Bank, the trust owed the City of Newton $170,000 in back real estate taxes and accumulated interest, which will be paid by the bank.

The Volpe Construction Co., which did the site preparation for several years, reportedly is owed nearly $5 million, and Saunders & Associates, which acted as sales agents for the condominiums at one time is suing both the trust and Goodman personally for $1 million for "deceit and misrepresentation," Donald Saunders said Tuesday.

The bank was represented in the transaction by W. Jon Sieck, Jr., assistant vice-president.

Sieck said the bank will offer the land for resale, but the price has not been determined.

It is well known that the owners of the adjacent Chestnut Hill Mall, which has already been having parking problems, are interested in acquiring more parking area.

One person formerly affiliated with the Towers expressed surprise that the Volpe company had not bid on the property.

The future development of the land will be doubtful in any event. The property is now Residence F, a district created for the Towers several years ago.

Residence F specifically allows only apartment buildings and hotels up to 60

Lower Falls developer's plan before aldermen

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

Developer Spaulding & Slye's proposed three building design, which Lower Falls residents battled to have constructed on the Washington Street commercial redevelopment site, is now the subject of aldermanic scrutiny. Also, delays in signing a lease with a prospective tenant for the first building has caused the developer to be in "default" in their agreement with the Newton Redevelopment Authority.

In addition, rumors have been circulating around the city saying the developer lacked financial stability. In refuting these reports, Charles Spaulding, the corporations's president, stated his firm was "in great shape."

He said Spaulding and & Slye had the financing for the Newton project. The prospective prime tenant, the Massachusetts General Life Insurance Company, is to occupy the top floor of the building. E.J. Fitzwilliams, administrative vice president for the insurance company, stated one week ago there are "no incumbrances or problems with the signing of the lease." He predicted it would be signed by August 18 and attributed the delay to vacationing staff.

Default would mean that the developer would forfeit a $6,600 deposit and the authority would retain all their designs and construction plans. However, in a report to the aldermanic Land Use Committee, the NRA indicated it had consulted with the department of Housing and Urban Development, the Department of Community Affairs, the Lower Falls Project Area Committee and the Department of Community Affairs.

All these groups agreed it would "be in the best interest of the city to continue the development by the selected developer due to the present economic and market conditions and any further loss of time and expense."

The fluctuating economy is why the developer asked to have the lot subdivided into three parcels and sold in three stages.

Agencies haggle over nursing money

Two agencies working toward the same objective have collided, and sparks are flying.

The friction started when the director of the Department of Human Services obtained $1800 to help pay the expenses of the Silver Lake Family Nursing Health Center in Nonantum. This small clinic is staffed with a nurse from the Visiting Nurse Association for three hours a day, five days a week.

Jane Pitt, Human Services director, would like to see full utilization of the building and would supply additional personnel, conduct health screenings, and provide social services during the hours when the VNA is not staffing the clinic.

The $1800 to help pay the rent and utilities came from "budget reserve," a category of funds which keeps the money from being spent but requires an appropriation.

And the $1800 was part of $2960 that had once been budgeted for the VNA but had been deleted from the city budget. Ms. Pitt says she was instrumental in having the money put into budget reserve rather than being struck out altogether.

Ms. Florence Tankevich, director of the VNA, doesn't quite see it that way. She said last week at a Finance Committee meeting that she had not been informed that the city's usual contribution to the VNA had been put out of reach, and objected strenuously to the use of what she regards as VNA money for the suggested purpose.

But Finance Committee Chairman Sidney Small pointed out that the fact that the money had been put into budget reserve indicated that there was a strong chance that the money would never have been given to the VNA at all.

During budget review, there was considerable discussion about whether to continue payments to the VNA.

Ms. Tankevich said this week that her budget is "planned and balanced" for the year, and the loss of the expected $2960 will mean than the VNA will have to "earn it" with special programs. Being a United Way organization, the VNA is not allowed to do any fundraising.

The VNA serves Newton and Wellesley, making 14,000 visits a year.

Most visits are paid for, but when necessary free care is given. In Newton in 1974, 1042 free home visits were made.

The VNA annual budget is $250,000 a year, which comes from various sources, such as Blue Cross Blue Shield, Medicare, welfare, and charitable organizations, as well as the United Way.

The VNA's staffing and contribution toward the operation of the Silver Lake Center came from seed money available as short-term grants, Ms. Tankevich explained, and the VNA never intended to assume responsibility for the long-term operation.

Either the city or the center itself, which is partially supported also by the Nonantum Women's Club and the Nonantum Children's Christmas Party Association, will have to find the financial support.

Trio makes bicycle trip from Canada

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Waiting for the Wells Fargo wagon could only have been half as thrilling as the wait on Randlett Park Sunday afternoon.

Three groups of parents in Bermuda shorts were anxiously watching for three sons to arrive home from a two-month bicycle trip from Vancouver, Canada.

Jay Lorry, 18, of 34 Randlett Pk., West Newton, Bruce McKenna, 18, of 270 Linwood Ave., Newtonville, and Brian Egan, 17, of Watertown Street in Watertown, pedaled in on schedule at 5:20 p.m., completing the last leg of the trip from West Sutton, Mass.

Although there were no doctors on the scene to give them a quick physical, all they all looked full of energy and willing to ride around the street for some dramatic reentry photographs.

Jay lost five pounds on the diet that centered around peanut butter, spaghetti, tuna fish, and chicken spread. Brian was even daring enough to try a cold spaghetti sandwich, but one was enough for the whole 55 days on the road.

The boys averaged 65 miles per day, but the first day was the roughest physically because they had been resting on the train for three days.

They also had to make a lot of pit stops in the beginning to change the 11 flats they had before they changed tires from lightweight racing to normal 10-speed tires and wheel rims. They mailed the lightweight rims home.

The weather was fine for most of their trip, except for hailstorms in the Rockies. That spell of rain in the east we had last week also caught them by surprise.

The only other natural hazard they rode into were the mosquitos outside Yellowstone Park.

In the July 11 Idaho Park Villager they were featured under the column "Tourists of the Week," in which Bruce said, "'Idaho is beautiful, and a lot like back home.'"

But back home is always different. No one in Idaho was anxious to see how long Bruce's beard was. Mrs. McKenna said in the driveway while waiting, "Bruce hasn't shaved since he left."

All three agreed that the people out west were friendlier than the easterners. The changing point seemed to be Iowa, where Brian came nose to nose with two shotguns.

In the first incident Brian met three girls outside their home and asked if their parents were home. They said their mother would be home shortly, and Brian planned to ask her if he could stay there for the night's lodging.

When he went back to the door, the two of the three girls came to the front, while the third stayed in the back with a shotgun.

"I never figured they were scared," Brian said.

The three of them got tired of using their tent after about a month and would split up to seek their own shelter for the nights.

At another home in Iowa, Brian was greeted at the door by an "old lady" and a shotgun.

"I said, 'Well, just forget it,'" Brian told the family gathering.

Whenever the three of them split up while riding in the day, they would stop cars to find out if the others had been sighted. This was harder in the east also, since drivers were more reluctant to stop.

They were all caught by surprise at the hills in the Appalachian Mountains, which $700,000 expected for North site work

Newton will almost certainly receive nearly $700,000 from the state for reimbursements for site work at Newton North High School.

This amounts to 40 percent of $1,745,000 that the city has approved for spending or already spent at the high school since it was built in 1969.

The School Buildings Advisory Bureau of the State Board of Education had previously denied the reimbursement because they claimed it was not part of the original plans for the school.

The funding includes $1.2 million for the site work needed to rebuild the playing fields at the school, $173,750 for heating, ventilation, and air conditioning, $208,000 to enclose hazardous asbestos, and $163,000 for the student mall.

These were the amounts Building Commissioner Gene Larson submitted to SBAB Aug. 1. He said the bureau will meet next on Aug. 26.

City Solicitor Howard Levine intervened in the case to convince SBAB that the work was part of the original plans for the school.

Levine said the School Committee had included in its original discussions six years ago plans for the athletic field to be made on the site of the former high school which was torn down after the new one was built.

When the plans for the new school were approved by SBAB, Newton said field plans would be submitted later when estimated prices would be closer to real costs.

With this understanding the School Committee submitted "Phase one" of the plans for building and 25 feet beyond, Levine said.

SBAB denied requests of John Gilleland, director of support services for the School Department, when he explained to the SBAB the agreement on the two sets of plans, but Levine said SBAB denied the request in February, 1974.

Solicitor Levine presented a brief to the SBAB and the Attorney General last fall explaining the agreement for two sets of plans, and he ruled that the state must give Newton the reimbursement for the site work.

Since that rulling in November, 1974, the School Committee and the city have been preparing the plans that were submitted this month.

Investigation of Transcript fire continues

State and local officials are continuing investigations of a $100,000 fire that destroyed the editorial and bookkeeping offices of the Transcript Newspapers Inc. last week.

Transcript Newspapers is the parent-company of the Newton Graphic with headquarters in Dedham.

Arson is the suspected cause of the two-alarm fire that broke out at approximately 3 a.m. last Thursday morning.

The three-story building remains standing, but is gutted inside.

Firefighters battled for nearly four hours in a driving rain to bring the fire under control.

The first alarm was sounded last Thursday shortly after 3 a.m. when Peter Downey, the Newton Graphic distributor, arrived at the plant to pick up Thursday's Graphic for distribution at Newton post offices and carrier homes.

Downey notified the Dedham Fire Department.

He said that while he was preparing bundles of papers for loading, he heard "a bang" followed by "a crackling sound."

"I ran to the rear and saw an orange glow," he said. "It was all in flames."

Downey said he then ran across the street to the Dedham Fire Department. The alarm was struck at 3:20 a.m. A second alarm was sounded seven minutes later.

Two containers believed to have contained gasoline were found outside the back of the building not far from where the fire started.

Shortly after the all-out at 7:20 a.m., news department employees, working in a makeshift newsroom in the composing room of the plant, began production of the Thursday edition of the Daily Transcript, the paper serving Needham, Dedham, Norwood and Westwood.

Telephone Company and Boston Edison emergency crews arrived, and by 8 a.m.

Transcript General Manager Paul J. Massey termed the structure a "total loss."

Desks and typewriters that sustained only smoke and water damage were salvaged and placed in the makeshift newsroom. UPI news and photo wires, destroyed in the blaze, were replaced.

Transcript Sports Editor Frank Wall, who had his office where the fire was believed to have originally started, lost his entire career collection of mementos, trophies and pictures.

Youth found guilty on assault, damage charges

By CYNTHIA BLACK
of the Graphic Staff

A 17-year-old Newton Centre youth was found guilty and placed on probation for one year Monday on charges of malicious damage to property and assault with a dangerous weapon.

Dennis Berger, 17, of 35 Ellison Rd., Newton Centre, was also ordered by Judge Robert A. Belmonte in Newton District Court Monday to make restitution in an amount to be determined by the probation department for damage to an automobile that was involved in the incident.

Berger had entered a plea of innocent on both charges.

At the trial Monday' Beatrice Holford of Dorchester testified she was on her way to Newton on Rt. 9 June 21 at about 11 p.m. and was nearing the Parker Street exit when a car came up very fast behind her and passed her. When it passed she ' testified, it was so close she had to "swerve" to avoid being hit.

Ms. Holford said the car went up the Parker Street exit ramp and stopped and when she reached the top of the exit ramp' an occupant of the car "jumped out of the car with something in his hand and ran toward my car."

She identified the person as Berger.

She said she swerved around him and made her left turn on to Parker Street. Her destination was the home of Frederick Foster at 40 Roosevelt Rd.

Ms. Holford testified that the car with Berger in it followed her down Parker Street and Roosevelt Road where "they ran me off the road onto the lawn of the Foster home."

Ms. Holford said Berger got out of the car again' came over to her car with "an instrument" in his hand and "started to beat the top of the car with the instrument' and his fists." She said he kicked the car' tried to break the windows and tried to open the doors on the right side of the car.

Ms. Holford said she blew the horn to attract attention.

"He was shouting profanities," she testified.

"Get out of here and go back where you belong"' Ms. Holford said Berger yelled.

With her in the car were her daughter' Leslie, and James Foster' son of the Frederick Fosters.

The Fosters and Ms. Holford and her daughter are black. Berger is white.

She testified that Berger finally got back into the other car and it left.

The senior Foster' awakened by the commotion had summoned police.

Ms. Holford said that after the car Berger was in left the scene, she and the occupants of her car got out. Police arrived at that time.

About 20 minutes later, she testified' the same car came back down Roosevelt Road. She identified it' and the police stopped the car.

Defense Atty. Dante Mummolo when he cross-examined Ms. Holford asked her if she was sure it was Berger "who came and hit your car."

"Yes," she replied.

James Foster' 14' also called to testify by District identified the "object" Ms. Holford had Atty. Richard Steinberg' been referring to as an antenna.

Frederick Foster testified that he "had just retired" when he heard "a lot of commotion outside" and looked out the window.

He testified that he saw Berger "beating on the car and hollering."

"I ran downstairs and outside' and they took off"' he said of Berger and other occupants of the car.

Berger testified in his own defense.

He told the court that he and three friends were coming down Route 9 and were going to get off at the Parker Street exit and that the Holford car "swerved in front of us and cut us off."

Berger said he could not tell who was in the car' only that the car was "full."

Berger testified the driver of the car he was in also turned left on Parker Street' but stopped on the bridge for a minute "because the driver was scared" by having been cut off.

Berger said he and his friends proceeded down Parker Street to Roosevelt Road because they were going to Newton South High School and Roosevelt Road is an access road to the high school.

Berger testified that when they got to Roosevelt Road' the Holford car was stopped in the middle of the street and he and his friends could not get past it.

"I was scared"' he said. "We were trapped."

Berger said he did pick up the antenna and get out of his car and approach the Holford car. He told the court he never got any closer than 10 feet from the Holford car.

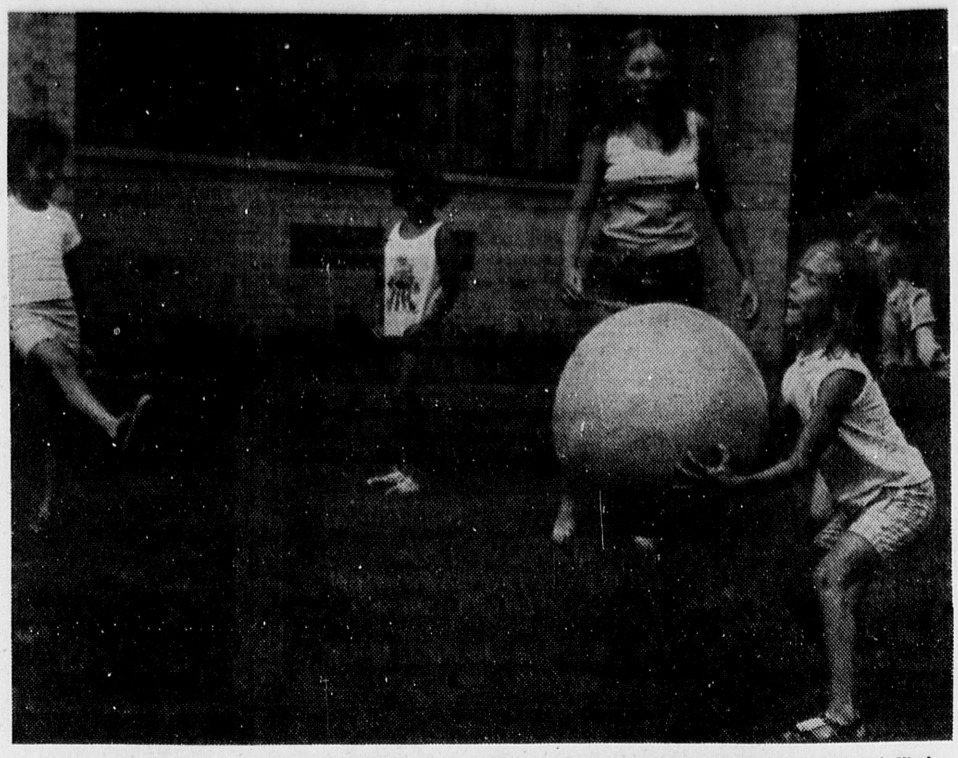

He denied kicking the car or beating on it and said he took the antenna for "self-defense" because he was scared.

He siad the police did stop them when they were coming back from South High' where he said they had gone to meet a friend.

An officer took him home' he said.

"At any time did you know whether the people in the car were black or white?" the defense attorney asked.

"When the police made me get out of the car"' Berger responded. He maintained throughout his recollection of the incident that he could not see who was in the car.

Pines may need 66,000 signatures to put bottle bill on 1976 ballot

PINES FILES INITIATIVE PETITION

Representative Lois G. Pines last week filed a binding initiative petition with the Attorney General that would mandate a deposit on all carbonated beverage and beer containers sold in Massachusetts und that would ban the sale of cans with flip tops in 1977.

Between September and November of 1975, 56,000 signatures in support of the proposal must be collected in order for the initiative petition to be submitted to the legislature for approval.

If the state legislature then rejects the proposal as it has in the past, an additional 10,000 signatures are necessary before the initiative petition can appear on the state ballot in November of 1976. The proposal will become law if the majority of Massachusetts citizens vote in its favor in November, 1976.

Rep. Pines said, "I have decided to presen tht eBottle Bill to the Massachusetts public in the form of an initiative petition because I am convinced that the citizens of our Commonwealth support the proposed legislation.

"For the past five years the powerful influence exerted by the industrial lobby and by individual glass and can companies has succeeded in blinding legislators to the overwhelming benefits of the bill to the wider public. My efforts to pass the bill throug the legislature have been continually frustrated by vested interests."

Rep. Pines continued, "No doubt, profits of glass manufacturers may decline once the "Bottle Bill" is enacted. If we don't continue to buy and throw away tens of billions of bottles each year, bottlers will lose some of their profits.

"On the other hand, according to Dr. Richard Kopcke of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, enactment could lead to the creation of up to 1600 new jobs includingmany high paying trucking jobs. A whole new recycling industry would be created."

Rep. Pines noted tpat a returnable bottle law should result in a decline in the wholesale price of carbonated beverages by as much as 10 percent. Other major benefits of a bottle law would be the tremendous savings in raw materials and energy usage.

I"If the country converted back to a returnable system, energy demands in the container and packaging industry would be reduced by 55 percent.

"Additional fringe benefits would be a reduction in roadside litter and a partial solution to the solid waste problem. A bottle law in Oregon has reduced the number of cans and bottles littering the roadside by 92 percent.

"Oregon and Vermont have received overwhelming consumer support for their returnable container laws," she added.

"In Oregon, 90 percent of the bottles are returned, and in Vermont the return rate is 94 percent. A survey of consumer attitudes in Oregon shows that over 80 percent of the consumers found the inconvenience of returning containers to be minimal.

"The 'Bottle Bill' won't cause the consumer any real inconvenience, since he or she must return to the supermarket on a regular basis, with or without returnable bottles."

The legislature would require a minimum deposit of five cents on beverage containers with a capacity of less than 32 ounces, and a minimum deposit of 10 cents on bottles holding 32 ounces or more.

Co-singers of the initiative petition with Rep. Pines include: Sen. James A. Kelly, Jr., (D-Oxford), Sen. John Olver (D-Amherst), Rep. Richard J. Dwinell (D-Millbury), Rep. Charles F. Flaherty, Jr., (D-Cambridge), Massachusetts Public Interest Research Group (Mass. PIRG), Massachusetts Selectmen's Association, Citizens for Participation in Political Action, Catherine Faucher of Newton, President of the Massachusetts Federation of Women's Clubs, Dana Duxbury of Andover and Barbara Balasa of Newton Highlands.

Many other environmental and public interest groups are supporting the effort, including the Mass. Audubon Society and Mass. Forest and Park Association.

Lightning causes fire in firefighter's home

Lightning caused a fire in the Wellesley home of Newton firefighter James Murphy Tuesday night, causing extensive damage to two sections of the room of the house.

Wellesley firefighters answered the first alarm at 48 Cedar St., Wellesley, at 8 p.m. The fire was under control in about 30 minutes and the Fire Department left the scene at 10:40 p.m.

Murphy was on duty in the Newton Corner fire station at the time of the fire.

Newton and Needham Fire Departments offered assistance to cover for the Wellesley department while it fought the fire.

Newton Fire Department headquarters lists Murphy's address at 48 Cedar St., but the Wellesley Fire Department listed the only occupant as Elizabeth Pettipas.

Murphy could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Newton-at-128 office building held for more engineering work

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

A plan proposed by Dom Saraceno for the construction of a five and one-half story office building in the Newton-at-128 office park has been temporarily delayed by the aldermanic Land Use Committee. According to Charles Thomas, city planning director, the plan needed "additional engineering work."

Saraceno's plans were first aired before the Conservation Commission this week because the site is located in a flood plain. Oscar Wasserman of State Properties of New England, owners of the office park, presented the proposal to the commissioners.

As other developers have done in this shifting economy, Wasserman stated that Saraceno "has personal problems" and would like to bypass the conservation hearing to avoid delay. While these hearings are mandated by law, the commisioners indicated later that when the plans come before them they would not hold them up providing the building is is above flood plain elevation and the gravel is cleared by from the Country Club Brook adjacent to the site.

After Wasserman left, Commissioner Deborah Howard commented that his appearance touched off "preliminary battle over the Nahanton wetland." If there was a battle, it would be over the remainder of the land that the developer proposes to build on. There is one more office site north of Cramer electronics.

In addition, Wasserman has indicated that plans for a two building, five story condominium are in the offing. Such a condominium would be in the area backing up to Mt. Ida College. This property is presently zoned for single residence. Wasserman said it had taken "two years to develope a plan compatible with conservation."

State Developer Properties is presently building the Arboretum condominiums in Peabody which sell for roughly $48,000-50,000.

Near the office complex are two parcels of land, one running along the side of the office park and the other in back of the Charles River Skating Rink. The strip alongside the park was sold to the city for $10 an acre and is 30 acres. The commission wants to gain jurisdiction over this strip so they can enforce the "option agreement" as abutters.

cording to Charles Thomas, this agreement means that the city can exercise "controls" over the development in the industrial park and was entered into when the property was originally rezoned.

On the land in back of the rink, the commissioners were concerned that motorcycle activity had caused erosion. However, policing of the area cannot take place until signs are posted and signs cannot be posted until that area has a name. The MDC has that responsibility.

In other commission business, Chairman Dennis Terry Ditelberg commented he had been reassured proposed legislation introduced by Morris merging the Newton Housing Authority and the Newton Redevelopment Authority, would not infringe on the Conservation Commission's authority.

While one commissioner commented this legislation was "at least three years away," there was some reservation toward it. Some saw it as "putting too much under one division (the planning department)...and everyone will be bidding for his (Charles Thomas) attention...and he's got enough to do."

The commissioners are awaiting word on their request for office space at City Hall. Almost eight years old, the commission minutes are the in the City Clerk's office, but all correspondence and files on Hatch Act activities are in Commissioner Helen Heyn's home.

Natick teen injured in cycle crash

A Natick man remains in intensive care at Newton-Wellesley Hospital after he lost control of his motorcycle on Washington Street in West Newton Sunday.

John J. Savilomis, Jr., 18, of East Central Street, Natick, had just passed a car on his 1972 BSA cycle when he hit the curb and guardrail going east over the Massachusetts Turnpike bridge at 12:23 p.m. Sunday.

A hospital spokeswoman said he suffered multiple fractures and is in stable condition.

Keefe Ward 3 candidate for School Committee

John J. Keefe, of 365 Austin St., West Newton, has announced his candidacy for School Committee for Ward 3.

Keefe, a lifelong resident of Newton, graduated from Our Lady's High School, attended St. John's College in New York and has taken extensive educational courses at Boston University and at the University of Massachusetts. A Veteran of World War II, he the father of four children who have all attended the Newton Schools.

Currently, Keefe serves on the Mayor's Finance Advisory Commission, the School Buildings Advisory Commission, was a member of the board of directors of the Newton Centennial Commission, and is on the steering committee of CAREABOUT-TURNABOUT (Newton Drug Program), and a member of the Newton Council No. 167 of the Knights of Columbus.

As a concerned taxpayer, and a member of the Finance Commission, Keefe has attended meetings of the School Committee for the past several years. He is genuinely concerned with the lack of communication between the business services office of the School Department, and users of such services, and the City Government.

John J. Keefe

In his opinion, a more businesslike approach should be taken in the purchasing and use of services and materials required by the various departments within the school system.

"Value should be received for every cent expended on the administration of the school system," said Keefe.

"I feel, also, that no neighborhood school should be closed without a complete analysis and evaluation of the impact it would have on the community in regards to property value and hardships placed upon the children and the parents," he continued.

"In essence" Keefe said, "the presence of a dedicated businessman, with an extensive background in the functions of what a business service operation can and should provide for each dollar expended, is essential in a well run operation. I am prepared to provide this expertise to the School Committee, and thereby attempt to streamline the present operation and utilize the existing facilities to their fullest extent for the benefit of the community as a whole."

In addition to the organizations mentioned above, Keefe is a member of the Massachusetts Association of Sanitarians, and Post 440 of the American Legion.

Land Use Committee

Estate conversion and Newtonville apartments opposed by neighbors

The second test of a new ordinance allowing some large houses on large lots to be converted to two- or multi-family use evoked unanimous opposition from Chestnut Hill neighbors Monday night at a meeting of the Land Use Committee.

Henry Hornblower wants to convert his 27-room, seven-bathroom house at 100 Essex Rd. to a four-unit house.

The house is situated on 167,000 square feet of land.

About 45 neighbors opposed the granting of the petition mainly on the grounds that it would change the character of the neighborhood, that the streets cannot take the additional traffic that would be generated, and that it would decrease property values.

David Hawkins, treasurer of the Chestnut Hill School, a private institution on Hammond Street, said he thought traffic problems on the narrow surrounding streets might lead to a decrease in enrollment in the school, and "10 students would make a big difference to us in tuition."

One of the attractions of the Chestnut Hill School, Hawkins said, is that children may walk safely in the area.

A representative for Mr. and Mrs. Hornblower, who are in Europe, said the owners want first to convert to two large apartments, then at some later time have the right to complete the conversion.

The Planning Department has recommended approval of the petition, subject to a few minor conditions.

If the petition is denied, the Hornblowers have the choice of three different subdivisions, two of which would preserve the building.

The first could create three parcels of land, one containing the house. The second would require the building of a road through the property in order to provide enough frontage per lot, and would end up with five house lots.

If the existing house were demolished and a new street built, the property could be divided into six house lots.

A similar petition for 315 Franklin St. was recently denied.

In contrast to the total opposition to the Hornblower petition, no one opposed a petition from Dr. Edward M. Mahoney to build a four-unit townhouse at the corner of Watertown and Walnut Streets, Newtonville.

Mahoney said at the hearing that he would rather build the townhouses than two two-family houses, which he could do in the private-residence district, because the former will be "more in harmony" architecturally with the rest of the neighborhood.

Another Newtonville proposal, a petition from Jack Antaramian to build a 19-unit apartment building on Washington Street between Lowell Avenue and Brooks Avenue, was met with opposition from neighbors.

Marcene Marcoux of Brooks Avenue called the plan the "the best of the worst," and said in her opinion there should be no more than 10-12 units.

"The question," she said, "is not whether there should be apartments, but how many."

Antaramian was represented at the hearing by State Rep. Peter Harrington, a former alderman, who lives on Lowell Avenue, a few houses down from the proposed apartment site.

The building would avoid the purely rectangular or square shape, Harrington pointed out. Harrington was always concerned with the aesthetics of new apartment buildings when he was a member of the Board of Aldermen.

The building is basically rectangular on the plan, with some jogs at the corners. Parking will be underground.

The building will be 34 feet high and will be covered with brick veneer.

All the apartments would have two bedrooms, Harrington said, and the developer will lease two of the units to the Housing Authority for low-income families.

The Planning Department recommends approval of the plan, subject to revision of parking layout and some other site considerations.

Charles River ice rink may be bought for city

The Charles River Skating Center mortgage was foreclosed about ten days ago, and the facility is now the property of the Mutual Bank for Savings.

Richard Jones of the Mutual Bank for Savings said Tuesday that "no plans have been formulated yet" for the ultimate in the Wells Avenue industrial park. disposition of the rink

The ice rink was known to be in financial difficulty last winter or before.

Ald. Richard Bullwinkle tried to get Mayor Theodore Mann interested in acquiring the rink for city use, but so far no concrete result has come from that suggestion.

The Metropolitan District Commission was asked by State Sen. Jack Backman to consider purchasing the rink.

Since that action, former Commr. John Sears has left the MDC, and a Waltham resident, John Snedeker, has been appointed to head up the agency.

Mayor Mann said at a press conference Tuesday that he has an appointment with Snedeker next Wednesday to discuss several matters, including the MDC's commitment to developing the Riverside recreation complex, increasing the potential for the passive use of the Charles River, and the Charles River rink.

Since the MDC plan to create a recreation area at Riverside has apparently fallen through, Mann feels there is still a need for a skating facility to serve Wellesley, Needham and Newton. The Riverside complex plans included a skating rink.

At one time the rumored sale price of the Charles River rink was $1.1 million.

Jones said this week that the asking price will be decided within about a month' and emphasized that the rink is continuing in operation.

The rink is in a limited-manufacturing district. The building could therefore be used for a variety of purposes other than its present use.

Jones said, however, that he considers the skating rink the best use.

Stop the abuses

If the ADA had its way, Massachusetts would become a ghost state.

Steven P. Cohen, president of the Massachusetts Chapter of the Americans for Democratic Action, has urged the enactment of a tax package in the 700 million to $800 million range.

The tax program proposed initially by Governor Dukakis, which drew a volley of protests, amounted to $689 million.

Cohen, head of the ultra-liberal Democratic organization, delcared that poor people will go hungry if suggested reductions are made in the welfare budget.

Nobody wants poor people to go hungry or to suffer hardship in any way. Adequate funds could be provided to help the poor people if the cheats, chiselers and crooks, now receiving welfare aid, were weeded out from the relief rolls.

While Mr. Cohen undoubtedly was motivated by the highest purpose and objectives, the hard fact is Massachusetts cannot stand a $700 million or $800 million tax bill. It would defeat its own purposes.

A tax measure of that amount would cause a vicious circle of reaction. It would lower the purchasing power of the average wage earner. It would cause well-to-do person residing in the border areas to move out of Massachusetts to one of the neighboring states where the tax burden is not so oppressive.

It would drive business and industry out of Massachusetts, causing a loss of jobs, and it would discourge industry from locating new plants in Massachusetts. all those side effects could eventually make Massachusetts a ghost state and send it into bankruptcy.

Members of the Legislature know that, and Governor Dukakis knows it. Dukakis was making statements to that effect when he was promising there would be no new taxes if he was elected Governor.

The legislators also knew that the peo ple back in their districts—the voters who elect them and reelect them—would rebel against a $689 million tax bill and would be likely to vent their displeasure in next year's election on any law-makers who supported such an increase in taxes.

The people have the power to get the laws they want and to block those they don't want—if they use that power.

That is why the legislators served notice they would not pass a $689 million tax program. It is also the real reason Governor Dukakis reversed himself and agreed to make cuts in his budget after insisting the budget could not be reduced.

Whether a majority of the legislators would vote for $400 million in new taxes is uncertain. Many Democratic leaders believe they would. But the opinion here is that they would not.

Even if there were no tax crisis, Governor Dukakis, who obviously is trying to do the right thing, should order drastic steps to weed out those persons receiving welfare assistance who are not entitled to it.

The urgent need for higher taxes is all the more reason for doing so. The present situation in the welfare department is unfair to the honest, struggling, overburdened taxpayer. The welfare abuses should be stopped.

Mrs. Rosenblum's letter

By CYNTHIA BLACK
Newton Graphic Editor

On Friday, July 25, Eleanor Rosenblum, chairwoman of the School Committee, sent a package of material to members of several Newton organizations.

She also delivered the same material to the Newton Graphic. Ours contained a copy of a letter to the editor, a copy of her statement and a copy of the consent judgment in the case of the taxpayers vs. Newton for restoration of $500,000 cut from the school budget.

Theirs, apparently, contained the same material, with one exception. They got a cover letter and the Graphic did not.

So PTA presidents, Community Schools Commission, League of Women Voters, Black Citizens of Newton, Newton Taxpayers Association, Newton Citizens for Education, Newton Teachers Association, litigants in the taxpayers' suit and Citizens Advisory Committee on Declining Enrollment, this column, hopefully, will explain the facts.

This is the letter she sent that she did not give the Graphic:

"Because of the gross distortions in the July 24 edition of the Newton Graphic which purports to report on the consent judgment entered into by the group of taxpayers, the Board of Aldermen and the School Committee in relation to the taxpayers' suit for restoration of a $500,000 cut in the school's 1975-76 budget, I am supplying to you a copy of the statement I issued to the newspapers on Tuesday afternoon immediately after the announcement of the consent judgment. When informed that the statement was available, the Newton Times sent a staff member over to pick it up, the Waltham News-Tribune took it over the telephone, but the Newton Graphic reporter said he might pick it up on Friday.

Attached is a copy of the consent judgment for your information. Attached also is a copy of my response to the article referred to above. I have asked the Newton Graphic to give it the same position and prominance on the front page of the July 31 issue.

Misrepresentatitions of this kind, which can only be deliberate, seem to me to represent a clear and present danger to our city and our schools. S. Eleanor Rosenblum."

Mrs. Rosenblum, for a long time now, has often made point by point rebuttals to Graphic stories and editorials. She has never been denied space for her replies.

Mrs. Rosenblum was upset by the story that appeared in the Graphic July 24 entitled: "City wins school budget suit." She called me Friday, telling me the story was inaccurate and that she was going to prepare a point by point rebuttal and wanted it run in the same space on the front page.

I told her that if she wished to protest a story, her outlet was the Opinion Page of the Graphic and we would certainly welcome her view there. She said she would bring us a copy of her statement and a copy of the consent judgment. She asked that the consent judgment be run in full. It was in the July 31 issue.

Also in that issue was a follow-up story on the suit which contained the entire text of Mrs. Rosenblum's statement and her letter to the editor.

The error in her cover letter is that it says her statement was available on Tuesday when in fact it was available Wednesday afternoon.

The Newton Graphic and every other newspaper in existence has a final deadline. Mrs. Rosenblum released her statement after the final deadline of this newspaper on Wednesday, July 23.

Her letter, stating it was released on Tuesday, seems to imply this daily deliberately ignored her response.

In fact, two reporters spent two hours sitting outside of the School Committee's closed session Tuesday, July 22, the meeting held for the School Committee to hear the agreement and agree to it or refuse it.

Our reporters were sent there in the hopes that after this last ratification had been achieved, School Committee members would talk about it in time for the July 24 edition.

All parties had, however, agreed to keep silent until Wednesday.

Information was obtained on Wednesday for the story, but the text of the consent agreement was not released until after our deadline.

That's one reason a follow-up story was done.

Elizabeth McKinnon, Wednesday, July 23, tried to reach Mrs. Rosenblum. She was unsuccessful.

We did make one mistake in our July 24 story. We forgot to say in it that we could not reach Mrs. Rosenblum for comment.

I was not aware of Mrs. Rosenblum's cover letter until July 30 when I attended a meeting and someone gave a copy of it to me.

The thing I objected to was the Tuesday-Wednesday error.

I called Mrs. Rosenblum Thursday, July 31, and pointed out the error in her letter. She acknowledged it and said she would send out a correction.

Chapter Two

Originally, I was planning to write this column for last week's paper. On Tuesday, Aug. 5, I called three people from the organizations listed above to ask them if they had received a correction. I also contacted my original source.

All three said they had received a letter in the mail that day. None recalled receiving a correction.

The letter they received was a copy of the one written by taxpayers' attorney Jeffrey Freedman to the Newton Graphic that was a rebuttal of the July 24 story and had appeared in full in the July 31 edition.

I also called Mrs. Rosenblum and asked her about the correction. I did not initially tell her I had already spoken to three people on the original mailing list.

She assured me a correction had been sent.

I asked her if it had been sent with the copies of Jeffrey Freedman's letter. She said it had.

I asked her to read it to me. She said she could not find it, but would have Lillian Radlo, assistant to the superintendent, send me a copy.

I received a copy of the memo on Friday. It was dated July 31 and says:

"Memo to members of the School Committee: May I call your attention to a typographical error in the copy of my covering letter of July 25 which accompanied the copy of the consent agreement, my statement to the press, and my letter to the editor of the Newton Graphic: in the fifth line Tuesday should obviously have read Wednesday."

Memo to members of the School Committee?

They're not on the original mailing list.

Back to my original souce.

I called my source Tuesday Aug. 11, and asked if he had gotten a copy of the memo.

No.

We could learn a lesson from the Roman Empire

Commentary by Henry J. Taylor

We Americans have officially started to celebrate our bicentennial of the founding of the United States: 200 years. But millions among us feel that historian Edward Gibbon in his monumental work might well have substituted the United States for Rome.

Rome's civilization, like ours, was a highly commercial civilization. Emperor Claudius Nero of Fiddler fame was the true father of free trade. He abolished custom duties inside and outside the Empire. Learning from the Phoenicians at what is now Beirut, Lebanon, Roman traders launched carrier pigeons from "Pigeon Rock" (which you can see today) to wing their business messages throughout the Eastern Mediterranean.

Marcus Porcius Cato, born plebian but later one of Rome's most honored citizens, shouted "Delenda est Carthage" – Carthage must be wiped out. The Third Punic War, ending in Carthage's destruction, included Rome's first major naval battle, perpetuated by the Columna Rostrate in Rome's Forum. This conquest added to Rome's commerce.

Romes away from Rome were built from Britain to the Bosporus. The Romans built at Aswan, Egypt, high up the Nile, which became the Roman Empire's southmost outpost; at Phoenicia's Byblos which gave the Bible its name; at Sidon, where Solomon hewed his cedars; at Baalkek where their Temple of Jupiter was the largest in the entire Roman Empire, bigger than the Partheonon at Athens; at Lepis Magna where the amphitheater holds 40,000 people; at Teves (Trier, West Germany) where the Roman ruins are better preserved than in Rome istelf; at Neims, France, where you can see a Roman aqueduct bigger than any in Italy.

The Romans away from Rome were tied together by more than 200,000 miles of life-bearing, commerce-bearing arteries of highway stone – a ew idea in the world until the Romans thought of it and achieved it.

The barbarian invasions of Rome that began at the end of the 4th century were neither sudden nor singular. Hoards of barbarian Goths who fled the Huns who crossed the steppes from Mongolia had been in Rome for 200 years.

Barbarian mercenaries became the chief defenders of the Roman world, fighting with their own horses, weapons, tactics. Then when the Roman legions retreated from Treves in 406 A.D., the barbarian tides rolled across the provinces practically unopposed and the final blow on Rome itself fell.

In 428, cruel, redoubtable, Lame Gaiseric, 28, the most amous of all Vandals, became their king. The Vandals stayed in Rome a fortnight (June, 455), only long enough to take all the treasures the Visigoths left in 410.

The barbarians deposed Emperor Romulus Augustulus, the last Roman Emperor of the West, in 476. A Goth, Odoacer, became the first king. The king's gold crow, called the "Iron Crown" because it was said to contain one of the true nails of the Holy Cross (it probably belonged to Constantine) was kept in the Duomo of Monza, near Milan, and is still there.

The Roman era lasted 1,3000 years.

Rome's civilization, like that of the United States, was born in good government. It rose against the despotic world, just as America rose against the religious and economic limitations of Europe.

The banner passed from tired Athens to Rome, for the early Roman Empire was a republic – "res publica," a public affair, the product of the Hellènic idea that imbued our own Founding Fathers.

The arm of Roman law reached long. Bit by bit, it also grew confiscatory. The Caesars expanded the tax gatherers who took the grain from fields, the flax from spindles, the pottery from market places to create a welfare state.

Its failures were such that in 285 A.D. the disgusted Roman Carausius, the far-off commander of the British fleet, proclaimed himself an independent Emperor of Britain.

The lesson for the United States, of course, is that our progress is not inevitable. Many great powers have collapsed because economic, miltary and social problems became so complex that the spirit and will of the people were no longer sufficient to cope with them.

This can cost us our place as the No. 1 power in the world – lest we forget, lest we forget.

How do charities spend your money?

APPROACH
by Brenda Tanger

The recent school budget controversy brings to mind the fact that there are many situations in which others are spending our money without telling us how.

Even when the general use of funds appears to be beyond reproach, the specifics should be detailed.

Some years ago, I received a donation request from a Newton resident and chair woman of a division of a well-known state voluntary health agency. Although this person had agreed to solicit funds, she was actually unaware of the agency's financial affairs.

Form letter flattery should really get an organization nowhere, and I requested a copy of the detailed financial statement of the agency (which is generally offered somewhere in the small print of brochures.)

The copy was not easy to come by, but was finally released.

It revealed that while the organization had collected about a million dollars the previous year, less than a quarter of that sum had been designated for the research upon which the appeal was based – that is, to conquer the disease. The largest single item, in fact, was labeled "salaries and wages" of staff, representing a sum greater than the amount of the grants issued by the agency.

I called the provocative facts to the attention of the executive director of the fund. He, in turn, responded that 15 percent of the total collection had been given to the national office.

New questions arose before the old ones were answered. Did donors understand that money would go out of state and in that case, what did the national office do with the money?

The director agreed that only one third of the money which remained in Massachusetts was really used for research. However, his most startling revelation was the reply, "I am sure you will find that ours is not a high percentage (of expenses) when compared to other voluntary agencies."

Two months later another letter, this time unsolicited, arrived from the same director with copies of the financial statements of two other volunteer agencies. One of the reports showed costs of 80 percent for "administrative, organizational, fund-raising and educational" items. Only 20 percent was left for research of the disease itself.

For some time the City of Los Angeles has made sure that stringent rules apply to charity. For example, a card must be presented to prospective donors which includes information about promotional expenses and the name of a responsible officer of the organization. Moreover, everyone is expected to comply even the Girl Scouts.

In Massachusetts the attitude is far more casual even though charitable funds collected from the public really should represent a public trust. There are general laws relating to the registration of charitable agency reports, which must be filed by every organization collecting more than $5,000 yearly in gross receipts. However, the rules seem to have been made in order to have exceptions. The filing requirement has the first exceptions.

The present law also limits to 50 percent of gross collections (again with exceptions) the costs of salaries, wages and expenses. There is a question of whether people understand this or whether they envision most of their donated dollars flowing directly to the charitable cause. Most disturbing, however, is the fact that certification of the financial statement may be made by an "independent public accountant," not necessarily by a certified public accountant.

Local women's organizations are generally a good "charitable buy." The donated labor permits very high percentages of collected funds to be applied to research or to equipment. Moreover, the women have tended to be very sensitive about expenses.

So, if the clubs, foundations, committees, funds, clinics and institutes expect your financial response to their blandishments and slogans, then let them be scrupulous in their details – or else turn them down. Do you purchase anything else without knowing what you are buying?

Charity is still playing it big in the suburbs. The fall is coming and it will soon be jolly solicitation time again. Newton homes will hear the chant of the appeal.

So let the solicitor be fair and let the donor beware. It feels good to give, but while a charitable deduction is a many-splendored thing, the milk of human kindness should not lead to blindness.

Opposes human services cuts

To the Editor:

The Massachusetts Early Education Council, an organization of people engaged professionally in the healthy development of young children, protests the budget cuts which are now being demanded on the human service departments.

The proposed additional 20 percent cuts in Human Services on top of the 10 percent originally proposed has devastating implications for the lives of young children and their families.

To deny the cost of living increase to welfare recipients is equivalent to denying to thousands of children the possibility of adequate nutrition, shelter and recreation. To deny all but the most critical medical assistance to poor families threatens not just the "quality of life" but life itself.

We protest that it is not a ligitimate act of government to withhold from the needy that little support which has enabled them merely to survive.

The recent legislative struggle which resulted in delayed welfare checks affects directly the structure and authority of the family: parents are helpless to act on behalf of their children; children receive in a variety of ways the message that they have somehow been abandoned. More than anything else children need secure and caring familial and societal structures to assest their development inot adequate adults. The assault on the welfare system is an attack against one of the few institutions which support, however inadequately, that development.

The fiscal crissi will be solved fiscally–presumably by the sale of bonds and an increase in taxes. Nothing will be solved by punitive action againt the poor. The people of the Commonwealth are all equally precious; we cannot afford the loss or dulling of one child or the rage of one helpless parent.

Fluoridation

To the Editor:

The intent of this letter is to express my opposition to Senate Bill 652.

Flouridation of the public water supplies is a safe and economical health measure. All waters contain some fluoride naturally. It has been proven that where there is fluoride naturally in the waters or the fluoride level is optimally adjusted to on part per million tooth decay is significantly reduced. That reduction in tooth decay of 50-60 percent not only benefits the citizens of a community financially but also alleviates needless pain and suffering.

The fair and effective fluoridation law wisely passed by the Legislature in 1968 upholds the rights of the voters if opposition to fluoridation exists. Upon petition of 10 percent of the voters, a referendum must be held to allow expression on the issue. The passage of Senate Bill 652 would set Massachusetts back 20 years and would only jeopardize the health of thousands of children. Indeed, it would only make the health of the children of Massachusetts become an unfair political issue.

Fluoridation at an optimal level, after years of extensive research, has proved to have absolutely no harmful effects, but only beneficial ones. I appeal to your readers to intelligently think of the children of Massachusetts and not of the vocal minority of people who are spreading their misinformation. Take the time to write your legislators and let them know that the current law regarding. fluoridation is a fair one and that you oppose Senate Bill 652.

Festival a success

To the Editor:

The committee of the St. Mary of Carmine Society wishes to thank you for whatever part you played in making this year's Festival such a great success.

This year was our 40th annual festival and through the efforts of people like yourself, it was one of the best we ever had. Our festival went very well, without the least bit of difficulty. Our afternoon procession was well-attended and very colorful. The concert and music in the park at night was enjoyed by all.

Our festival terminated with the annual benedicition at Our Lady's Church, which was attended by young and old alike.

Our festival is one which started in this country in 1o 35 and has been carried on ever since. It is a traditional one which started in Italy many years ago. If it were not for people like yourself, we could never carry on the tradition.

Again, we would like to thank you very much for your participation and we sincerely hope that you will be with us again next year.

Listening to a different drummer

To the House of Representatives:

The stage has been set and now for the Grand Performance. One of the most magnificent acts of hypocrisy is about to be performed by the United States Congress. After this grand performance, each player will receive an award from their peers, an approximate 8 percent pay raise. Will the audience applaud?

I am appalled at the fact that such a pay bill was even permitted to be drafted. You, the Congress, the best in our society who should be giving the best example of sacrifice seem to be listening to a different drummer. How can you, the Congress, in all good conscience justify a pay raise during this time of inflation and recession?

Many of you in all your righteousglory have spoken out against the various industries, especially the oil industry, which is fleecing the American People. Now, you, the men and women of Congress, have the audacity to even contemplate voting on such a pay raise.

The people have been informed of our plight and the majority have answered the call of Washington to tighten up their belts. Has the plea been spread out so wide and distant that the echo has yet to resound in the chambers of Congress? Our patience is being slowly exhausted and diminished by the fact that the cooperation expected in this crisis appears to be limited to the working class.

They eyes of the nation are upon you, and your vote has indicated to the nation that the members of Congress are not personally prepared to "Bite The Bullet" !!!

Betrayed,

Hot August night

To the Editor:

Aug. 2 was the hottest day in Boston in 64 years.

That night, we, along with six others, sought relief from the heat at Crystal Lake in Newton. After swimming for a few minutes, we were confronted by two policemen, backed up by five police cruisers.

Six of us were promptly arrested and carted away to the police station to be booked. We were subsequently locked into jail cells for over an hour while awaiting an obscure figure from Saugus who was coming to accept our bail money. We are now forced to postpone a planned vacation in Canada while awaiting our day in court.

We understand that our actions on that hot night were illegal. But we find it absurd that five police cruisers, a paddy wagon and a coy employee from Saugus were called into action for our seemingly trivial crime.

It seems to us that the city's efforts and tax money could be better spent by hiring lifeguards and opening the unused lake 24 to the public 24 hours a day.

Perhaps then we will be able to cool off in the lake instead of in the cooler.

Reps should help find jobs

To the Editor:

Why don't our four Newton representatives stick to the issue of finding jobs for our unemployed residents, young and old. ?

Look at the lines at the Unemployment Office on Centre Street in Newton Corner. A disgrace!

Instead of worrying about trying to make veteran's welefare cases (Harrington); worrying about smoking in supermarkets (Pines) ; worrying about prisioners and their rights (McGrath) and being. ultra-liberal (Mofenson), please find jobs for our unemployed.

They were elected to represent the population of Newton and what concerns them at this time is our staggering unemployment rate. They should act on this issue immediately.

I would like to see their voting records published in order that the citizens of Newton might evaluate just what has been done to benefit Newton residents. I am sure that there would be a very sad awakening.

Criticism of story

To the Editor:

We are appalled at the unbelievable distortions in the account in your newspaper of the agreement between the Board of Aldermen and the plaintiffs in regard to the Newton school budget.

It is an amicable, non-political, beneficial agreement which not only supports the principle of fiscal autonomy, but also avoids the customary fine to the city had we, the plaintiffs, insisted that the case be continued.

The news item in your paper did not include statements from both lawyers nor a reprint of the agreement. Had this been done, it would have been evident that there were no "winners" nor "losers." The agreement was not designed to play one side off against the other. It was intended to benefit the city when approved.

We are deeply distressed at your one-sided presentation of this situation. It forces us to question the authenticity and reliability of news reports in your paper.

This agreement is what the aldermen appear to object to.

This kind of sale, called a "staged takedown" was initiated by Spaulding & Slye, says Charles Spaulding, because no one "is willing to move too quickly in this economy."

Although there are no "guarantees" the other two buildings will be erected, Spaulding asserted "the guarantee is in the form of the agreement that if we do not move ahead we will lose all the money, the design and the investment of salaries."

In a letter to the Land Use Committee, NRA Chairman Cecil Cadwell further stated that "one of the prime reasons for approving this method was to get the construction of taxable property started with the expectancy that it would generate further interest from other tenants for Parcels Two and Three."

According to Robert Lurie, project director for Spaulding & Slye, mortgage financing will be through the New York State Employee's Retirement System, a pension fund. The First National Bank in Boston will provide the construction financing.

Other charges that have been leveled at the developer have been by Martin Roach who contends that Spaulding & Slye have retained the firm of Eaton and Howard to sell the Lower Falls lot for a profit. Spaulding stated that Eaton and Howard were commissioned to "sell a limited partner investment position in the first building."

Roach is a long time opponent of the NRA since he owned the commercial redevlopment site which was taken by eminent domain. Roach always felt he had not been paid enough for the property and is still negotiating with the NRA on that issue.

Towers auctioned

feet high, and may by permission of the Board of Aldermen allow accessory business activity.

The permissive use granted by the Board of Aldermen expires again in May, 1976, so that no matter what is proposed for the land, the new developers will have to submit plans and seek permissive use.

Some interested spectators at the auction speculated that the trend is moving away from condominiums and that commercial use of the property may be sought.

If commercial development is contemplated, a zone change would be required in addition to the extension of permissive use.

There would then be a tug-of-war between those members of the Board of Aldermen who oppose any downzoning and those who want a controlled expansion of the tax base.

The Towers, which was estimated at $42 million when built, could have brought in more than $3 million annually to the city.

The auction of the Towers land takes the entire assets of the Chestnut Hill Towers Trust, but reportedly leaves the way open for several creditors to sue Goodman personally because he and his wife are reported to have signed the $1.7 mortgage and other agreements.

The bank thus may be able to collect the difference between the amount the trust owed it and the amount it paid for the land.

they found a lot stronger in slope than the Rockies.

If they were to do it over again, Brian would like to spend more time meandering around one section of the country rather than zooming right across, and Jay said he'd put a little foam padding on his hard racing seat.

But now the three high school graduates will be sitting in comfort for a week before they pick up on summer jobs and make plans for college.

Estate conversion

The major point of disagreement seemed to be whether vehicular access should be on Brooks Avenue or Lowell Avenue. The Planning Department wants to use Brooks Avenue, but Harrington prefers Lowell Avenue and asked the Land Use Committee to disregard the Planning Department's recommendation in that regard.

There was no opposition to a petition from Raymond and Fay Miller for permission to build a 22-car parking lot on Hawthorn Street, Nonantum, for lease to a restaurant on Watertown Street.

A technical legal problem with rear-yard setback will have to be resolved by the Law Department before any action can be taken.

Planning Department conditions suggested were all agreed to by the Millers' attorney, former City Soliicitor Melvin Dangel.

After the end of the public hearings, the Land Use Committee met informally with residents of the area around the former Newton College, now owned by Boston College.

The college plans to provide parking for 573 cars in its new campus, which was approved by the Land Use Committee.

The problem of what streets will be used for ingress and egress has caused neighborhood factions to argue amongst each other.

At the meeting, residents called for the closing of Colby Street, Rochester Road, and-or Westchester Road.

Such a step requires action by the aldermanic Street Traffic Committee. The Land Use Committee voted to recommend the closing of Colby Street on a trial basis for the first semester of the school year, and the closing of Westchester Road in the second semester so that the traffic flow could be studied.

A proposal to close the Mill Street gate to the campus was denied.

All the petitions heard in public hearings still must be discussed by the committee in a working meeting before any recommendation is made to the full Board of Aldermen.

The next working meeting of the Land Use Committee is on Sept. 4.

Four arrested in connection with art theft

A Newton man and three others were nabbed by State Police at the Gateway Center in Newton Corner Wednesday night in connection with the theft of two paintings valued at $100,000 each.

Newton police helped stake out the area at 9:30 p.m. after the State Police told them they had received a tip from the owner of the paintings that were stolen July 13 from William B. Richardson of New bury Street in Boston.

According to Det Lt. Thomas Spartichino of the State Police, Richardson visited the state barrick in Yarmouth that night and told them about the arrangement.

State trooper David J. Primeau posed as a friend of Richardson when the four who were arrested met him in his Boston apartment.

The six people agreed to meet in Newton half an hour later, at 9:30 p.m., to arrange the return of the paintings to Richardson for ransom.

The two 16th century paintings were recovered later at the Duxbury home of the Boston Auction Gallery owner, who Lt. Spartichino said did not know the paintings were stolen.

The four arrested pleaded innocent to the charges in Boston Municipal Court last Thursday.

They are Larry Feather-

., newton, and mary anne royer, 24, of camp hill, pa., both charged with breaking and entering in the nighttime.

Charged with receiving stolen property were James R. Rhodes, Jr., 29, of Billerica, and Vincent Marotta, 28, of Queens, New York.

Newton police who assisted in the arrest were Sgt. Arthur T. Fryar, Det. John S. Cappadona, and Det. Richard P. Halloran.

MBTA seeks proposals for new transit cars

The Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority (MBTA) is requesting proposals for the design and construction of 120 electrified rapid transit cars 70 for the Blue Line and 50 for the Orange Line.

The Urban Mass Transportation Administration, Department of Transportation, through two grants, totaling about $41.2 million, will assist in funding the 120 new cars. The stimated total cost is more than $56 million, will assist in funding the 120 new cars. The estimated total cost is more than $56 million.

The Authority also is asking for an alternate proposal for 220 cars, 70 for the Blue Line and 150 for the Orange Line. The cost of this alternate will be compared with the estimated cost of a federally-funded program to rehabioitate the existing 100-car Orange Line fleet.

Bids are scheduled to be opened publicly on Thursday, Oct. 30, at 2 p.m. at the Authority's Administration Building, 500 Arborway, Jamaica Plain.

Common to both types of cars will be the air-conditioning, heating and ventilation systems; fluorescent lighting; two-way radio, train intercommunication, and public address system.

Each type of car will be single-ended with a full transverse cab at one end for the motorman and-or guard. The cars will be operating in four-to-six trains.

All of the new cars will be capable of a maximum speed of 65 miles per houf.

All of the new cars will be capable of a maximum speed of 65 miles per hour. The acceleration rate will be 2.5 miles per hour per second and the deceleration rate 2.75 miles per hour per second.

The car bodies will be made of either Cor-Ten steel or stainless steel.

The Orange Line cars will be equipped with the automatic train operation (ATO) system.

Delivery of the first Blue Line cars would be in lat 1977 with the order completed in the Summer of 1978.

The Blue Line operates between Bowdoin Station, Boston, and Wonderland Station, Revere, and carries about 9.5 million revenue fares annually. A possible extension of the line to Lynn and to Route 128, Beverly, is under study.

The Orange Line, which operates between Forest Hills Station, Boston, and Sullivan Square Station in the Charlestown section of Boston, annually carries about 42.5 million revenue fares. An extension of the line to Medford and Malden is under construction and a possible northerly extension to Route 128 in Reading is being studied.

Mofenson says SJC Opinion does not vindicate welfare cuts

Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, said that last week's Supreme Judicial Court's advisory opinion on the welfare cuts in no way diminishes the legislature's responsibility to face up to the public policy issues involved and the inhumane implications of the Gov. Michael Dukakis' proposal.

In a narrowly drawn opinion, the court said, "We are aware of no constitutional obligation of the state to provide financial assistance to all its needy residents."

Mofenson said, "Although regarding the proposed delegation of powers from the legislature to the executive as constitutionally permissible, the court specifically refused "to pass on the wisdom of the proposed legislation.' "

"Indeed," Mofenson noted, "The court specifically said, 'In reaching this conclusion, we are not insensitive to the serious implications of the measures proposed here. For a great many residents of the Commonwealth, the results may be extremely harsh. In a time of high unemployment, it may be little comfort indeed for persons genuinely in need to be told they are "employable" so that no relief is available. For such people, the effect of adopting this legislation could be to leave them with no source of income and nowhere to turn.' "

Mofenson said, "The state must not abandon its historical humanitarian commitment to he poor and indigent. Persons should not be deemed to be employable automatically when no jobs are available.

"If cuts must be made in the welfare budget, they should be made in department administration through management reform to achieve a high quality level of services of a lower per person cost," Mofenson said.

Youths seen fleeing near MBTA derailment

Four youths were seen on the Riverside tracks just before a streetcar derailed at Cook's Juncion Junction in Newton Highlands Sunday at 10:30 a.m.

Newton police report that the driver of the car' William Moore' saw four boys on the tracks before the car hit a steel tool placed on the tracks.

The anchor, a tool used for installing new track, was left behind by workmen in the area, police said.

The front four wheels had tobeput back on the tracks, which disrupted service for nearly three hours.

MBTA spokesman Don Eagles said a streecar shuttle ran from Reservoir to Newton Highlands for passengers only going that far, and bus service ran from Reservoir to Riverside.

No one was injured in the derailment.

You could be 5% richer by NOW.

Liberal new banking laws now exist that are designed to put more money in the consumer's pocket. Everyone should understand these laws and the new benefits which are theirs for the asking.

Until recently only certain types of banks could handle checking accounts. For decades it was standard practice not to pay any interest on your balance.

The NOW Account has changed all that. Technically, this is a savings account on which you can write drafts. In effect, it becomes the equivalent of a checking account, except for one very big difference. The law states that you can be paid up to 5% interest on your balance. We, in fact, pay the full 5% compounded continuously.

One disadvantage of the NOW Account is the 10¢ or 15¢ per check or draft which some banks charge. But Freedom Federal has eliminated this completely, if you keep a $100 minimum balance.

For your added convenience, drafts are consecutively numbered and when cancelled are returned with your monthly statement.

Finally. One-stop banking makes sense.

At Freedom Federal you get more than a free NOW checking account that pays you interest. You also get higher interest on savings than that paid by any Trust Company, Commercial, or National bank in the state.

What this means is that for the first time the consumer can do his checking and his savings at the same bank . . . and get the best possible deal on both. For the first time in banking history one-stop banking makes complete sense. At Freedom Federal.

CETA and Sylvania place 15 unemployed workers

Fifteen untrained, formerly unemployed workers from the west suburban area are now part of the regular work force at GTE Sylvania's eastern division in Needham. More than half of the new workers are Spanish-speaking persons from the city of Waltham. One man is a paraplegic.

They learned their skills as electronic assemblers under an on-the-job training program sponsored by Newton CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act.)

Newton Mayor Theodore D. Mann, chairman of the Newton CETA subgrantee program, recently toured the Sylvania electronic systems, commenting:

"Newton CETA and Sylvania have created 15 new jobs in a matter of months. That's no mean feat in good times. Ina recession it's a small miracle."

A second team of unemployed area workers screened by Newton CETA and Sylvania will start training at the Needham plant Sept. 1. The training period covers 20 weeks. Newton CETA, according to federally established norms, reimburses employers for one-half of traing costs. New contracts are available to interested employers, Newton CETA Director Charles F. Miller reported.

Sylvania manufacturing manager Avak Avakian expressed the firm's reaction to the on-the-job training program this way:

"Our first experience withthe Newton CETA program has been extremely successful. Most of the traininees already have been integrated into the normal flow of manufacturing work here. Foreman and supervisors reate their output at a high level."

Newton CETA went into action last November as part of a national U.S. Dept. of Labor manpower program designed to provide job taining and employment opportunities for unemployed, economically disadvantaged persons.

Since November, Newton CETA staff has workd with 1500 clients, according to director Miller. This summer 500 young people worked in Newton CETA-sponsored jobs. Many of them will continue in work-study programs this fall.

Miller stressed that on-the-job training, classrom training and work orientation programs are as important as acutal job placement in the total Newton CETA operation. Offices are at 90 Bridge St. in Nonantum.

He reported that 26 local business and industrial firms are currently participating in the on-the-job training program. Fifty-six placements have been made to date. Attrition rates have been extremely low, he said.

Miller added that 35 additional job-training slots are open now. Eligibility is determined by federal regulations, he said. Categories include Vietnam veterans, welfare recipients, handicapped persons, individuals who are over 45 or under 22, femaie heads of households, offenders and expoffenders, technologically displaced persons, school dropouts, former manpower trainees, and individuals with limited English-speaking ability.

Unemployed residents of Bedford, Brookline, Dover, Lexington, Lincoln, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Wellesley and Weston are eligible for Newton CETA programs if they meet any one of the federal criteria. Miller encouraged eligible persons to apply to the Newton office and appealed to community leaders acquainted with occupationally disadvantaged persons and families to refer them to the Newton CETA program.

Pines lauded for legislation on part-time government jobs

State Rep. Lois G. Pines (D.-Newton) was cited recently by U.S. Sen. John Tunney of California in the Congressional Record for her leadership role in initiating the first state legislation creating part-time employment opportunities in state government.

Rep. Pines has been invited to testify in Washington by the Manpower Subcommittee of the House Committee on Post Office and Civil Service in support of Senate Bill 792. THis bill, sponsored by Tunney and Sens. Edward Kennedy, Frank Church, Hubert Humphrey, Birch Bayh and 21 other U.S. senators, would make 400,000-500,000 part-time positions available in federal agencies around the nation.

A letter to Rep. Pines from Sen. Tunney stated: "Thanks . . . in large part to your leadership in promoting expanded part-time job opportunities, the Senate overwhelmingly approved S. 792, the Part-time Opportunity Act' on June 23, 1975." The legislation must now be considered by the U.S. House of Representatives.

Rep. Pines was a key sponsor of the Massachusetts Flexible Hours Employment Bill which was signed into law July 9, 1974. Under the law, 10 percent of all state jobs in executive agencies will be allocated to part-time workers within five years. A special coordinator in the Bureau of Personnel has been appointed to implement the program.

In accepting the invitation to speak in Washington, Rep. Pines said. "I am pleased that legislation similar to the Massachusetts law is, has passed the U.S. Senate. I very much hope that the House will do likewise.Government can set an example with public service employment which I hope private industry will soon follow."

Rep. Pines noted that "over 50 percent of American women work, most of them to provide the basic necessities of life for themselves and their families. Many more need to work but are prevented from doing so by conflicts between inflexible work hours and their child care duties. Many physically handicapped, retired and other persons who cannot work a 40-hour work-week want and need opportunities for part-time employment.

"The Massachusetts law once implemented will benefit both the state and the workers to be hired," Rep. Pines continued. "Part-time employees will receive a pro-rated share of the normal advantages of their position, including vacation time, sick leave, bonuses and advancement. The state will benefit because there is good evidence that part-time workers are more efficient, more productive, and more conscientious than many of their full-time counterparts."

'T' goes on austerity kick

Robert R. Kiley, chairman and chief executive officer of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, Monday announced a two-pronged austerity program within the "T".

Kiley announced that all job vacancies would be abolished unless the need to fill a vacancy is fully justified.

He also announced that no pay raises would be granted to the 377 management employees without a performance appraisal by their supervisor.

Daniel J. Sullivan, director of personnel, commented, "We see both of these as necessary, progressive management tools that should bring some positive, productive results for the Authority."

Kiley issued the memorandum to change the personnel procedures within the "T" on July 28.

On ,ob vacancies, he said: "There has been very little substantiation as to why the job should be filled except for general statements such as backlog of work; replacement for a retiree; resignee; transferee; etc. I find these statements do not provide sufficient justification for approval by me."

Kiley said, "Every effort must be exerted to effect savings." He concluded, "Therefore, every position vacancy will be subject to abolition unless specific, meaningful justification is furnished which will demonstrate, beyond a doubt, that the position is required."

To fill a vacancy, an analysis must be made. It must show that the "duties of the position can only be accomplished by a full-time employee and not by such cost-saving devices as increased productivity."

On management personnel, Kiley said: "It is evident that it is a rare exception when a performance increase is denied. Therefore, it is the objective of the following changes to provide a measure of work performance which will support a salary adjustment recommendation at the time it is submitted."

Sullivan, the personnel director, said the procedures "will assure equitable treatment for employees." He said the performance appraisal and salary recommendation will be made on the anniversary date of the employee's present job.

Recreation notes

Softball teams remain in tournament

Tourney Teams

Teams representing the Newton Recreation Department's Softball League in the Amateur Softball Association State Tournament at Hanscom Field are faring well.

In the AA Division of the tourney Newton teams still in the running include Troubadour, Magoo's, Silver Lake Dodge and Coveney Ford.

Local teams in the tourney's A Division are Post 50, Post 24 and George's Cafe.

The Tournament has been dealyed by the bad weather.

Softball Playoffs

The Playoffs in the Recreation Department's Softball Leagues, A, B and C are underway. They have been held up by the fact that the top teams are engaged in the State TOURNAMENT AT Hanscom Field.

Mini-Bike Track Closed

The three tack mini-bike facility operated by the Recreation Department will be closed on Saturdays, Aug 16, 23 and 30. It will re-open on Saturday, Sept. 6.

Officials wish to emphasize that these vehicles are not allowed to be operated on the highways. Violators are subject to fines and the bikes could be confiscated.

Many of the Moms whose children attend the Newton Playground programs this summer are getting a break through the generosity of Merick Friend, the owner of McDonald's Restaurant on California Street, Newton and the cooperation of Judy Munger, a member of his staff.

The top 15 youngsters at each playground selected by their Leaders for attendance and cooperation are enjoying a "free lunch" at McDonald's through Aug. 21.

They are transported to the restaurant in groups of 15, total of 30 a day. Each receives a hamburger-cheesburger, french fries, tonic and souvenirs, and according to a spokesman for the Recreation Department, "treated royally."

Puppet Show

Some 150 children from playground Districts 1 and 2 recently attended a puppet show at the Burr School in Auburndale presented by the nationally and internationally known puppeteer Eleanor Boylan.

Mrs. Boylan, a former resident of Newton Lower Falls, lived here 20 years before moving to Rockport recently. She has been engaged with pupets since her college days.

She is pleased that the City, through its Creative Arts Program, supports this art form. Mrs. Boylan believes many children of today have lost touch and that their passibity is caused by overexposure to TV.

The use of puppets allows children to use their imagination, she says. She plans her programs for two age groups: Kindergrten through 3rd grade; and 4th, 5th and 6th grades, making different puppets for ech grouping.

Next year Mrs. Boylan plans to reach older groups in junior and senior high school. She is now in the planning stage for a production of "The Devil and Daniel Webster" to be presented in the near future.

She belongs to professional groups and has also published a book on puppets.

New Staff Member

Linda Plaut has joined the Newton Recreation Department staff and will be working with Lisa Lezell in developing the Cultural Arts Program.

A member of the Newton Bicentennial Commission, Linda had the responsibility for the opening day Bicentennial Program including the highly successful Bicdntennial Parade.

Linda has lived in Newton for two years, coming here from New York State where she taught American History and did public relations work.

She "locks forward to an expansion of the definition of Recreation to include all the arts." She would like to see the Recreation Departmtne offer the citizens of Newton an opportunity to experience all the Cultural Arts. Linda also believes the response of the people of Newton to the program already offered indicates that they want the opportunity for more of these programs.

In this time of inflation and recession she believes the poeple want t stay in the City and enjoy a sense of community.

Warren Junior High

A total of 45 children from the Warren Junior High Playground accompanied by Leaders Margery Lipson and Paul Puzzanghero went on a field trip to Nantasket last week.

Burr School

Recreation Leaders Christine Kelley and Anthony Colella took 35 boys and girls from the Burr School in Auburndale to the Science Museum in Boston recently.

Mrs. Feinstein felt that tvere were many fine entries. Winners were:Carol Roy, First Place; Barbara Fitzgerald and Mary Morrison, tied for Second Place; Susan Reardon, Jane Childs and Helen Longl Honorable Mention.

Mrs. Feinstein asked her class to create a square within a square. Mrs. Feinstein will be starting a new needlepoint class later in the season.

This simulated "used brick" wall can bring old fashioned country spirit to your kitchen.

Imitation brick adds warmth to many rooms

You can have the country in your kitchen...even if you can't have your kitchen in the country

"As American as apple pie, simulated brick is a quick and easy way to achieve the country look," says Steve Asnes, do-it-yourself expert, and manager of Grossman's Wellesley store at 27 Washington Street.

"The new imitation brick can give an ordinary kitchen genuine warmth and charm without sacrificing one iota of modern efficiency. You simply brick a wall above and around the work area and your kitchen takes on instant early American character."

It's hard to believe that bricks that look and feel so REAL are only a quarter of an inch thick and featherlight to handle, or that an authentic looking country kitchen takes only a few hours of your time. Mr. Asnes remembers when bricklaying was strictly strong man stuff, entailing days of hard labor.

How to do it

The wall pictured took nine cartons of 30 bricks each and close to three gallons of adhesive mortar. The early American "used brick" style, applied with gray adhesive, was chosen for this kitchen but you have your choice of colonial white, recommended for use with white adhesive, or dark antique red brick with black mortar. There's even a style that's a ringer for fieldstone, though it's somewhat more expensive per square foot.

As the bricks must be applied to a structurally sound, dry, clean surface, you may need a solvent such as benzene, toluene or naphtha to remove grease, wax or film of any kind. Painted, lacquered, shellaced or enameled surfaces should be sandpapered to permit better "adhesive grab", and wallpapered surfaces must be stripped of all covering.

Porous surfaces, such as sheetrock, concrete, cinder block, new plaster, new plywood, or any surface that has not been previously sealed, must first be sealed with Dacor Sealersizer, one quart of which will cover 200 square feet. If there's any doubt in your mind, go ahead and pre-seal, advises Mr. Asnes. You'll be surer of a long lasting bond.

You need little equipment other than a putty knife at least three inches wide, a trowel, hacksaw, level, and a ruler, plus clean-up material - a drop cloth or newspapers, a sponge or cloth for wiping spills, and two buckets of water, one for rinsing hands and moistening the sponge, and the other for washing off your putty knife and trowel.

Actual installation

It's as easy as one, two, three, four, five.

1. Open can of Dacor adhesive mortar and stir well with a paint-stirrer or stick.

2. Using putty knife or trowel, spread a thin coat (about one sixteenth of an inch) of Dacor adhesive motar over the entire surface to be bricked, making sure the original surface does not show through. REMEMBER TO APPLY BRICKS IN HORIZONTAL ROWS, FROM THE TOP DOWN, SO THAT IF ANY ADHESIVE MORTAR FALLS, IT WILL NOT DROP ON BRICKS THAT HAVE ALREADY BEEN INSTALLED.

3. Using putty knife or trowel, butter the back cavity of each brick with mortar, just before you put it in place. Make sure the cavity is completely filled in by mounding the adhesive toward the center of the brick. Don't worry about over-buttering. Too much is better than too little.

4. Press each brick into position, wiggling it slightly from side to side to make sure it is firmly embedded. Allow adhesive mortar to squeeze out on all four sides. Dacor adhesive has the color and texture of real mortar, and motar lines are automatically formed by the open spaces between the bricks. Therefore, as you proceed, leave one-quarter to one-half inch between bricks depending on the motar line width you prefer. The motar line may be left rough for a natural look, or may be smoothed by using your finger. Bricks may be adjusted or repositioned for about 10 minutes after the initial placement. Remove drips and spills immediately and wipe clean with a rag and water. Keep your hands free of mortar by dipping them frequently in the clean water pail. This will prevent getting unwanted mortar on the brick faces. You can start and stop the job any time you please, working at your own convenient pace.

5. To trim bricks when less than full size is required, use a hack saw, tile nippers, or a table saw with masonry blade.

"These are the basics. Anything else you need to know (how to create diagonal or other patterns, for instance) is included with instruction material received when you make your purchase," said Mr. Asnes. He added that as a customer service, Grossman's free how-to-do-it booklets are available in self-service racks at the Wellesley store and in every store in the chain.

Under the Golden Dome

BOSTON (UPI) — Jim Stone is the fiery, young bureaucrat who made waves last spring when, in his first act as state Insurance Commissioner, he abolished his fraudulent claims division, insisting it had outlived its purpose.

This pragmatic attitude is focused on the America's securities industry in Stone's newly published book, "One Way for Wall Street: A View of the Future of the Securities Industry" (Little, Brown and Co.).

Spawned from his summers working in a large but collapsing New York brokerage house during his college days of the late 1960's, the book documents Stone's contention: the security industry must inevitably tear itself down to the lean, functional, self-critical establishment it should be.

"I argue that the huge portion of the industry which is operational in nature (the back offices of brokerage houses which cost $2 billion annually to run) will soon be gone because of the mechanization of Wall Street, increasing sophistication of purchasers and enlightened federal regulations.

"This leaves the stockbroker (another $3 billion) unable to justify his existence; because trading will essentially be free, there will be no way to protect himself from price wars," Stone argues.

Written in a snappy, first person, "One Way" is aimed at a knowledgable audience. While peppering it with its share of necessary jargon, however, Stone takes time to explain the overly complex industry, frequently using humorous allusions to make his points.

Stone's attitudes toward the securities industry are equally applicable to the insurance business.

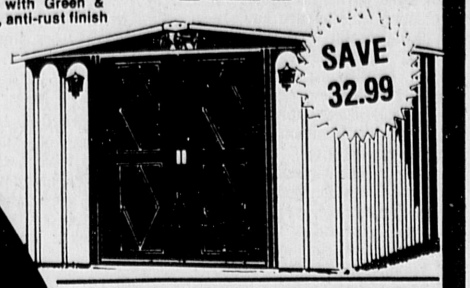

"The philosophy holds for both industries which is: There's a lot of blurring of services that actually have a value to the public with services that are historical in nature but no longer have a value," he said.

Fashion must work to win friends

Here and there, at the New York collection for Fall '75:

Speaking for Pat Sandler, a young svelte woman referred to as "Rhoda" commented, "I think that color is most important and I am dismayed, quite frankly, by all the dull clothes I've been seeing here. Women can wear color as long as they wear the proper makeup...a little more pink and a not too bright look in their lipstick.

"For example, I have a gal in our showroom who for years has been telling me she cannot wear beige because gray-haired women look 'washed out' in beige. Well, last year I got her into beige and now she has nothing else in her wardrobe because her hair looks blonde. Older women should experiment with color as the young people do—they'll be amazed at the new flattering colors they'll discover."

For the daytime, Pat Sandler offers "get around" clothes. Soft, easy dresses for city streets, versatile separates, and the casual snap of new looking pantsuits.

The look of the year starts with beautiful, touchable fabrics—printed and plain velvets, sweatery knits, caressable jerseys and butter-soft leathers. Knits for all reasons play an important role. One grouping is done in the ultra-rich color of vicuna laced with cream. Inky black knit is punctuated with a staccato dot and stripe jacquard in crimson and white. The classic camels are brought up to date bordered in licorice stripes or tweeded with white.

There is a most beautiful spectrum of ultra violet shades paling to the color of precious pink quartz—this is a color nearly all women can wear regardless of their coloring.

For late day and little evenings, there are beautifully shaped knits that have the hand-made look of pointelle detailing and beauvais embroidery. Lush velvet is ultra feminine, shaped to reveal the body. And for the dress to go out on the town, Pat makes it an occasion with the laciest lace, the floatiest chiffon, and highlighted by the drama of jewel colored embroidery on velvet.

Albert Capraro, the designer who catapaulted to fame when chosen by Mrs. Betty Ford as her personal designer, believes in down-to-earth fashions. He says that clothes must work for the modern woman otherwise no idea ever promoted by any designer will ever last beyond the trial balloon stage.

"In reflecting the general slimming down of the silhouette which I feel is a normal move, I have taken care to provide women with many options that will retain her grace and play up her best points. Neatly small or deep dropped shoulders, waistlines that can be drawn in or lowered with a belt or sash, or forgotten altogether without recalling last year's "big" effect, are among the variations.

"There are fewer dropped shoulders," he pointed out, "and wide armholes, other than in kimono coats and tunics. I find the new Oriental mood timely and attractive, but this collection doesn't go overboard on one look. Quality, charm, style and price are the chief goals.

"As far as I am concerned," said Albert, "there are two lengths, slightly below the knee or floor length. Nothing in between.

"All fabrics have texture so interesting it becomes a pattern and it always makes a color play. Women will love the solid poplins and flannels which are quilted with silky floss in another tone which enriches the effect yet still looks tailored. This collection will have quite a few jerseys, flecked flannels and small patterned tweeds which always have a play of tonalities; these are picked up by printed challis or crepe blouses in very small, delicate designs."

Albert Capraro feels that tunics as short coats or blouses are very important for fall. The daytime jump suit goes on into fall after a successful summer introduction. Tunics are paired with skirts or pants under slender but easy coats. Jump suits have interesting small coats with an option of being belted or loose.

Capraro has become famous for his evening fashions which are not limited money-wise to the wealthy.

"I feel that evening clothes will have three distinct looks this year and that women will want them all. One is casually glamorous, in fabrics such as very thin jersey with a velvety hand in a long willowy dress or long gathered skirt and georgette blouse under a quilted flannel coat stitched in silver Lurex.

"Another is the soft satin or jacquard damask covered-up dress or pajamas, usually black with motifs in soft colors. The third is the very arresting but young and bare dress in chiffon matte jersey, all figure-revealing and bare, or what I call 'very young for black,' a series of black dresses in satin with big romantic skirts and very low-cut tops."

We asked Albert which evening gown in his collection had been chosen by Mrs. Ford and he smiled and said, "Well, though I really shouldn't say, it is the bright red chiffon shot with gold threads, long chiffon full sleeves, with its own matching scarf."

Meticulously tailored is this gray flannel jumper with front zipper closing, teamed with classic shirt in gray and wine wool challis. It's all topped with a cardigan jacket. By Albert Capraro, fall '75.

Information please

This is the reader's column. If you have a question or a recipe to share with other readers, please write to: Information Please, Transcript Newspapers, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Ma. 02026.

Question: I have always enjoyed the sort of gelatin mold that is so full of vegetables and sometimes a bit of meat, that the salad is a meal in itself. A group of us were talking about this type of summertime dish especially for a luncheon main dish and someone mentioned an antipasto molded salad and I am curious — have you ever come across that recipe. I would really appreciate seeing it in your column. Thank you very much.

P.N.A., W. Roxbury

Answer: This is a new one for me! I headed for my slim volume of The New Joys of Jell-O recipe book and there it was, Antipasto Salad!

ANTIPASTO SALAD

1 pkg. (3 oz.) lemon gelatin
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup boiling water
1 tablespoon vinegar
2 cups ice cubes
½ cup finely cut salami
one-third cup finely cut Swiss cheese
¼ cup chopped celery
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons sliced ripe olives

Dissolve gelatin and salt in boiling water. Add vinegar and ice cubes; stir constantly until thickened — about 3 minutes. Remove any unmelted ice. Stir in remaining ingredients. Pour into a 3 cup serving bowl and chill until firm, about 3 hours. Makes 2½ cups or 4 servings. Note: Recipe may be doubled.

Question: There is only one time of the year when I feel like baking pies and so I would like to ask you for a recipe for both a fresh peach pie and fresh blueberry pie. Many many thanks.

Answer: To the rescue — your two fresh fruit pies!

FRESH BLUEBERRY PIE

1 9-inch baked pastry shell
¾ cup sugar
2½ tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon salt
two-thirds cup water
3 cups frozen or fresh blueberries
2 tablespoons butter
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
1 cup heavy cream
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla extract

Combine sugar, cornstarch and salt in saucepan. Blend in water and 1 cup blueberries. Bring to boil; cook, stirring constantly, until very thick. Stir in butter and lemon juice; cool. Fold in remaining blueberries. Chill about 1 hour. Beat heavy cream until thick; add confectioners' sugar and vanilla extract. Spread half of whipped cream over bottom of baked pastry shell. Top with blueberry filling. Chill 1 to 2 hours before serving. Garnish with remaining whipped cream.

FRESH PEACH GLACE PIE

9-inch baked pastry shell
1 cup sugar
3 tablespoons cornstarch
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
1 cup crushed fresh peaches
¼ cup water
1 tablespoon lemon juice
3 cups sliced fresh peaches
Whipped cream

Combine sugar, cornstarch and nutmeg in saucepan. Add crushed peaches and water. Cook, stirring constantly, until thick and clear. Remove from heat. Blend in lemon juice. Cover. Cool to lukewarm. Combine sliced peaches and thickened mixture. Pour into baked pastry shell. Chill. Serve with whipped cream.

Question: Do you have a recipe for Tomato Lime Preserve? I do not want a recipe that has to use pectin of any kind, please.

Mrs. I.N.N., Westwood

Answer: Here is a preserve that cooks slowly and calls for no pectin for jelling.

TOMATO LIME PRESERVE

4 cups ripe peeled, chopped, drained tomatoes
2 navel oranges, rind grated and pulp seeded and chopped
2 limes, rind grated and pulp seeded and chopped
3 cinnamon sticks
2 tablespoons chopped ginger (crystallized)
4 cups sugar

In a large heavy stainless steel or enamel saucepan, place all the ingredients and bring to a boil. stirring until the sugar is dissolved. Let the mixture simmer about 1 hour until thickened. Remove from heat and take out cinnamon sticks. Fill jars to within ½ inch of the top and cap containers according to manufacturer's directions. Process in a hot water bath for 20 minutes.

Question: I am curious about making a fresh grape pie. No recipe books reveal this recipe and I thought perhaps you might have the recipe. Do you?

Answer: Yes, as a matter of fact, I do, and here it is for your pleasure:

SPICY FRESH GRAPE PIE

1½ pounds fresh grapes (4 cups)
1 cup sugar
one-third cup flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon cinnamon
⅛ teaspoon nutmeg
1 tablespoon fresh lemon juice
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
Pastry for 2 crust 9-inch pie

Halve grapes and remove seeds. In large bowl mix sugar, flour, salt, cinnamon and nutmeg. Add grapes and lemon juice; mix well. Line 9-inch pie plate with half of pastry; trim overhang to 1-inch. Roll out remaining pastry and cut into ¾ inch strips. Turn grape mixture into pastry-lined pie plate and arrange strips of pastry over top to make lattice pattern. Press ends of strips and pastry rim together and flute edge. Bake in a 450 degree oven 10 minutes; reduce heat to 350 degrees and bake for 25 minutes longer, until pastry is brown and grapes are tender. Serve warm or cool with vanilla ice cream. Serves 8.

Food and Fashion

by Ruth Lenson

Across the kitchen counter

Lucky is the homemaker who has a freezer in fer partment, basement or garage. She's most likely learned how to take advantage of the abundant food supplies that appear around this time of year.

How does one go about buying a freezer? With great care, because it's going to be a long term investment.

Three basic decisions must be made when buying — chest or vertical style; no frost or manual frost and, of course, capacity. Generally, more will fit into a horizontal chest than a vertical style model of the same capacity. However, items can be kept more organized in the vertical style. Because space may determine which style you'll need, measure before shopping.

A freezer needs to be defrosted several times a year. If you purchase a no-frost model, the defrosting task will be eliminated for you and the freezer will be free from frost build-up. Frost acts as an insulator and can cause the freezer to run more than necessary.

Capacity is a question only the purchaser can adequately answer. It will depend upon how much you use a freezer — is your family large or small? Do you intend to buy beef by the quarter or the side?

Following are some freezing tips: Pack food solid in containers to keep out air. If you pour sauce or gravies over meat, they will fill air spaces.

Thaw frozen foods in the refrigerator. You can reheat many main dishes without thawing. To reheat food correctly, you can place food in a saucepan containing a small amount of butter or you can set it over low heat watching and stirring frequently. A covered casserole dish may be heated in a 350 degree oven for about 1½ hours. Stews and creamed dishes reheat easily in a double boiler. It takes about 30-35 minutes. Break up the chunks of frozen food carefully.

Fresh grape pie is great when company's coming or as a family treat. Cinnamon and nutmeg give it extra perky taste (warm or cool.)

Cloves, garlic, black pepper, green peppers, pimiento and celery increase in flavor during freezing. Use them more sparingly. Onions, salt and chili powder sometimes decrease in strength. Add bread crumbs and grated cheeses at reheating rather than before freezing. Some main dishes that contain rice, macaroni, spaghetti and other pasta ingredients often appear dried out when taken out of the freezer — add a little milk and cover the food in reheating.

DON'T FREEZE: Gelatin salads and desserts, they become rubbery and "weepy". Mayonnaise — it curdles unless used in very small proportions with other ingredients. Raw salad ingredients — crispness is lost, except with green pepper. Sour cream — it separates. Boiled white potatoes — they become mealy. Custard and other cream pies. Stuffed poultry — unless it has been commercially stuffed and frozen.

To avoid the possibility of food poisoning caused by over-exposure of meat to warm temperature, thaw meat in the refrigerator. In general, it will take five to eight hours per pound, depending on size, shape and thickness of meat. Never immerse meat in water to thaw — the meat absorbs water and there is a loss of flavor and water soluble nutrients.

Frozen steaks and chops require about twice the usual cooking time and should be cooked farther away from the heat source to avoid over-cooking the outer portion.

Regarding the refreezing of meat which has been defrosted and cooked, it can be done, however the practice is not recommended — you can expect a loss of quality. The more food is handled, the greater are the risks of contamination. Freezing does not overcome contamination, it merely prevents further contamination.

FREEZER-TO-TABLE ROAST BEEF

4 lb. frozen rolled rib, eye of the round or sirloin tip roast
4 small onions, peeled seasonings
1 pkg. brown beef gravy mix

Remove the foil wrapped roast beef from the freezer. Open the foil, loosening it at the sides and overlapping loosely over top of roast. Leave it open at ends so heat can circulate over and around roast. Place in preheated 400 degree oven and roast 3 hours. After 2 hours, insert meat thermometer through the foil and 30 minutes before end of roasting time, turn back foil completely.

Add onions, seasonings and continue roasting until meat thermometer registers 140 degrees F. for rare, 160 degrees F. for medium. Remove from oven, transfer roast to serving platter or board. Pour juices into a saucepan and skim off excess fat. Add boiling water to make desired amount of gravy. Stir in brown beef gravy mix to thicken and add additional color.

In freezing vegetables, choose young, nearly-mature vegetables. Wash in cold water, cut and sort according to size. All vegetables need to be blanched before packaging to prevent loss in color, flavor, texture and nutritive value. To blanch: place vegetables in a wire basket or colander and dip into a pot of boiling water; cover container and time for 1 minute. The water should have returned to a boil (if not, use smaller quantities next time). Start counting the blanching time when water returns to a boil.

Remove blanched vegetables in basket and plunge quickly into a large quantity of cold water. KEEP WATER COLD until vegetables are thoroughly chilled. It usually takes as long to chill vegetable as it does to heat them. Drain well. Dry off and package dry vegetable in container or wrap tightly in aluminum foil or plastic. Make sure all air is out of package before sealing. Leave one-half to one inch headspace for the solid pack, such as cooked squash. Two to three minutes is the blanching time for most vegetables. Broccoli, summer squash, cauliflower, cut corn, eggplant, okra, beets and carrots should be blanched for 3-4 minutes. Mushrooms may be blanched or sauteed before freezing, if desired. Fresh peas should be shelled and blanched for 1½ minutes before freezing.

Bridge, anyone?

Donating your hobby to charity

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

When Alma Goldman was a bride in 1946, she wanted to join an organization as a volunteer. After "shopping" organizations, she decided to join National Council of Jewish Woman Women. She made this decision because of their "extraordinary service program."

Forty years ago Sylvia Pollack came to Boston as a bride and was attracted to the NCJW "because of its broad scope and intellectual stimulation."

Today, both women are committed more than ever to NCJW. As proof of their committment, they have become bridge teachers and are donating their earning to Council. They are doing this, for the organization, whose slogan they say is "Council Cares."

Mrs. Goldman, who began playing bridge 15 years ago, is a self taught expert. She is a Life Master which means that she has accumulated 300 or more points awarded by the American Contract Bridge League.

After she began teaching five years ago to earn money for Council, her husband commented, "you are finally putting bridge to good advantage." She teaches beginners, advanced, and intermediate groups at their homes. Mrs. Goldman teaches in series of six lessons and estimates she has raised over $2500 for her organization.

Mrs. Pollack is beginning her bridge teaching efforts this fall. She has gone from Whist and Auction to contract bridge, having begun playing as a youngster. She calls bridge "my favorite intellectual hobby."

Both women have served NCJW in many capacities. Mrs. Goldman is a national board member, a past present president of the Greater Boston Section and past president of the New England region.

Mrs. Pollack has served in offices from vice president on down and has worked on several national and district committees. She has been particularly active in administration and ways and means. Her committment is so deep she is jokingly called "Mrs. Council."

One of the advantages of belonging to the organization was cited by Mrs. Sonny Weintraub who moved to Newton one year ago from West Hartford, Connecticut. Mrs. Weintraub, said the organization "which has given me more than I have ever given" helped her in establishing herself in a new area. Mrs. Weintraub is a past president of the West Hartford section.

The women's movement, which has subtracted women from volunteer ranks, was decried by Mrs. Pollack, who said women who don't need the money shouldn't work. However, Mrs. Goldman pointed out that "we have found that a busy woman can do an extra job even if she works... there are many women who work who recognize their responsibility to the community."

Council is an international organization which maintains a U.N. observer and supports a multitude of programs such as education of the culturally disadvantaged in Israel. It sponsors a day care center at the Lemuel Shattuck Hospital in Jamaica Plain for parents who work at the hospital.

Among the many services that Council performs is the Women in Community Service which helps disadvantaged women "between the ages of 16 and 21 by offering counselling, support services and placement in the Job Corps."

On October 1, according to Irene Gorman, Massachusetts public affairs chairwoman, the organization will sponsor an institute on privacy. Council will review individual rights and explore what information agencies should have.

And while all of this is happening, Alma Goldman and Sylvia Pollack will be earning money for their organization by teaching bridge because "Council is caring."

N-W Hospital studies youth mental health needs

Newton-Wellesley Hospital has been awarded a grant by the Office for Children, Massachusetts Department of Mental Health, through the Flexible Children's Fund.

Primary objectives of the project are to evaluate the extent of the need for 24-hour emergency psychiatric services for children and adolescents in the community, as well as to assess the need for impatient psychiatric facilities for children.

Dr. Carl N. Brownsberger, Newton-Wellesley's chief of psychiatry, has been named to direct the project. Other members of the child psychiatric team are Marianne Cannon, psychiatric nurse, and Bonnie Bornstein, social worker. Both have experience in pediatric services.

Prior to joining the Newton-Wellesley staff, Mrs. Cannon was at the Children's Center at McLean Hospital. A graduate of the nursing program at the University of Michigan, she received her pediatric and psychiatric nursing training at Boston University.

Miss Bornstein is a graduate of Jackson College, Tufts University, and holds a master's degree in special education and another in social work' both from Boston College.

Both Mrs. Cannon and Miss Bornstein are currently surveying a variety of social agencies in the Newton-Wellesley community to familiarize themselves with existing resources and services for children and adolescents.

Commander of the Lexington minutemen on April 19, 1775, Parker is represented by his statue on the Green. Close by is the spot where 77 minutemen formed into line to oppose 700 British soldiers marching to Concord to destroy stored arms and powder. Here was shed the first blood of the Revolution when the Redcoats opened fire, killing 8 and wounding 9 colonists. Yesterday's minutemen were the forerunners of today's Massachusetts National Guard — men and women trained and ready to respond quickly to protect life and property.

Straight Talk About The Weight Industry
By THAD. McGEORGE

Losing weight, or controlling weight, is a very personal thing for women, it is most difficult for anyone to be objective.

And it is obvious why some so-called health spas promise miracle weight losses, and are able to charge high fees. They play on the individual's secret desire to be slim again or fear of losing their figure.

It is almost impossible to put a price tag on this very personal need. And, yet, the desire not to be overweight is certainly a right one, not only for appearance, but for health.

This is why Gloria Stevens Figure Salons, the largest chain of figure salons for women in New England, has many thousands of women of all ages, attending their salons each week of the year.

The Gloria Stevens method, the M.E.D. method, motivation, exercise and diet, has no hocus pocus about it. Gloria Stevens does not beguile a potential member with talk about how relaxing a steam bath or a sauna can be.

Women come to Gloria Stevens to lose or control their weight. And to show the tangibility of the M.E.D. method, how each woman is treated as a person, with specific individual needs and goals, Gloria Stevens offers an introductory two weeks for $10.00.

Gloria Stevens honestly feels that this specific offer, two weeks for $10.00, is scrupulously fiar to each potential member. It takes the uncertainty away of what Gloria Stevens can personally do for you. ADVT.

Last PT boat here Aug. 14

The last operational PT boat will arrive by sea at 5 p.m. August 14 at Battleship Cove, Fall River. The homecoming celebration for PT 796 is planned for the 30th anniversary of VJ Day.

Paul Vaitses, executive director of the U.S.S. Massachusetts Memorial Committee, explained the event is being billed as a homecoming because the majority of men who served aboard the boats during World War II received basic training at Portsmouth's Melville supply depot and learned docking procedures at the state pier where Battleship Cove is located.

"Bring the boats home" was the theme on which Vaitses based his successful campaign to merge PT Boats, Inc. of Memphis, Tenn. with the U.S.S. Massachusetts Memorial Committee.

It was PT 796 that was renumbered PT 109 and appeared in the inaugural parade of the late President Kennedy.

The boat received damages on its trip from Memphis down the Mississippi River. It will be towed from the Deltaville, Va. shipyard where it was repaired to the Coastline Towing facility here by the Whitefoot Towing and Salvage of Vineyard Haven.

PT 796 will be moored next to the destroyer U.S.S. Joseph P. Kennedy by Sanford Lancashire, the marine pilot charged with bringing all vessels up the Taunton River. The boat will remain in the water until Labor Day when it will be placed on a cement pad next to the submarine Lionfish.

Mayor Wilfred C. Driscoll of Fall River will welcome PT 796 home in ceremonies aboard the destroyer Kennedy. The American Patriots Drum and Bugle Corps will provide music for the event.

Starting at 4:30 p.m. all the ships and exhibits at Battleship Cove will be open to the public free of charge until 11 p.m. A cocktail party and buffet have been slated for invited guests at the Marine Museum nearby. Dancing under the stars aboard the battleship U.S.S. Massachusetts is open to the public. Bob St. Amour and his orchestra will play from 8-11 p.m. Homecoming fireworks will begin at 9:30 p.m.

Under the Golden Dome

BOSTON (UPI) — For generations, enlightened corrections officials have tried persuade Beacon Hill to see the light about how prisoners should be kept, processed and checked on after release. The pleas generally fell on deaf ears.

It was easier to cut budget dollars for social offenders than it was funding for down and outers who, through no fault of their own, had fallen into welfare categories: easier to rationalize being hardnosed on convicts than on desparate welfare mothers.

Now it's the untouchable welfare programs being purged in the legislature's effort to keep the state's financial ship from slipping under. Corrections, while not immune from the feared budgetary ax, is being given a sympathetic ride, and some officials say, the best treatment possible under the economic conditions.

Dr. Philip J. Tardanico is an educator by profession, recruited to the Corrections Department to run its inmate education program. He suggests the change in sentiment was sustained by dollars and cents reasoning, but was triggered by subliminal factors.

"It's no secret a bad economy results in more crime. Therefore if criminals are not hardened in the penal system, and as ex-offenders are put into productive jobs, then they won't have to return to crime," he reasons.

"But it goes much deeper than that: People are getting generally confused and dissatisfied with their lives; the structure of the family is breaking down; social orders are being challenged and change is being demanded by minorities; religious ethic has been disemphasized; women's liberation."

This general feeling of uneasiness, Tardanico suggests, has opened minds to change because changes don't tend to shake people up as much anymore.

"If we tried to run the inmate education programs or community job referrals for ex-offenders programs we're getting into now ten years ago we wouldn't have had a chance," he says.

Naturally Perfect .... Brown Rice

Brown rice is whole-grain rice from which only the hull and a small amount of the bran has been removed. Nutlike in flavor and chewy of texture, it needs more water and longer cooking time than white rice. Brown rice is easy to cook--you can boil, steam, oven-cook, or fry it. 1 cup of raw-brown rice gives you 3 cups of cooked rice.

To keep most of the B-vitamins in the cooked rice, don't rinse it before or after cooking. Follow package directions carefully and use just enough water.

Don't stir rice after it comes to a boil; this mashes the rice and makes it gummy. Add a tablespoon of oil to cooking water before adding rice to keep the grains of rice separate.

To test the doneness of rice, use the back of a spoon and press cooked rice kernels against the side of pan. When kernels are soft throughout the rice is ready.

All can join 'The Revolution'

BOSTON — Thre is a small but dedicated organization that meets behind 17-inch granite walls just behind City Hall to plot a revolution for Boston.

Katharine D. Kane, director of Boston 200, announced the opportunity for all residents and visitors to the city to participate directly in "The Revolution".

"The Revolution" is the 18th century bicentennial exhibition, sponsored by Sun Oil Company scheduled to open the first week of September on the second floor of the newly renovated Quincy Market Building opposite Faneuil Hall.

"As a company, Sun Oil is a strong believer in the free enterprise system and that many of the outstanding successes in history were accomplished by free men Boston 200 and 'The Revolution' provides us with a unique opportunity to examine, once again, some of the values that made this country great. We are proud to be a part of it," said W. H. Van Scoyoc, Region Manager of Sun Oil Company.

The unique, participatory features of "The Revolution" will challenge each vicitor to take a stand on the citical issues that Bostonians confronted between 1761 and 1776 by marking a specially designed ballot.

The ballots of today's "patriot" or "loyalist" are keyed to a Honeywell 716 computer system donated by Honeywell Information Systems Inc. of Waltham. The computer will evaluate the visitor's responses to media presentations at such decision points as the Stamp Act, the Boston Massacre, the Boston Tea Party, and the Siege of Boston.

On the basis of such responses, the computer will match each exhibit visitor with a revolutionary era counterpart whose historical stand the visitor's most nearly resembles. Are you a leading patriot such as Sam Adams or an unwavering loyalist such as Thomas Hutchinson? Or perhaps a James Otis or John Singleton Copley whose sympathies were less extreme?

The computer will store each evaluation and provide a running tabulation of the numbers of "patriots" and "Loyalists" who pass through the exhibition.

Other features of "The Revolution" include a Boston Massacre chamber of fire, visitor-activated computer biographies of 75 revolutionary Bostonians, and a wall mural depicting the Battle of Bunker Hill designed by the students of the William Ohrenberger School in Roxbury.

The site of the exhibition in the Quincy Market Building is in space donated by The Rouse Company of Baltimore, Maryland, developers and contractors for the restoration of the old market area including the North, the South, and the Quincy Market buildings.

"The Rouse Company is pleased to convey to you the magnificent space in the Quincy Market Building for Boston 200's bicentennial exhibit, 'The Revolution'. You have put together what I am sure will be one of the most popular and worthwhile bicentennial atractions in the country," said Vice President Roy E. Williams.

"The Revolution" was designed by the firm of deMartin, Marona, Cranstoun, Downes and will be open 7 days a week from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. for an admission fee of $1.50, adults, and .75 for children.

"The Revolution" will complete thr trio of Boston 200 "World's Fair" scope exhibitions that deal uniquely and individually with one century of life in Boston. "Where's Boston?" in the Prudential Center and "Victorian Boston" inthe castle on Arlington Street, opened earlier this summer.

Leith wants city to hire a tree expert

Priscilla eith, at-large alderman candidate from Ward 4, has called for creation of a Parks Department.

"At present we have custodial care - not a tree care program," Leith said "Trees are planted, then left to fend for themselves. Tree surgery and pruning on city-owned trees seem to occur only after vociferous demands from citizens. And state laws mandating disposal of diseased elm trees, whether on public or private property, are being ignored.

"Dutch elm disease has reached epidemic proportions in Newton. All of our American elms will be extinct unless prompt action is taken to save the few not yet afflicted," claims Leith.

She attributes the local elm crisis to a number of inter related factors. There has been no full-time Public Works director to follow up on the tree situation since Richard Dudman departed over a year ago.

Responsibility for trees lies within the Street Dept., where it has a low priority and little funding.

And the $10,000 to continue the Lowden experimental elm treatment program to arrest Dutch elm disease was slashed from the city budget during aldermanic deliberations this spring.

"People don't get upset about the loss of trees until it's too late," noted Leith. "This was brought home to those concerned with the cutting at Auburndale Park last year, and the massive protest over Chestnut Stteet trees on West Newton Hill," she said.

"Just last week a woman from Newton Highlands called me about a tree she wanted treated in front of her house. She had asked the city to come and work on it. Their response was to post it for cutting and she was quite upset," Leith remarked. Removal of one large tree can cost as much as $1,000.

Newton Country Players open membership drive

The Newton Country Players, winners of the New England Theatre Conference "Best Production Award, 1975," will open an intensive drive for new members this week in an effort to increase membership before the opening of their 20th season of community theatre activity.

With an unusually heavy schedule and many new projects in the wings, additional manpower is needed for the accelerated program.

This season, the Players will offer their three annual major attractions, including "South Pacific" in the fall, a mid-winter production to be announced, and "Boys in the Band" next spring. All productions will be staged at Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton.

Also on the agenda are a minimum of two Drama Workshop productions, "Miss Julie" and "The Jewish Wife," for the aspiring actor, director or crew member with minimal experience in theatre craft. A children's show is also under consideration.

In addition, the Players will present one performance only of their prize-winning show, "The Real Inspector Hound," and as a result of topping the NETC competition last spring, the Players will serve as Host Group for the 1976 NETC Drama Festival. A "yard and bake sale" is planned also for the fall.

President Marcia Massimo of Waban has extended an open invitation to all residents of the Newton community to join the group, stressing that the Players' current enrollment includes participants from all 11 villages on Newton, single members as well as couples, and student members as well as adults of all ages.

Each member is entitled, at no extra cost' to one ticket for each of three productions (two tickets on a "couple" membership), a subscription to the Newsletter, and to advance notice of all auditions and productions. There are four catagories of membership:

A sustaining member is primarily a spectator, not a participant, and without voting privileges. Although not required to share in the work of the group, his contribution is welcome in all activities.

A student member, between the ages of 12 and 22 and regularly enrolled as a full-time student of an accredited educational institution, is required to participate in the group's activities, but does not hold voting privileges. Based on the merit of his work and interest, he can be advanced to active membership.

An active member is expected to participate in productions on a volunteer basis, either onstage or backstage, and in the maintenance of the group, but does not hold voting privileges. Based on the merit of his work and interest, he can be elected to the Board.

A board member, so voted by the Board of Directors, is eligible to vote and to hold elective office and share in the continuing responsibility for the artistic, financial and economic well-being of the organization.

Dues are $5 for student members, $8.50 for each single membership, and $12 for couples in all other categories. For further information, contact assistant business manager Marilyn Krassin at 969-9737 or write P.O. Box 9, Newton Centre, 02159.

During the past seven years, the Players have involved themselves with aspiring playwrights and the production of new, untried scripts. Between 1970-72, they developed their own theatre workshop in association with Newton Junior College. They affiliated themselves also with the Newton Art Association in an effort to bring both cultures to the community, and were a vital factor in the formation of the Newton Cultural Affairs Commission.

Besides the three major productions and the NETC Drama Festival entry, members have been offered childrens' shows, lighting institutes, Emerson College scene shop tours, classes on "stage management" and "play direction" at Brandeis University, workshop showcases on mime and acting techniques. workshop productions, and script-in-hand rehearsed readings of comedies, dramas and musicals.

The Players is a non-profit, non-sectarian, philsnthropic association comprised of local residents who, as an avocation, are actively engaged in the development, expansion and assistance of theatre activity on community and educational levels.

Its purpose is to bring together those individuals who are active or interested in any and all phases of community theatre in order to make them aware of theatre activity on to foster and encourage interest and participation in the many facets of community theatre areas; to provide a medium for the exchange of information and ideas for mutual benefit; and to promote local interest in the dramatic arts.

From time to time, profits have been channeled into a scholarship plan set up by the Players with the Newton High School system. A fall social, bi-monthly Newsletter, and quarterly meetings are included among the Players' activities.

Newton Legion nine had fine season

By BUDDY BERGER
Sports Correspondent

When you read in books or newspapers about pro ballplayers, you usually read the different step s they took in baseball before they were scouted. They usually played little league, pony league, high school, and sometimes, even college. But whenever asked what league helped them the most in their youth years, they usually reply American Legion. Well, Newton has their own American Legion team that plays different communities around here, such as Brookline, Reading, Arlington, and other such opponents:

This year proved to be a fairly successful one for the Newton nine, as they ended the regular season 12-6 and even through they were eliminated in the playoffs, managed to win one out of the three games they played.

The team was led by third-baseman Dave Boyce. This fine ballplayer always seemed to come up with the big hit, and was a good glovemen. He was the teams lead-off hitter, and just about always could be counted on getting on base. Another tough hitter on the squad this year was center fielder Jim Simpson. He was another player who just about always could be counted on for getting that big hit when they needed it. The res of the team that usually started was this: at catcher wasDan Cronin, psually the number two man in the order.

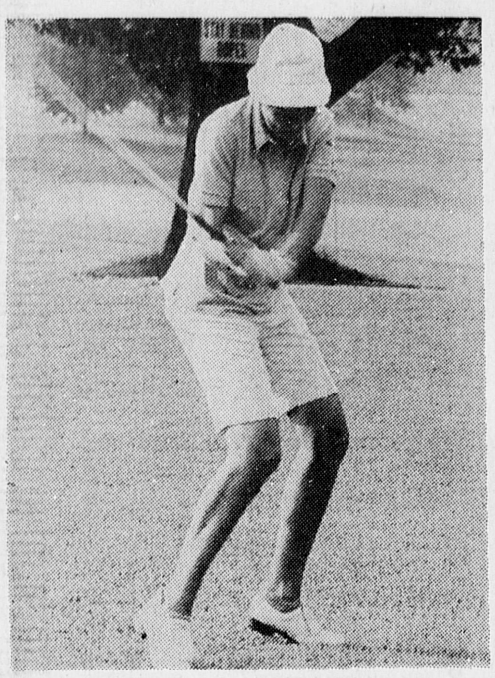

At first base wa Mike Kelly, second Tony Pellegrine, third base Boyce, and shortstop either Robbie Alevizos, or Steve Reilly. In the outfield was Glen Way, the left fielder and another good hitter; Simpson was in center, and either Rick Paglia or Dom Russo in right. Other players who took turns in the field and did a creditable job with the wood were John Carey, Rick Doyle, Mie Goyetche and Tim Sbordone. These players could be called on any time to play any position, and did a good job.

The Moundsmen were led by Carey, Russo, and Goyetche. All three did very good jobs in helping Newton win the Legion Zone 5a Crown.

Even though it was a couple of wesk back, here is how Newton won the crown, and what happened in the playoffs. They won it on July 30th by beating Post 39 of Arlington 7-2. Dave Boyce led the onslaught on Arlington pitchers by contributiog three hits to the Newton cause, and an r.b.i. Robbie Alevizis and Mike Goyetche each had two hits, and Goyetche pitched a fine game, scattering only four hits.

Post 440 then started off the playoffs fine style by beating Lawrence on August 1st, 7-5. Newton pounded out seventeen hits, with Jim Simpson going 4-6, Rick Paglia 3-6 and Boyce, Way, and Russo going 2-5. But badluck struck the team on the week-end as they dropped 12-5 and 10-1 contests. The hitting was excellent throughout the series as Newton pounded out 37 hits in three games. Mike Kelly was the main cog in the series with 7 hits in 13 trips to the plate, for a .538 clip.

One more point about this team, is that a lot of the players on it are not from Newton, but from surrounding cities. This shows you something when you consider that there are other teams besides outs, and even if there is not a Legion team in their respected cities, there are other leagues. But Newton has a winning tradition in all their sports, and let's hope that it stays that way. Congratulations to the Newton American Legion Post 440 team, and good luck for next year.

Wise, 16-6, was supported by three RBIs from Carlton Fisk—two on a bases loaded infield single in the first. Wise, who struck out eight, has not lost since June 22.

"Thrill and honor to play"

Foley on cloud nine after playing in Agganis Bowl

By BUDDY BERGER
Sports Correspondent

Dana Foley is a young man and athlete, who, until Friday, August 1, had been known very well in the eyes of Neston Sports fans. But one Friday brought Dana to the eyes of sports fans around the eastern Mass. area as he was one of the very talented high school seniors to be picked to the annual Harry Agganis High School All-Star football game won by the south squad, Dana's squad, 42-13.

In an interview held with Dana in the recent past, I was able to find out his feelings about being picked for the honor that th the majority of football players around the area did not receive, and for that matter, no one in the Newton Area.

Dana was first asked how he felt to be picked to this game and he replied "It was a real thrill and honor to be picked. During the season I didn't think about it. I remembered it but I just didn't give it much thought until I received a letter in the early spring and it just put me on cloud nine."

Dana had a pretty good game. He told me that while he didn't have a great year blocking for the high school, that's mostly what his purpose was here, even though he did catch a few passes. He played both wide receiver and tight end in an offense that was different from the one he had played at the high school.

When he first went to practice he "didn't know how (he) was going to get along because of the "rivalry." But suprisingly, Dana told me that the kids he got along with the best were the Waltham players, who are Newton's biggest rivals.

He said that he could really see a big difference in the kids that he played against in the Surburban League and those that he played against in the game.

"In the Suburban League you can beat defensive backs whenever you wanted to, but in this game they were just there all the time." He went on to say how much more disciplined and faster they were in this game, and also bigger.

He had to go through two weeks of practice, gave them a weekend off, then went Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday, had a big banquet Thursday, and played Friday Night. He told me that practice wasn't really that tough, just a lot of conditioning.

He made friends with Dave Procter, John Corbett, Steve Godfrey, and Greg Kasabian of the Waltham team. "The good part of this team was just how everyone sort of went together. It just wasn't that two kids from one school went together and not talk to anyone. It was just like one big team, like you had been playing together for a while."

When asked about the score, he told me that they really hadn't runit up and "everybody played the exact same amount, and we broke a few long runs". He said that the score could have been a lot worse than it was, but by keeping the ball on the ground in the second half, they held it down.

Versatility

To whow his great versatility, dana was picked to the National Twi-Division All-Star team to represent the Boys Club, and when asked if there

Karen Torchia wins Massachusetts title

Karen Torchia, a Newton teenager who has held the city-wide hula hoop championship for the past six years, has won first place in the Massachusetts competition.

The fifteen year old, who will enter Newton North High School as a sophomore this fall, had a perfect score of 13!. Karen's "free style" consisted of balancing a hula hoop on each arm and one on her leg in a manner which her father calls "incredible."

This summer Karen is working as a camp counselor in Westwood and says she has demonstrated her hula hoop talents to the children "only once."

Unfortunately a misunderstanding after the state meet held in New Bedford prevented Karen from participating in the regional competition in Philadelphia. There the prize, her mother said, would have been a $1,000 bond.

After the New Bedford meet Karen contends she had been told that in addition to a plaque, she had won a train trip to Pennsylvania with a guardian. After several days Mrs. Torchia asked the Newton Recreation Department to investigate why the family had heard nothing more.

A check revealed there was no trip included in the prize for the contest sponsored by the Whammo Corporation based in California. By the time this was uncovered, Mrs. Torchia said it was "too late" to send Karen to the regional competition.

International League teams feature top flight ball

By DAVID BERGER
Sports Correspondent

The American League may have its Jacksons, Carews, and Hunters. The National League may hve its Stargells, Benchs and Marshalls. But for the past few weeks International League fans have been spuring these famous stars for some of their otwn. Such names as Cappadona, Fraser and Carey have been ringing through their ears as the International League has had one of its most entertaining, fun and successful seasons. The League, led by Totem Pole (a team who just clinched first) and St. Bernard's (a team that you may have heard being mentioned during the National Twi-league season) was so overwhelmed with kids wishing to play that they were forced to add another team, Sacred Heart.

As was stated the Totem Pole Braves are leading this fine league as they just clinched the league title a week ago Wednesday (august 6). The best part of this fine team was their devastating clubs that most teams call bats. The Internation Division this year was a hitters league and this was the best hitting team. Leading this awesome team was their 3-7-5 hitters, Brian Kinsella, Tom Hagerstrom and Mark Matheson.

But those theree were not the only three hitters in the Totem Pole line-up. Such hitters as Roger Carmel, also a fine pitcher, Tommy Carey and Jim McHale. These kids played as important of a role as the three in the middle. They werethe "tablesetters," the ones who reached base so that the big guys in the middle could drive them home.

Coming in second was St. Bernards, a young team just starting to show their unlimied potential. This is the team that I am predicting will win it all within the next two years.

Paving the way for them were the Kassabian brothers, Greg and Paul. The latter is only thirteen years old and seems to have two more outstanding years left. Also, leading the ay on the mound was Nick Butera a strong right-hander with an excellent fastball. He also is a good hitter who many a time was able to drop in a key hit to win his own game. Other fine hitters include Jon McIntyre and Bobby Leblanc.

The third place team wa Boys Club, a team tha scored most of their runs with their legs and heads rather than their bats. This team was probably the strongest fundamentally in the league but just didn't have the bats to compensate for inconsistent pitching. This was one team that just did not live up to expectaions, but they are a good longshot ,ick i the play-offs. WVITH NAMES SUCH AS John Leone, Steve Burke and the Foley brothers it is quite easy to see why this team was such a keen disappointment.

In addition to all this "old" talent Boys Club was able to come up with an outstanding new right-handed pitcher, 14 year-old Bill Shulman.

POST 440 WORKS HARD

In fourth place (going into the final weeks) was Post 440, putting up a vicious battle to gain the final play-off spot along withthe Waban Chiefs and the Highlanders. Throughout the year 440 has been staying alive almost entirely on its hitting.

Leading they way for them has been Lee Waxman, who is their number one hitter and close to being the best in the league and Scott Medalle a perfect "hitters" hitter. One of his main jobs has been stopping the opposing pitcher from working around Waxman. Other fine "swingers" in 440's order include Chris Flaherty and Mike Lafko who's really started to come on strong of late.

Presently in fifth place are the Waban Chiefs, a team which is always very competative and this year's entry is no exception. This year's team is led by its pitching staff and a couple of long-ball hitters. Leading the pitching staff is Bob Dery, a star both in little league and now, and Dan Bradley, a pitcher with a lot of "stuff" but a big control problem. The hitters include Jon Fraser, a star with weeks Jr. High, Bob Bradley, older brother of the pitcher Dan and Joel Dennis a very strong boy who hits the ball hard occasionally but strikes out a bit too often.

In sixth place at this time, but just a step out of fourth is rounded by fine talent but one which just didn't live up to expectations. This team was led by a boy who, in this writer's opinion, should be voted the league MVP—Peter Cappadonna. Peter is a southpaw who pitches and plays first base. He is a superb hitter who can hit for power and average, and is a good fielder around first base.

But it is as a pitcher that Cappadonna really excels. He was the star pitcher for weeks and this year was easily the best pitcher in the league. He has had many shut-outs, is the unofficial league leader in strike-outs and has pitched 1 no-hitter. He also has a ten and one-third inning hitless streak to his credit.

Other fine players for the Highlanders include shortstop Gary Simon and third baseman Jim Hendrix. Simon, a good all round athlete, very quick and a good hitter. Although he does not have much power he is strong encough to hit the ball hard and with his speed he is able to turn singles into doubles. Hendrix was a star play at Newton South and is continuing his fine hitting at the Highlands. He is a strong line drive hitter who is an excellent number three hitter.

Together with Cappadonna, the latter two make up an excellent heart of the order.

Next week: A close-up look at the other six teams in the International Division.

Orr and Bruins miles apart

CHICAGO (UPI) — Bobby Orr and his attorney met with Boston Bruins officials in Chicago Tuesday for two hours of preliminary contract talks.

Although no specific figures were discussed in the meeting with Bruins' managing director Harry Sinden and the club's counsel-treasurer Charles Mulcahy, sources indicate the parties are widely separated.

Orr, who reportedly has been offered $6.5 million to jump to the World Hockey Association, has indicated that he prefers to remain in Boston. His contract with the bruins expires June 1, 1976.

Sinden said he had some earlier telephone conversations with Orr's agent Alan Eagleson but this was the first time they met to discuss the contract.

"They didn't toss around any firm figures nor did they mention any offer from the WHA. All they were really interested in is what the Bruins could offer," Sinden said.

Kiwanis care

Anthony Penzo, Newton Athletic Association Vice President, accepts check from Newton Kiwanis Club President Charles F. Blackington. The NAA puts 250 uniformed young football players on the field every fall in the Pop Warner Football League. In the winter season another 200 boys are sponsored on the Newton Schools basketball courts. Help your child be a top tennis player

By BUCKY ADAMS

Before anything else is said, let me first point out that there is no guarantee that anything you do will definitely make your child a good tennis player. In other words, there is no magic formula for success. However, there are many things that parents can do that will increase the possibility of their child becoming a good player. This five part article deals with these things.

Part I: Development at the Early Stages (Age 4-6)

Belive it or not, you can actually start teaching your child tennis at the age of four. THis does not mean starting him off with lessons. Children at this age do not have the attention span or the understanding to begin taking tennis lessons. However, it's a good idea to bring them with you to watch you play or take a lesson.

Children are almost always excellent mimicks and if they watch tennis a lot when they are young. They will have a good ideas of what a swing looks like when they begin to play themselves. I have seen many children learn a service motion just by imitating the service motion of people they have seen play.

A specific case that comes to mind is a nine year old boy who came to me for a tennis lesson. When we began working on the serve, he bounced the ball four or five times, blew on his hand, and then served the ball in the appropriate service box. This boy had never had a service lesson, but he had seen Jimmy Connors play tennis. By imitating his serve, he had developed a pretty good service motion, himself.)

In the same manner, a child will have a good ideas of what a forehand, backhand, volley, etc. look like, if he has seen them a lot.

At the age of five or six, there are certain things that a child can do to develop good eye-hand coordination. THis is most important in tennis and is often the toughest thing to learn. Playing ping-pong is a good way for a child to increase eye-hand coordination.

Ping-pong is an excellent pre-requisite to tennis for several reasons. 1. It involves the same idea of hitting a ball over the net into a specific area. 2. The paddle is smaller and lighter than a tennis racket and therefore easier for a youngster to control. 3. There is less running and physical endurance needed to play ping-pong than is needed to play tennis. Therefore, it is easier for a child to play an hour or so without getting too tired.

Shortly after your child has been playing ping-pong, it is good idea to buy him a junior tennis racket. These rackets are a few inches shorter, and a little lighter than a normal tennis racket. They usually cost around eleven or twelve dollars.

At the beginning, let your child fool around on his own with a tennis ball and racket. While your playing, let him practice on the sidelines. Bouncing the ball on his strings, or dropping the ball and hitting it against the fence are a couple of things he can try doing. This is good because he will be getting a feel for the tennis ball without worrying about missing shots.

Later on, when you see that he is able to hit the ball and he has developed a little more confidence, you can toss some balls to him from the other side of the net. Make sure that he is standing fairly close to the net. If he is too far away, he will try to hit the ball too hard which is something you want to avoid at this stage. Toss him a few balls and always be encouraging.

Do not worry about his form and do not try to make a lesson out of it. Lessons will come later on. Just tell him to watch the ball and meet it on the strings. If he is doing well and is getting encouraged, you can keep going for fifteen or twenty minutes. If he is having trouble and is beginning to get frustrated, don't push it. Do not make this into a work session, but rather a fun session. If you are getting upset because your child isn't doing well, he will sense it and become impatient with himself.

You have now given your child a very good start in tennis. In Part II, I will talk about where you should go from here.

Foley on cloud nine

was any difference on being picked to this team, and the football squad, the reply was" "It was kind of fun to play for the National league because I already knew all the kids, and we were going to play the rival Waltham. But there really was a big difference because football meant a lot more to me and it was a lot bigger game. This is the first year they have had a National game, but coaches and scouts don't go to look at that. But they did go to look at the football game."

Dana prefers football over baseball, and this year he will attend Boston State with hopes of playing on the varsity football team. He doesn't know about playing basketball and baseball because he may just work, because as he put it "I need the money." Who Doesn't? He thinks that college football should be different than high school football, because the kids will be faster and bigger.

When asked why he picked Boston State, because hemust of had other offers from bigger schools, Dana replied "believe it or not, I didn't. I had a prep scool that I was thinking about, but it was too much money to gamble on because I could get hurt, and that would be it." He said that he might like to transfer except that he wouldn't be allowed to play for one year, because of college rules, and he's afraid that he would go stale. It would be tough for him to discipline himself into getting into shape after a year's layoff.

Dana would love the chance to become a pro one day. That's a chance that he see's far off, but at just a shade under 6 feet and 185 pounds, you just never can tell how college ball will treat him. One day, if he works hard enough at it, it just may come true.

Dana was, as said earlier, the only football player from two pretty good football teams to be picked to the game. But he said that he thought that there were a couple of players who probably could have played from North high, and at least one from South.

Dana Foley. Obviously one of the best athletes in Newton, if not in the area, and a kid, who, if he keeps working as hard as he did in his three years of sports at Newton North may just be an outstanding athlete at Boston State, and after that, who knows?

Whatever happens, best of luck to this fine athlete in his continuing endeavors.

Boston 200's castle

"The Castle," unique home of Boston 200's Official Bicentennial Exposition "Victorian Boston". Located at Stuart and Arlington Streets, it was built in 1891 by William Preston as headquarters for Boston's elite First Corps of Cadets.

Plant clinic planned for August 28

Free plant care, advice, and demonstrations will be offered by the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at their Plant Clinic at Prudential Center's Boylston Street Side on August 28.

Experts from the Society will be on hand to doctor plants brought to the clinic free of charge. They will also give advice on soil choice, pruning, watering, how to keep home plants healthy in differing temperatures, and demonstrate potting, rooting, and growing techniques.

In addition to the Plant Clinic, other events at Prudential Center this summer are the free Summerscene Band Concerts every Monday evening, rotating Lobby exhibits, and the Bicentennial Pavilion featuring daily the multi-media show, "Where's Boston?", a slide presentation of Boston today.

The public is cordially invited to attend.

Boston 200 celebrates Victorian Boston

Life in Boston during the Victorian era comes alive again in Boston 200's world's fair scope exhibition, "Victorian Boston." The exhibition focuses on the inventions, clothes, sadvetisements and personalities that distinguished Victorian Boston. It is sponsored by The Gillette Company and will be open to the public through December 1976.

Located two blocks from the BostonPublic Garden on Arlington Street, "Victorian Boston" features graphic displays, machines, improbable inventions and film presentations designed to evoke the mood and character of life in Boston from 1875 throug the early 1900's.

The exhibits cover technology, lifestyles, industiral development, transportation, and the topographical changes made in Boston. Original photos and daguerreotypes, clothes, and artifacts are used to explain how the rich, middle calss, immigrants, and factory workers fared before the turn of the century.

Technological innovations like the power loom, which revolutionized economic and social existence is represented by a loom taken from a New England factory. Early attempts at flying machines are represented by built-to-scale modes.

Visitors also are able to speak over a replica of an early Bell-invented telephone, to see a 1903 film of a trilley ride down Boylston and Washington Streets, and to pedal both a bone-shaking high-wheeler and a kiwi-like zephyrion.

The personalities who were famous in 19th century Boston, from John L. Sullivan--Boston's boxing stron boy--to Isabella Stuart Gardner are depicted in 20- to 30- foot high photographic murals. Other graphic displays show the advertisements, magazine covers and art which made up Victorian popular culture.

"Victorian Boston" is housed in an actual nineteenth century building, The First Corps of Cadets Armory, on Arlington Street near Park Square, and is on the Freedom Trail Loop of the Gray Line Bicentennial Shuttle Bus.

The castle-like structure was built in 1891 as a fortress by William Preston. Boston 200 was enabled to make numerous repairs to the building through the generosity of the Vappi Construction Company, Inc.

"Victorian Boston" was designed by Carlos Ramirez and Albert Woods of New York, and is sponsored by The Gillette Company. Admission is $1.50 for adults and $ .75 for children. It is open daily 10 a.m. to 8 p.m.

"Victorian Boston" is one of three Boston 200 exhibitions which will be of world's fair scale. There will be one exhibition for each century since the American Revolution. The 20th century exhibition, "Where's Boston", opened at the Prudential Center on June 21. The eighteenth century exhibition, "The Revolution" will open in mid-September in the Quincy Market rotunda behind Faneuil Hall.

WHO'S IN THE DOG HOUSE

During the warm summer months, many dogs that are normally indoor pets move outdoors to summer doghouse quarters. For dog owners who do keep their pets outside in warm weather, the answer to the question, "Who's in the dog house?" should be: you are—at least once a week.

A regular house cleaning schedule is vital if you want to prevent your pet's house from harboring unwelcome guests such as fleas, ticks or other parasites.

No matter what kind of material is provided for bedding inside the dog house, cleanliness is the most important consideration for your dog's comfort and well-being. If shredded newspaper or wood shavings are used, they should be swept out and replaced every week. If old carpeting, blankets or towels are used, they must be cleaned every week too.

The interior walls of the doghouse should be scrubbed clean every few weeks and allowed to dry thoroughly before the dog is allowed to move back in. Dampness is a health threat to your pet, so walls and roof should also be checked for cracks which might allow water to enter.

Having a problem with your pet? Write to Pet Care Corner Animal Rescue League of Boston, P.O. Box 265, Boston, Mass. 02117. Space permitting, we will try to answer your inquiries in this column.

DEFINITELY CAPRICORN

Q. For some time it has deeply bothered me whether I am a Sagittarius or a Capricorn or a little of each. I was born on December 21, 1940 at 9 p.m. in Patterson, New Jersey. I would so appreciate some insight into what kind of a person I am.

N.

A. On your birthdate both the Sun and Moon changed their Sign of the Zodiac. The Sun entered Capricorn at 6:55 p.m. Eastern Standard Time therefore since you were born two hours and five minutes later, your Sun Sign is Capricorn.

The Moon entered Libra at 8:37 p.m. E.S.T. that Saturday, December 21, 1940, therefore being born twenty three minutes later, your Moon Sign is Libra. Your Ascendent, the cusp of your First House is the twenty fifth degree of Leo. Both planets Mercury and Venus were in Sagittarius.

Your chart as a whole indicates you are gregarious, like to have people around you, even though you keep your distance until you feel they can measure up to your ideals and ideas.

Undoubtedly you have considerable charm, a pleasing personality and much talent. You are inclined to be somewhat sensitive and this may cause you to take as well as give offense easily.

You have a sharp, penetrating, independent intellect. You are inclined to express your thoughts in an open, frank and at times impulsive manner. You can be quite persuasive and are apt to be impatient with those who you consider to be dull or stupid yet you would not deliberately offend them.

SGT. WILLIAM MUNROE

Member of Lexington's minuteman company, Orderly Sergeant to Capt. Parker, tavern owner, Sgt. William Munroe formed with the Lexington men on April 19, 1775. He fought the British when the first shots were fired, and later during the day as the red-coats retreated. His tavern, still standing, was used by both British and Americans for treating wounded. Heroic Sgt. Munroe is typical of the thousands of minutemen who assembled to protect life, liberty and property. These minutemen were forerunners of today's Massachusetts National Guard.

"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1776 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex, village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.

To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day, if you will especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1976.

EPA terms pesticides hazardous to humans

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has issued a "notice of intent to suspend" the registration of pesticide products containing chlordane and heptachlor, according to Regional Boston EPA regional administrator John McGlennon.

The action, authorized by the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide and Rosenticide Act (FIFRA), was taken to protect public health, McGlennon said. These chemicals have been found to pose an imminent human cancer hazard he added.

The Environmental Protection Agency has issued a "notice of intent to suspend" the registration of pesticide products containing chlordane and heptachlor. The action, authorized by the Federal Insecticide, Fungicide, and Rodenticide Act (FIFRA), was taken to protect public health. These chemicals have been found to pose an imminent human cancer hazard.

Chlordane and heptachlor are commonly used for home, lawn, and garden pest control. The only uses that have been exempted from the suspension order are termite control by ground insertion and the dipping of roots and tops of nonfood plants. Use of both these chemicals had already been ptohibited or severely restricted by state laws in all six New England states.

Last November EPA issued a "notice of intent to cancel" the registration of these chemicals. At that time the Agency cited data confirming the persistence of these chemicals in human tissues, including stillborn infant tissues and human milk. EPA also cited studies showing that chlordane and heptachlor caused cancer in test animals.

Under procedures prescribed by FIFRA, Velsicol Chemical Corporation of Chicago Illinois, the sole Uniyed States manufacturer, representing itself and numerous formulators, who formulate, package, and sell the chemicals under various brand names, requested public hearings to contest the cancellation notice.

As part of the recent suspension action, EPA Administrator Russell E. Train notes that during the 18 months required to complete the cancellation hearings, more than 38 million pounds of heptachlor and chlordane are likely to be released into the enviroment.

In view of the potential hazard of such a release, and of new evidence which confirms and heightens the human cancer hazard posed by these chemicals, the Administrator determined that these pesticides constitute an imminent public health hazard and suspended their registrations

In announcing the suspension action, Mr. Train also cited the following findings regarding chlordane and hetachlor and human health:

—New human tissue studies show that heptachlor epoxide and oxychlordane—metabolites formed when heptachlor and chlordane enter the human body—were present in 97 and 98 percent, respectively, of people sampled.

—The Food and Drug Administration's market basket survey reporst measurable amounts of heptachlor and chlordane found in 73 per cent of all dairy prodcuts and 77 per cent of all meat, fish, and pultry products sampled.

—In 1974, more than 7.5 million pounds of these pesticides were applied in and around the home by homeowners who may expose themseves, their families and neighbors to these chemicals by direct contact with the skin, by inhalation, by contamination of clothing, and by ingestion.

—Results of a number of new studies uphold previous findings tht these chemicals do induce cancer in test animals.

There are approximately 20 formulators of chlordane-heptachlor products in New England, most of which are expected to appeal the suspension. Under procecures prescribed by FIFRA, the formulators will receive expedited hearings and a final ruling will be made before the end of this year.

If the suspension order is upheld, there are a number of substances that can be used in place of chlordane and heptachlor for pest control. For lawns and shrubbery, aacceptable substitutes which are widely available include carbaryl, lindane, and malathion. For ticks on pets, substitutes include carbaryl, DDVP, and lindane. For ants in houses, substitutes include baygon, DDVP, and methoxychlor; for flies, DDVP and lindane; for roaches, baygon and malathion.

The best way to ind an acceptable substitute is to read the lables on available products and choose one which is designed to control specific pests, under conditions existing in your home or garden. Also, the Cooperative Extension Service can provide advice on choosing the right pesticide.

This suspesion notice should not cause disposal problems for people with supplies of these products. Formal use of small quantities of these chemicals in ccordance with label directions is an accepteable means of disposal.

However, if you wish to dispose of rather than use remaining stocks of chlordane or heptachlor, you should not dump them into drains, sewer systems, streams, ponds, or other water supplies. Sall quantities (less than five pounds or one gallon) may be wrapped in several layers of newspaper and disposed of through routine trash collection, or buried at least eighteen inches deep in places where they will not leach into water supplies. Larger quantities should be taken to state-approved sanitary landfills specially designated for disposal of hazardous materials.

McGlennon said that although this suspension action was based on "imminent human cancer hazard," the major threat is the introduction of an additional 38 million pounds of chlordane-heptachlor nto the environment. There is simply not need to panic about remaining supplies of these pesticides, he said.

UFO's real?

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — If there are beings elsewhere in space, they probably are just as concerned with energy and financial problems as earthlings, astronomers say.

The experts discounted the notion other planets have dispatched flying saucers to earth. Such a space venture, they said Sunday, would require an enormous expenditure of energy and money.

"Even from a nearby star, the amount of energy needed would be extraordinary," said astronomy professor Harold Weaver of the University of California, Berkeley.

"It would not be the most economical way to establish contact," said Dr. John Billingham of the biotechnology division of the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's Ames Research Laboratory at Mountain View, Calif.

"The most logical way to establish contact is radio communication," added Billingham. He is devoting a year to the subject of intelligent extraterrestrial life and how to reach it if it exists.

Billingham, Weaver and computer scientist Jacques Vallee were part of a panel discussing extraterrestrial life at a fourday meeting of the Astronomical Association of Northern California.

"If I wanted to send information to earth from another planet, I would broadcast a program," said Vallee. "Knowing what we now know about physics, radio would be the most sensible way to communicate."

"Of course, the distance is enormous and the radio signal — which could also be picked up by television — would weaken, so we need far more sophisticated equipment than we have now," Billingham said.

"It wouldn't be the kind of broadcast you could pick up on the Walter Cronkite show," added Vallee.

But there is, in fact, a handful of persons around the globe — maybe 8 or 10 — who are, constantly trying to make radio contact with outer space, said Billingham.

How?

"You take a radio telescope and point it at a suitable star in hopes that a planet goes around that star," he explained.

After the panel discussion, the audience went to see a series of reruns of the science-fiction television series "Star Trek."

What About Pet Turtles?
By RICHARD W. BRYANT,
Director of Education
Animal Rescue League

The Food and Drug Administration's recent ban on interstate sales of pet turtles has prompted several inquiries from concerned readers.

For the benefit of those who have not read about the decision, here are the details in brief: as of July 1, the distribution and sale in interstate commerce of small pet turtles is banned by the FDA because of the "turtles' potential for spreading disease." Turtles can transmit bacteria that cause salmonella infection (commonly known as food poisoning) in humans.

The ban applies to live turtles withshells less than four inches in length, as well as to fertile eggs. It does not extend to shipments for scientific, eductional and zoo exhibits; nor does it affect the sale of turtles in the states where they are raised.

Since 1972, all turtles transported interstate for sale were required legally to be examined and certified free of salmonella. This program, however, was difficult to administer and also left open the possibility that a turtle could become infected after certification and sale.

What does the new ban mean to people who already own turtles, or who work with them for educational purposes? Primarily, it emphasizes the need to exercise a few simple, commensense precautions:

—handle turtles as little as possible and teach children that turtles are animals to watch, not play with.

—make sure you and your children wash your hands thoroughly with hot water and soap after handling a turtle, his container or its contents.

—don't allow children to kiss the turtle (or any other pet for that matter).

—never adopt a turtle which you find in its natural habitat.

Horticultural Hall in Boston is national historical landmark

Horticultural Hall in Boston, home of the Mass. Horticultural Society, has been recognized as a national historical landmark, according to an announcement today by Roger Cheever, executive director of the society.

Nominated by the State Historic Preservation Officer, both Horticultural Hall and Symphony Hall, which face each other on Massachusetts Avenue, will be listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

The National Register is the official list of the country's cultural resources worthy of preservation and includes buildings and sites significant in American history, architecture, archeology and culture.

The society has just completed a major renovation of the lobby of the building. The first floor of the building also houses a number of exhibition halls and classrooms, from which the society presents a range of shows, lectures and classes for its members and the general public.

On the second floor of the building, the society has its main offices, and also offices from which it publishes Horticulture Magazine, one of the oldest and most respected magazines in its field. The society's library, on the same level, is the most comprehensive library of its kind in the country.

Also housed in Horticutlural Hall are many of the headquarters of the specialized plant societies in the New England region.

"We are extremely pleased to be named to the National Register," said Roger Cheever, executive director of the society, "as it is an indication not only of the historical significance of the building, but the continuing importance of the Mass. Horticultural Society."

Founded in 1829, the Mass. Horticultural Society is a non-profit, membership group, which among its other projects, sponsors the famed N.E. Spring Garden & Flower Show at Commonwealth Armory each year.

Hong Kong women start long break with tradition

HONG KONG (UPI) — The frail Chinese woman pulls her dawdling granddaughter through the streets, bending under the weight of vegetables, fruit and meat in her shopping bag.

Running for the bus, she scoops up the child, tugs the groceries and tries to enjoy the few minutes' ride before tackling the laundry in the bathtub at home.

Her apartment is an overcrowded and hopelessly messy 40-square-foot room shared with 12 other family members.

Looking much older than 43, she bends to do the washing, while thinking about what to cook for dinner.

Her chores never end.

This is her life, raised as she was in the tradition that has bound her to her home and tasks that would make Western housewives blanch.

The family considers itself lucky. The grandmother is still strong enough to watch the child and do the shopping while the mother works. Without her, the mother would have to stay home and they could not afford even the poor living quarters they have now.

While women in China are on their way to liberation, Hong Kong women have barely made the first step. But even they are finding that doors barred to them in the past are slowly opening.

Many Chinese women in Hong Kong for the first time are daring to question tradition.

Helping them achieve more meaningful lives is the Hong Kong Woman's Council which is sponsoring a conference in October on the theme, "The Hong Kong Woman 1975—Where Is She Now?".

The first of its type in this British Crown Colony, the conference is being organized in conjunction with the United Nations' International Women's Year.

Jane Rice, council secretary, said the conference will examine the stress the family structure goes through as it is increasingly subjected to Western ideas, the changing values applied to love and marriage and the expanding amount of birth control advice and services available.

Eileen Blake, spokeswoman for the conference, said this will be the first opportunity for Hong Kong women from all sectors of society to exchange information and views about their lives.

In a city where a man staying home with the children while the woman holds a fulltime job warrants a newspaper story, a conference focusing on women's identity is a sharp break with the traditional submissive role.

"The conference is not radically feminist, is not militant, and isn't anti-men," Miss Rice said. "It is about women for women, although men will be welcome to attend."

Conference planners hope to draw 500 women and men from all of the colony's interested nationalities, but particularly Chinese.

The conference probably will have no effect upon the weary grandmother's life. But it could lay the cornerstone of a brighter life for her granddaughter.

Computerized mailing lists to aid politicians

CONCORD, N.H. (UPI) — Computerization has come to New Hampshire and its presidential primary.

Stewart Lamprey, a power in Republican politics for a quarter century, and three associates have put together a computerized list of all 420,000 registered voters in the state. Their limited partnership, Direct Mail Systems,is ready to handle direct mailings for politicians or anyone else to all the state or any fraction of it.

In another couple of years, they hope to offer complete service from political counseling to printing to mailing, to anyone who requires it.

Direct Mail Systems already has offered to sell its service to each of the known Democratic candidates for president, and Lamprey intends to offer it to President Ford for his campaign. The New Hampshire primary is the first in the nation in presidential years.

"We are offering the services of a computerized list to anyone who's interested in purchasing them," Lamprey said today. "The greatest emphasis will be placed on the political end, but we expect more of the use will be for business."

"We can break lists down statewide, or by congressional, governor's councilor, state senate or state representative district, or by any county, town, ward or zip code. We can break names out as to whether they are Republican, Democrat or Independent," he said.

The partnership will mail anything for anybody, but it won't give out the mailing list because it has cost $50,000 to put it together thus far. Lamprey, a real estate dealer who has been speaker of the New Hampshire House three times, Senate president three times, and served in Washington as federal cochairman of the New England Regional Commission, expects it will be several years before the venture recoups its expenses and makes a profit.

Fewer than 50 women in more than 2,000 industrial firms are employed in a management capacity and earn $20,000 or more in salary annually.

Prescription drugs sometimes have entirely different names in different countries, and world travelers need to be very careful in having prescriptions refilled abroad, warns a recent issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

LOADING A MUSKET
FLINT STRIKES SPARK
POWDER IN PRIMING PAN IGNITED BY SPARK PAPER CARTRIDGE MUSKET BALL POWDER

Loading a 1775 flintlock required 10 separate motions. The loader tore the paper cartridge with his teeth, sprinkled powder in the priming pan, then rammed the cartridge down the barrel with his ramrod. Pulling the trigger, the hammer (holding a flint) struck a spark to ignite the powder in the pan, and this fired the cartridge. Loading and firing took 20 seconds. For national defense, today's minutemen — the Massachusetts National Guard, are equipped with modern, automatic rifles that fire many times in a minute.

LOADING A MUSKET

Loading a 1775 flintlock required 10 separate motions. The loader tore the paper cartridge with his teeth, sprinkled powder in the priming pan, then rammed the cartridge down the barrel with his ramrod. Pulling the trigger, the hammer (holding a flint) struck a spark to ignite the powder in the pan, and this fired the cartridge. Loading and firing took 20 seconds. For national defense, today's minutemen — the Massachusetts National Guard, are equipped with modern, automatic rifles that fire many times in a minute.

The Only

The Jaguar XJ12 is a class of one, the world's only production V-12 sedan. Its engine is astonishingly smooth, with great reserves of torque even at low speeds. Yet this is a compact power-plant: it displaces only 326 cubic inches and delivers 17 MPG on the open road in EPA tests. Coupled with Jaguar's traditional luxury and legendary sports car handling capabilities, the XJ12 is truly a car that must be driven to be believed.

Eugene J. Rothman

Rothman named Putnam VP

Eugene J. Rothman, 77 Harwich Rd., Neton, has been appointed vice-president of The Putnam Management Company, it was announced today by Norton H. Reamer, president.

Rothman joined Putnam in 1970 as a security analyst, and was made assistant vice-president in 1972. He has a B.A. in economics from Rugers University, and an M.B.A. from the Wharton School of Finance at the University of Pennsylvania.

Richard one of top 500 agents

The Presidents Council is composed of the top 500 agents in New York Life's field force of 9400 throughout the United States and Canada. Membership is based on the agent's 1974-75 sales records.

Newton-Waltham Bank adds 'BayBank' to name

Giles E. Mosher, Jr., chairman of the board and president of the Newton-Waltham Bank and Trust Company, announced that at a recent meeting of the board of directors it was voted to change the bank's name to BayBank Newton-Waltham Trust Company, to be effective upon approval by regulatory authorities and the bank's stockholders.

It is expected that the necessary steps to accomplish this change will be completed by this fall.

The move is in conjunction with Baystate Corporation, the holding company, which will change its name to BayBank, Inc. Each of the other nine affiliate banks in Eastern Massachusetts will simultaneously change their names to have BayBank precede its name.

A list of the proposed new names is as follows: BayBank Harvard Trust Company, BayBank Merchants, N.A., BayBank Merrimack Valley, N.A., BayBank Middlesex, N.A., BayBank Norfolk County Trust Company, BayBank North Shore Trust Company, BayBank Union Market, N.A., BayBank United, N.A., BayBank Winchester Trust Company.

In making the announcement, Mosher stated that this change, coupled with the intention of coordinating much of the advertising, several services and much of the operational capability, is intended to permit BayBank Newton-Waltham Trust Company to provide improved and more varied services to all its customers. It will have the added effect of identifying each of the Baystate banks in the Eastern Massachusetts area with the others and with the holding company, but in such a way that each bank retain its historical identity.

Headquartered in Waltham, the Newton-Waltham Bank presently has 24 offices in 11 cities and towns west of Boston. Baystate Corporation, Boston, a multibank holding company, is the third largest banking group in New England in terms of deposits and has assets in excess of $1.9 billion.

Gordon becomes chairman of Shoe Service Institute

Irving E. Gordon, 61 Brandeis Rd., Newton, owner of Gordon leather and Shoe Findings Co., Roslindale, was elevated from president to chairman of the board of directors, Shoe Service Institute of America, at its annual convention.

Shoe Service Institute of America is a national trade association headquartered in Chicago, Ill., with wholesaler-members coast to coast who sell to shoe service (repair) shps and retail she stores.

Serving as president from 1972-1975, Gordon's duties as Chairman of the board of directors became effective at the final regular membership meeting of the Convention, July 16.

Responsible for a host of innovative industry programs, his most notable achievement has been the organization of an on-going national public relationsprogram and the implementation of this major effort slated to begin Sept. 8. In his role as president, Gordon continually contacted industry segments for support and consultation. His leadership and drive were the constant example for others who assisted him.

Through his "President's Message," a monthly column appearing in Shoe Service WHOLESALER Magazine, a monthly publication published by the Shoe Service Institute and distributed to its members, Gordon was a voice that few, if any, did not hear.

Irving Gordon

The industry supported public relations program, designed to alert the public to the value of having shoes repaired, was fostered and guided by Gordon, who single-handedly has raised a vast amunt of funds for a continued program.

Under him, the Institute has developed a number of valuable business assists for its members, holds regional meetings in conjunction with board of directors meetings, has gained national recognition in such publications as the Wall Street Journal, Money Mazagine, Nation's Business and the Chicago Tribune among others.

Gordon's vision has resulted in a streamlined Institute Publication Program with both Shoe Service WHOLESALER and SHOW SERVICE Magazine, a monthly that reaches over 25,000 shoe servicemen (repairmen) in this country and Canads. His ideas have resulted in two publications that are enjoying increased advertising at a time when indications show that advertising purchases are below nornal.

'Skin of Our Teeth" not for everybody

By RANDY MUDARRI
Graphic Theater Critic

Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize winning play, "The Skin of Our Teeth", is not for everybody. It will appeal mainly to the relatively small audience for serious plays.

In this grandiose comedy, the indestructibility and folly of the human race is the theme. Throughout history many catastrophes have devastated the human race: disease, famine, wars, etc. Yet, after every disaster, there are human beings left. These people pick up the pieces and start again. At times between 1940 and 1950, there was and wasn't a city in Hiroshima. No matter happens, those who survive rebuild and start again.

It is with this thought that Thornton Wilder wrote the play during World War II. In 1942, a year of world-wide defeat, things were looking grim. "The Skin of Our Teeth" is Wilder's way of saying, "Hang in there. We'll make it." Whereas Darwin said that only the fittest will survive, Wilder optimistically alters the thought a bit to say that there will always be someone to survive and carry on, despite ourselves.

The play chronicles the survival of a family, come hell or high water; and, if war is hell, both do come.

Mr. and Mrs. Antrobus, Adam and Eve if you will, are sitting quietly in their two-story house during the Ice Age when is is discovered that their maid, Sabina, has let the all-important fire to go out. Also present is the Antrobus' son Henry, nee Cain, who has a violent aversion to throwing rocks' and their daughter is Gladys. Their pet dinosaur and pet mammoth come in from the cold, as does Moses (of Charlton Heston fame) and a few acquaintances to partake of the shelter and sandwiches.

A few thousand years later, at the Convention of Mammals (held in Atlantic City, New Jersey, of course0, Sabina is now a beauty queen who attempts to allure Mr. Antrobus, a newly elected officer among mammals who is celebrating his 5000th wedding anniversary with his family. The convention is rather abruptly ended by The Great Flood. Upon boarding a vessel filled with two of every animal, the Antrobuses are warned by a fortune teller to think it over, they have a new world to make.

Still later, after a devastating war, the Antrobuses and Sabina take stock and start once again.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" has always been controversial; not controversial for the issues dealt with in the play, but simply (?) for the manner in which they are presented.

Theatre's traditional concepts are cast aside. Time has no boundaries. The characters have no boundaries' for Sabina and Antrobus step out of character to either address the audience or the stage manager who appears on stage. The play, itself, has no boundaries for anything goes, everything goes.

Do not be mislead to believe that this approach, itself, is the trouble. Many unorthodox methods of presenting plays have been accepted by the audiences and understood. "The Skin of Our Teeth" just does not do the job. Many people, perhaps the majority, cannot handle nor comprehend such a theatrical kaleidoscope.

At curtain, there wasn't an empty seat in the house. By the beginning of the third act, there was a noticeable amount. During the third act, more people left, while many who stayed were yawning and fanning themselves.

There is one saving grace for the production. Elizabeth Ashley, as Sabina, gives one of the greatest performances that I have ever seen on stage. Her scenes are most refreshing, especially in contrast with the rest of the show. The audience could not wait for Sabina to reappear on stage. She really brings the audience to life.

Perhaps they can relate to her because, when out of character, she acknowledges that she doesn't understand a word of the play.

Alfred Drake, as Mr. Antrobus, is steady; too steady! in fact, for there is no change in him when he steps out of character. Martha Scott does very well as the ever-wat'hful mother and wife. Steve Railsback has a tendency to overact as Henry. Janet Grey is adequate as Gladys. Charlotte Jones is appropriately eerie as the fortune teller. F.J. O'Neill is amusing as Mr. Fitzpatrick, the chagrined stage manager.

For TV fans, Barry Livingston, who portrayed Ernie in "My Three Sons", is now 21 and enthusiastically appears in a small role as the Telegraph Boy.

Jose Quintero's direction is fine, as he functionally presents on stage what Wilder has demanded of him. Ken Billington's lighting is outstanding.

On an intellectual level, Wilder hits his mark. On a comprehensive level, he fails miserably. He gives the audience pieces of information which, for the most part, they cannot put together. Sabina comes right out and tells them not to try. If you can't put the pieces together, you won't know what the puzzle is all about.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" is the first production of the American Bicentennial Theatre which intends to produce 10 American plays, both old and new, during the 1975-76 theatre season. The American Bicentennial Theatre will mark the first time that the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts has itself produced an entire season of plays. It will include a representative selection of American classics and new plays, drawn from the full range and repertory of the American theatre. Xerox Corporation will support the entire season.

The corporation has committed up to $400,000, for the project, if required. It is believed that this will mark the first time a single leading industrial corporation has funded a full season of live theatre. This will be Xerox's major contribution to the U.S. Bicentennial celebration.

"The Skin of Our Teeth" continues at the Colonail Theatre, on Boylston St. in Boston, until August 30.

Elizabeth Ashley stars as Sabina' the eternal siren' Thornton Wilder's Pulitzer Prize winning comedy, "The Skin of Our Teeth"' with Charlotte Jones as the fortune teller. The production is at the Colonial Theatre Aug. 5-30.

TM lectures scheduled

Dr. Harold H. Bloomfield, psychiatrist and author of the authoritative bestselling book "TM, Discovering Inner Energy and Overcoming Stress", will speak via videotape onthe Transcendental Meditation Program and mental health, Wednesday, Aug. 20, and Thursday, Aug. 21, at 8 p.m. in the Usen Auditorium of the Newton-Wellesley Hospital.

The lecture, sponsored by the International Meditation Society, is free and the public is invited to attend.

The first psychiatrist to be qualified as a teacher of the Transcendental Meditation Program, Bloomfield has lectured extensively on TM throughout the United States, Canada, and Europe.

In this taped presentation, Bloomfield develops a powerful argument for the widespread use of Transcendental Meditation as a means to combat stress and to develop human potential. According to Bloomfield, TM is an effortless, natural mental technique which results in a profound state of relaxed alertness and deep rest.

As an adjunct to Bloomfield's discussion, Robert E. Ferguson, chairman of the Wellesley Area World Plan Center for the Transcendental Meditation Program, will be on hand to answer questions onthe TM technique and programs in the area.

Household Hints

Deodorize tennis shoes, hiking boots and sneakers by sprinkling dry baking soda in them.

Green leaves are nature's purifiers. They absorb carbon dioxide from the air and release oxygen in its place.

A sealer used on raw wood provides a sound surface for the finish coat. It keeps undercoating and stains from bleeding into the finish coat.

Rub your hands with a little vinegar to remove fish and onion odors.

Rehearsal

The Ward Street Players second summer production will be "Nitrous Oxide," performed in the Temple Emanuel vestry Aug. 18 to Aug. 21 at 8 p.m. Shown rehearsing (from left) are David Frutkoff, Gary Kaplan and Jana Tyler. Call 965-2039 for reservations.

Predict $9 jump in tax rate

Real estate taxes are expected to go up about $9 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation, according to Comptroller Larry Marino.

Marino estimated this week that taxes may hit $159, up from last year's rate of $150.40.

The total increase since 1972 would be 14 percent, if Marino's prediction holds true.

The new figure would represent a 6 percent increase over last year's tax rate.

The tax rate will not be set officially probably until the first week in September, Marino said.

The state Department of Corporations and taxation must first certify the amount of free cash available, Marino explained.

So far, it appears to Marino that there will be about $4 million in the city's surplus funds, with $3 million of that available for use as free cash. Free cash is that amount of surplus that can be used immediately, to apply against the tax rate, for example

Unless there is a special meeting of the Finance Committee, no decision can be made this month. The Finance Committee determines how much of the surplus can be used to offset taxes.

The tax rate will be set on the basis of the old assessments, since by court order the new appraisals, based on revaluation, have been held up for one year.

Sunflower

Mike Crocetta, 16, of 32 Mosman St., West Newton, transplanted a six-inch Sunflower sprout from the west to the south side of his home. The result was a 12 foot Sunflower with leaves measuring 18 inches across. Mike plans to enter this and other plants from his garden in the Bicentennial Harvest Fair Oct. 5. He will also study experimental biology at Newton North this fall. (Williams photo)

Life Care facing delay?

Financing problems may cause an indefinite delay in the construction of the Life Care center on Stanton Avenue in Auburndale, it appears this week.

Rabbi Murray I. Rothman, a director of the non-profit Interfaith Life Care Center, Inc., said Monday that problems in "getting the financing ironed out" with the owners of the land will probably delay filing for the needed state approval.

If the group does not file within two weeks, it seems certain construction will not begin before the aldermanic permissive use of the site expires on Jan. 22.

The Interfaith group will meet tonight, Thursday, to decide how it may get financing quickly so it will not have to appear before the Board of Aldermen again. The Board gave its approval for the 179-unit facility by the minimum two-thirds majority needed in January, 1975.

The Department of Public Health in Boston must receive an application from the group by Sept. 1 for its certificate of need and permission to run a health facility.

The state DPH holds applications for 120 days in case any other petitions come in for the same property, so the earliest the permits could be granted is Jan. 1.

Arthur Ullian, owner of the 3.5 acres along with Dr. Edwin Guiney, said this week he would still like to see the facility built.

Keith Willoughby, president of Mututal Bank for Savings in Newton and member of the Life Care committee, said Wednesday there are "no plans to get financing before Sept. 1," but said that does not preclude applying for the needed permits by that date.

Willoughby said the group had planned on financing from charitable groups, but the funds were not available.

"We are eternally optimistic," he said after explaining financing will have to come from the private sector of the financial world.

Willoughby also explained delays in finalizing a formal relationship with Guiney and Ullian, since there is no precedent in the state for such a project.

He said pay relationships and the decision of the ultimate owner are now agreed on by the two parties, but no contract is signed.

The construction of the building will be handled by the Interfaith group, but the management of the facility will be turned back to the owners of the property, Guiney and Ullian.

Police contract settled

A state-appointed arbitrator this week accepted the city's offer as settlement of the police contract dispute.

The salary of most patrol officers will increase by more than $2,000 over the two years of the contract.

From May, 1974, to May of this year, police will receive a retroactive increase of 8.06 percent, or $958, with a 10 percent raise of $1,284 in the current fiscal year.

This will raise the top salary for patrolmen from $11,884 to $14,125.

Money for the increases was put into budget reserve by the Board of Aldermen in February that is sufficient to cover the increase, which is the increase the city had offered when police contract negotitations began more than a year ago.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann's financial assistant, was very pleased with the agreement, as was the mayor.

"There is no question about it. It's a big victory for the city," Lebner said, noting that the arbitration process resulted in a 12 percent raise for Quincy police and a 10 percent raise for police in Brookline and Arlington.

At a press conference two weeks ago Mayor Mann thought the firefighters may accept the same offer from the city that the police were finally given.

State official refutes NHA 'no budget' claim for units

The Newton Housing Authority's claim that a budget does not exist for newly constructed low income family units because Department of Community Affairs officials were unavailable for discussions has been refuted by Robert Bateman, assistant to Communities and Development Secretary William G. Flynn, as "absolutely untrue."

The 20 Beaconwood Road units are scheduled for occupancy in seven weeks. The housing authority says attempts to obtain budget guidelines from the DCA have been inhibited by changeovers in DCA officials after the Dukakis administration came into office.

However, an annoyed Bateman asserted, "I am sick of having housing authorities use the state as a whipping boy . . . we have been available since January and if (housing authority) has a serious problem, they can bring it our attention and we will discuss it with them."

The new units are, according to Frank Quinn, NHA executive director, financed by private investors who buy bonds endorsed by the state. As a result, he says, the housing authority is not allowed to spend any money without the DCA's approval.

Bateman admitted that the DCA could not approve a budget "until the legislature approves our budget." Asked if the state were holding up such a budget until the legislature approved the budget, Bateman said this was not so. He added that if someone in the DCA were holding up discussions, he would like to know who they were.

The housing authority has a meeting scheduled Friday with a representative of the DCA to take a "first crack" at arriving at a budget. According to a DCA representative there is "no hard and fast procedure to work out an Initial Occupancy Period budget...there is no carefully thought out system with parameters" to develope a budget.

Also, because so few 705 projects have been built by and because this is a first for the city, Quinn says both agencies are struggling with such questions as who will supply the utilities and what will be required to maintain the properties.

These 10 duplexes have been marked as possibly the most expensive low income family units in the United States. Their cost has been estimated at roughly $71,529.

Adding to the housing authority's lastest problems is the fact that the DCA is balking on approval of 36 units of elderly housing slated for Thurston Road. In this project there were also to be four low income family units.

"The housing authority has been repeatedly warned that the cost per unit (on Thurston Road) would come over the limit set by the DCA," says Bateman. He maintains that the NHA has "taken a position they would still like to bid." The "whole matter is under review," says Bateman.

Perini comes back with Norumbega plan

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

The Perini Land Corporation has announced it will try once more to get rezoning on a three and one-half acre parcel in Auburndale to erect a three story office building. The sit is on the south side of Commonwealth Avenue opposite the Marriott Motor Hotel.

This announcement came after a period of time during which the developer alluded to a decision to possibly sell the site to another construction developer. However, he has decided to approach the city.

The plan they will come to the city with has been "revised" according to Conal Doyle, assistant to the president at Perini. Doyle says the present plan calls for a 60,000 square foot building and the entrance and egress on Auburn Street has been "deleted." Also he says the site has been "lowered" to limit the visual impact. In addition Perini intends to deed a tennis court to the city. While somewhat changed, the plan is essentially the same one Perini has previously brought to the city.

The core of this issue is whether or not Newton should permit the developer to rezone. Perini says the proposal will take a parcel and utilize it, not only for profit, but also to correct an "eyesore" in the community and create "work and tax relief."

The Auburn Street abutters, according to Doyle, are in agreement with the plan and approve of it. However, other residents on neighboring streets in Auburndale are concerned rezoning will cause "creeping commercialism" on Commonwealth Avenue.

In support of that theory, a report commissioned by the Newton-Norumbega Association, prepared by Edward W. Wood, "an independent expert and city planner," states that "if the residential neighborhood to the south on Commonwealth Avenue is invaded by a high-intensity commercial use, the potential for further changes in use in the neighborhood, along Commonwealth (Avenue) particularly, is markedly increased."

Wood claims residents begin to sell off their property for increased values if they are converted "to the new commercial use or receive decreased values for the older use." Once this begins, he says, the residential neighborhood begins to change and over the years is "slowly converted to another use and the potential for blight is increased."

However, Perini argues the site has been used commercially since the 1800's for "a gas station, a bus terminal, an amusement parking lot and an overflow parking area for commuters and the entire neighborhood."

They maintain that neighbors were aware of the "commercial and neglected use before they bought their property.

Doctors return to China after 25 years

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Forty-two American physicians surveyed the state of medicine in China five months ago, and for two Newton doctors it was also their first trip home in 25 years.

Drs. Te-Wen Chang and Diana Yueh-Ming Chang studied medicine together in China in 1949 and then left to the United States to finish their study of western medicine.

Having left the country just before Mao Tse Tung became ruler, more was different on their return trip than the faces of their relatives.

They spent most of their time visiting hospitals and clinics which are found in every city or commune.

Te-Wen, the father of five children who have gone through the Newton schools, was very impressed by what he saw in his homeland.

He talked with extreme enthusiasm about the equality of the services available to the all persons, but he's not so sure if he'd like to live there.

"If you're very idealistic, you'll like it there.

"If you are rich and very comfortable, then you will like it more capitalistic" in America' he said.

Te-Wen, a viral physician at Tuft's New England Medical Center, found that one major concern of Chinese doctors is education of patients so they can take better care of themselves.

In his native Mandarin he heard children explain their treatments for rheumatic fever and glomerulonephritis.

Te-Wen saw many trends in America as coming from China. Besides women wearing pants, he noted in a speech he gave to the Tufts medical students that mothers are requested to stay in the hospital while preschool children are being treated during the day.

This is now being done in the U.S. to reduce the psychological trauma of children in a strange place.

Diana, who has taken a Catholic name since the couple was married in 1950, is a radiologist at St. John's Hospital in Lowell.

Medically, she said "They take very good quality films with old-fashioned equipment. I feel so embarassed."

When she went back to work she felt she should do something to improve the quality in her hospital's laboratory.

"The people are so healthy, so full of energy. It's unbeleivable.

"I feel so old, and they are so happy."

Diana just could not believe that the people in China were so relaxed. They knew how to have a good time.

"Americans worry about jobs, education for their children, health, retirement . . . too much irritation here.

"The poor people here are very depressed, because of class. Poor people here have no power.

"In China there is no class. Everybody keeps their chins high.

"Chinese enjoy life. They have a feeling of satisfaction'" she said, knowing she would never be able to live like that.

Since their family has grown up in Newton from 1956, they would not want to move back to China. None of their children speak Mandarin with them, although the two daughters in Newton North are studying the language. But they couldn't if they wanted to, since it would be very difficult to be retrained to that way of life, Te-Wen said.

He said, "They don't want us. The society is to such a degree that they don't want to start over again; to reeducate."

"For a short visit we're okay, but not for too long.

"They live differently than we do here."

Production

Both were surprised at the change in the country since they were there 25 years ago.

At that time, China imported nearly everything from pins to paper, but now only watches are imported.

"The biggest difference is the countryside. The irrigation system is tremedous. It takes a lot of food for 800 million people," he said.

The standard of living is low, but money is not needed for much. The average worker only brings home 60 yen a month, or about $30.

Living costs are low, though, and with both husband and wife working, a family can save a few months and buy a television for 300 yen.

Te-Wen was very proud of his native country, noting that they do not overtrain children for work, and there is therefore no unemployment.

"When you ask a youth what he is going to do after high school, they will all say, 'I am going to go where the government wants me.'"

The Changs saw the trip advertised in a medical journal three weeks before they left, and only had their visas two days before they got on the plane.

Diana Yueh-Ming Chang and Te-Wen Chang

In their 11-day trip, they visited Peking, Shanghai, and Kwanchou, also known as Canton.

Free birth control is available to all women for the asking' administered on a small piece of paper in small but effective dosages.

Chinese medicine is often associated with acupuncture, but the Newton doctors know little about the method, being trained from American textbooks while in China.

The only application of acupuncture they saw was a woman awake when her breast was being removed. After the doctor had finished, the woman sat up on the operating table and thanked the doctor. Acupuncture was used for anesthesia.

Both doctors would like to see medicine become more available to the poor in America, and see the two nurses that Newton hired for senior citizens as a first step.

Te-Wen made the comparison betweeen the nurses and the barefoot doctors in China.

In his speech to the medical students, he described their role as follows:

Jingling coins lead to arrest of 17-year-old

Jingling coins and bulging pockets were the clue to arresting a Waltham teenager who allegedly broke into four homes in Newton Centre early Thursday morning.

Officers Janice S. Brack and Dianna C. White arrested Micheel D. Einis, 17, of 11 Brown St., Waltham, for four counts of breaking. and entering in the nighttime.

From 2 a.m. until 3:15 a.m.,police received phone calls of reported breaks into homes in the area of Royce Road, Commonwealth Avenue, and Commonwealth Terrace.

At some homes Officers Brack and White had to wake the owners when they found purses on the lawn or other evidence that the homes were broken into.

Police received the first call at 2:02 a.m. from Michael Libenson, 7 Commonwealth Pk., who said that he had surprised a burglar in his house who fled. A pocket book was disturbed but nothing was reported missing.

Police had to wake Richard J. Wolf at 51 Royce Rd. and Joseph Krzys at 58 Royce Rd. to tell them heir homes had been broken into. Money was missing from a wallet in the Wolf house, but it was not known what was missing at the other house.

John McGonagle surprised a burglar at 929 Commonwealth Ave. who had entered through an unlocked window, but he did not know what was taken.

Ellen Chess of 78 Commonwealth Pk. and Ralph Siegel of 21 Royce Rd. were awoken by the officers when they found pocketbooks on the lawn.

Ms. Chess reported more than $90 stolen from her purse including $10 in change.

Willie J. Goldwasser called police at 3:17 to report someone he had scared someone from his home on 124 Garland Rd.

At 3:35 a.m. a Garland Road resident told the police that a man had run through her yard toward Greenlawn Avenue.

Officers Brack and White stopped a man walking on Homer Street in Newton Centre who said he lived in Newton and was walking around at 3:45 a.m.

When he walked away, the officers heard change jingling in his pockets which were bulging, after which they arrested Einis. him.

The Newton Graphic news deadline is Mondays at 5 p.m.

VOICE holds another meeting . . .

Spending, housing and land use emerged as the issues of most concern to members and nonmembers alike at the most recent meeting of VOICE, according to Chairman Don Levitan.

VOICE is a new political group formed this summer to represent politically moderate opinions and to work for the election of candidates that will most likely reflect the opinions of VOICE members.

Responsiveness of elected officials to their constituents was an important concern expressed at last week's meeting, which had a format of discussion groups.

When the question of increased taxes was raised, Ald. Joan Saklad asked which services residents would want cut so that taxes would not continue to rise, but no concrete suggestions were offered.

School department spending and lack of fiscal responsibility on the part of the School Committee were raised as an issue.

Some members want to see more moderate-income housing for Newton residents. One way to provide this, some said, is to allow conversion of large old houses to multifamily use.

Along with general worry about tax increases came a feeling that real estate revaluation should not be implemented until all cities and towns in the state are at 100 percent valuation. The group will support pending legislation to that effect.

A plan must be developed for the use of surplus municipal buildings, some felt, and a clear distinction drawn between commercial and residential districts.

Recreation facilities were thought to be inaccessible to many residents, and there were complaints about poor maintenance and vandalism in the playgrounds and parks.

School Committee member Joan Needleman, who is a candidate for alderman at large from Ward 5, brought up the inadequacy of public transportation within the city, which has occupied many people for many years, with no apparent solution in sight.

VOICE will make endorsements for the Nov. 4 election' and possibly for the Sept. 30 preliminary election. A screening committee will be meeting with all candidates, following which endorsements will be made by a 25-member executive committee.

The next public meeting of VOICE will be Sept. 3, 8 p m., in the community room of Post 440, 295 California St., Nonantum.

. . . counter group also underway

A second political group has been formed to elect candidates in the upcoming fall elections.

Campaign for Newton '75, the name of the counterpart of the politically moderate-to-conservative VOICE group, has been meeting over the summer to formulate its position on various issues.

Campaign for Newton '75 is comprised for the most part of liberal Democrats, while VOICE claims that it consists of both Democrats and Republicans.

VOICE recently opened its meetings to the public, but Campaign for Newton '75 is not soliciting membership and has not planned yet to have open meetings for discussion of positions.

Both groups intend to make endorsements for the election. VOICE has not yet decided whether to make endorsements for the primary, and Campaign for Newton '75 will announce endorsements at a public meeting on Sept. 19.

A position statement issued last week reads as follows:

"We believe that the citizens of Newton are entitled to a quality of life that includes decent housing for people of all ages and incomes, a high-quality educational system that is fiscally well managed, a good recreational program, enough open space for the human spirit to flourish, adequate public safety, and an efficient transportation system.

"Further, we believe that all citizens are entitled to equal opportunities. Those citizens with special needs should not be neglected.

"Campaign for Newton '75 believes that innovative leaders can accomplish these goals within a framework of fiscal responsibility, by choosing programs that will achieve the most for the tax dollar, by eliminating those archaic programs that have been nonproductive and a drain on the taxpayer, and by providing a more efficient delivery of basic city services.

"We believe that by eliminating waste and patronage, human services can be provided at reasonable cost.

"We believe that the property tax must not penalize thos least able to pay. The Cole-Layer-Trumble revaluation proposal is grossly unfair and should be rejected. A fair and equitable system of taxation must be developed to avoid the inequities inherent in the present system.

"We believe that the political leadership must offer substantive solutions to problems rather than hollow promises, and therefore Campaign for Newton '75 will endorse candidates whom we feel will provide this type of independent, positive leadership."

The statement is signed by "Committee in Formation":

State Sen. Jack Backman, Jane Brown, William Carmen, Beverly Carmen, Fay Cohen (chairperson), Tony Croce, Harry Crosby, Irving Fishman, Samuel Glass, Jerome Grossman, Peg Hannigan, Rep. Peter Harrington, George Hauser, Connie Kantar, Adeline Kaplan, Barbara Kaplan, Frederick King, Alan Korman (treasurer), Nancy Korman, Edward Kovar, Sanford Latner, Michael Mann, Rep. Richard J. McGrath, Robert Mitchell, Rep. David Mofenson, Leo Parnes, Mark Solomon, Kay Stein, Jeanne Stolbach, Mae Takayanagi, Thomas Torchia, Sylvia Wyman, Brian Yates.

Bar Association files brief in support of Dukakis'

BOSTON (UPI) — A brief supporting the constitutionality of Gov. Michael S. Dukakis' Judicial Screening Commission has been filed with the state Supreme Court by the Massachusetts Bar Association.

The brief was filed Tuesday along with a second supporting brief from the governor's chief legal counsel Dan Taylor.

The Executive Council has also questioned the constitutionality of the executive order setting up the 11-member committee. It filed a document with the court July 30.

In the document, the council asked nine specific questions relating to the constitutionality of the order. Action on three pending judicial appointments was held up pending receipt of the court's answers.

The council action was seen as largely political since Dukakis is seeking to abolish the council, which has authority to approve or reject judicial nominations.

The commission screens judicial applicants and presents the governor with a list of candidates. The governor has to select a candidate from the list or request a second list. The judge must be named from the second list.

The council argued in its presentation to the court the governor's action was an unlawful delegation of the selection power which he alone possesses under the constitution."

No Fault Divorce Passes House

BOSTON (UPI) — Reversing years of steadfast resistance to divorce reform, the Massachusetts House has given initial approval to a modified no-fault divorce bill.

The bill, which would allow for divorce on the ground of "irretrieavable breakdown of marriage," cleared its first legislative hurdle Tuesday, 171-52, with only perfunctory debate.

Similar bills have been defeated overwhelmingly in past years. Currently, the only grounds are physical and mental cruelty and infidelity.

Under the bill, a couple that agreed upon terms of divorce would file a written communication with the court, which could not be acted on for a minimum of 16 months.

In a contested case, the judge would make his finding in a period of between 16 and 24 months.

The bill was supported this year by the conservative Judicial Committee, which in past years has opposed similar measures.

Rep. Michael F. Flaherty, DBoston, chairman of the committee, said the bill is supported by the Massachusetts Bar Association and the chief of the state's probate courts.

Support also came from Rep. Robert C. Buell, R-Boxford, who said, "It's about time we have a change in our archaic divorce laws. People shouldn't have to lie in court and say they have been physical or mentally abused when they haven't been."

The only opposition came from Rep. Edward P. Coury, DNew Bedford. Coury said, "Marriage is a sacred thing. The laws should not be changed."

Additional House action and Senate approval are needed before the bill can be enacted and sent to Gov. Michael S. Dukakis for his signature.

NRA developer advised to wait before signing lease

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

While Newton Lower Falls commercial redeveloper, Spaulding & Slye' maintain they are ready to sign a lease with a "prime tenant", the Newton Redevelopment Authority has voted to have them hold off until a Sept 4 report before the aldermanic Land Use Committee.

The move was suggested by NRA chairman, Cecil Cadwell, in response to some queries by Newton aldermen as to why the lots on the redevelopment site were to be sold off one by one instead of one being developed as a whole.

This plan had been sought by Spaulding & Slye, to aid them in financing the project. Right now, because they have not signed their contract with the NRA, they are in default. Default could mean they lose their $60,000 deposit and their designs. However, the feeling is this delay is temporary until a report is made before the aldermen.

Although the commercial redevelopment is being stalled, the authority will meet at 3 p.m. Sept 4 to begin reviewing proposals on the housing portion. The housing will consist of 60 units; 15 will be for low income and the remainder for moderate and market units.

All plans are available for review by the public at the authority's offices, 2256 Washington St., Newton Lower Falls. Eleven developers and architects have submitted plans for the site.

Of these, one developer was considered ineligible because they had submitted an "irrevocable letter of credit" which was unacceptable and because the letter of credit had not been for the right amount. The authority had requested that a bid bond or certified check be submitted for ten percent of the sale price of the land which is $54,000.

A second developer had submitted a check three minutes past the deadline. The NRA attorney advised the authority to narrow down the selection and if it included this developer, then they would investigate the legality of the proposal.

The authority will select a developer on the basis of "integrity, financial stability and design" says Cadwell. Input from the community is being sought and the Lower Falls Project Area Committee is being asked to rate the developer's designs.

Mayor gives annual state of city address

By CYNTHIA BLACK
of the Graphic staff

A "year of financial stringency" was the prediction of Mayor Theodore D. Mann when he gave his annual State of the City message before the Board of Aldermen Monday night.

"Realistically and pragmatically," he told the aldermen and the audience, "I am not expecting any dramatic improvement in the economic outlook.

"I am asking all department heads and collective bargaining units to recognize the conditions for what they are and to prepare themselves for a year of financial stringency.

"As I now see it, it is inevitable that we will have to make budgetary adjustments in the year ahead that will permit the essential stabilization of the city's tax rate."

After reviewing the productivity of existing agencies, Mann mentioned only one change that might be sought in the future.

"My staff is currently investigating the possibility of giving added emphasis to the Health Department, " Mann told the Board. "We now recognize that this essential human service is so vital that it may be adviseable to seek the full-time servies of a health administrator. "

Mann also took the opportunity to rap revaluation and push for his reorganization plan when he spoke before the aldermen.

He characterized revaluation as "a source of heartache to city officials and people who are suffering the trauma of change as we attempt to bring equity."

"I am disappointed with Cole-Layer-Trumble," he declared, referring to the firm that revalued Newton.

He also said that before tax equity can be achieved, the State Legislature must "resolve existing inequities" in the disbursement of state revenues.

"I am suggesting to you tonight that you, once again, seriously consider a massive reorganization of the Department of Public Works, Street, Engineering and Water departments, and consolidating these agencies into one branch of government in an effort to eliminate duplication of services and raise productivity." Mann told aldermen.

"I will submit a new proposal for enactment of necessary legislation to establish such a facility in the near future," he continued. "With the retirwement of the street commissioner and the city engineer, I feel we shoud move forward with the reorganization a plan as soon as possible."

Accomplishments

"Notwithstanding the broad range of difficulties we face, we have, nevertheless, in the past 12 months, succeeded in implementing new ideas and new programs without adding any unnecessary burnden on our taxpayers," Mann said.

He cited the following as accomplishments.

"The transfer-haul station is well along the road to becoming a reality," Mann said. "The Newton-Waltham Regional Refuse Disposal District, one of the nation's first, merits commendation for all those who worked hard to bring it about."

The control center established in the Building Department which the mayor said has "helped avoid duplication of services by keeping better control of the work force and work load in that department."

The development of a five-year program by the Building Department outlining maintenance, repair and alteration requirements.

Internal handling of many contracts by the Engineering Department instead of through outside consultants.

"Very dramatically we've expanded the city's Planning Department through effective utilization of outside federal programs," he said. "I have instructed all department heads to consult directly with the city planner concerning all applications for grants so that in the coming year we can take full advantage of this valuable source of revenue."

"Our fledgling Department of Human Services has expanded its progress through the increased cooperation of volunteers and interns along with the successful utilization of federal and state grants," he said. "Through our cooperation and that of the Council on Aging we have opened drop-in centers in Newtonville and Newton Highlands. We have initiated a job placement bureau and telephone reassurance program, as well as programs for assistance in tax, financial and legal matters."

The Health Department, he said, has implemented new lead detection programs and has been involved in cancer and influenza screening and detection programs.

The Fire Department, he said, was given a national award this year for outstanding efforts in fire prevention.

The Police Department, he said, has taken its new data capability and used to identify high crime and vandalism areas of the city to shift patrols and make them more effective.

Staggering of evening hours at branch libraries has both increased library usage and lowered the cost.

The city received a $655,000 community housing and development grant.

Cooperation

Mann also used this opportunity to encourage a spirit of cooperation among the Board of Aldermen, the Executive Department and the School Committee.

"On this, the eve of the nation's 200th birthday, we must not forget the great empis given local government by our founding fathers," he said. "Local government is the heart of our democratic process.

"I realize that in government there will always be disagreements among us, but here in this city there can never be room for the public officials of the city to be disagreeable with one another in the discharge of their responsibilities.

State Representatives Lois G. Pines and Peter F. Harrington of Newton were recently sworn in as members of the United States Supreme Court Bar in Washington, D.C. Pines received her juris doctor degree from the University of Cincinnati School of Law in 1963. Harrington received his degree from the New England School of Law in 1960.

Waban teens held for break there

Alert cooperative neighbors and helped police arrest two Newton teenagers for allegedly breakino into a home on Pine Ridge Road last week.

Ronald Litwin, 17, of 115 Pine Ridge Rd., and Alan Goldman, 18, of 59 Ferncroft Rd., Waban, were arrested for breaking and forced entry into 158 Pine Ridge Rd., Friday at 12:04 a.m.

Litwin was also charged with possession of marijuana.

Police said a neighbor reported he was walking by the house Friday night and saw a white towel in the driveway, then someone turned around and pointed a flashlight at him, closed the trunk of a car in the driveway, and sped away from the home.

Capt. Richard F. Donahue had earlier seen two youths in the neighborhood fitting the description given by the neighbor of Paul Kaufman, 158 Pine Ridge Rd., Waban.

At that time about two hours before the alleged break, the two youths were carrying a white towel and a roll of tape.

When police arrived on Pine Ridge Road, a similar roll of tape was found on top of a stereo set in back of the house.

Social service slow organizing

The third part of Newton's community development program is the social services program, which will get $30,000 in the first year.

The total program will get $655,000 in federal money for the first year under the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974.

The social services program is completely nonspecific so far, except for a $5000 commitment to the village of Nonantum to establish a multi-service facility in that community.

The $5000 is to be spent on leasing space for the center, which will house such activities as health care, day care, counseling, and referral services.

The remaining $25,000 is to be spent for financial assistance to existing or new social services directed toward the three target areas of the community development program, Nonantum, West Newton and Newton Corner.

The programs will be selected with the advice of a social services advisory committee, composed of seven members, four to be appointed by the mayor from among target-area residents and three to be appointed by the mayor from among professionals in the social service field who are willing to serve. The three latter people cannot be affiliated with any agency providing services in the city.

The selection and appointment of people to serve on all advisory committees for the community development program — a total of 35 — is going slowly.

Originally Mayor Theodore Mann had planned to have appointed all the committees by the end of July. Vacations seem to have slowed things down, especially in Nonantum, where not one person has come forth to serve on a committee, Planning Director and Community Development Director Charles Thomas said this week.

Thomas is obtaining volunteers for the committee jobs and making recommendations to the mayor on their appointments.

While community development funds have been available since July 1, the Silver Lake Family Nursing Health Center is going begging for rent money.

Thomas said that it would not be possible to free funds before December to help that agency, because first the advisory committee, yet to be established, must vote to help the agency financially, then an environmental impact statement must be filed, a public hearing advertised, and other procedures gone through.

He estimates at least seven weeks to clear all procedures through the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development and obtain release of the necessary money.

As far as physical improvements in the target areas go, Thomas said nothing should be expected till next spring.

While in back yard, lock the front door

An Auburndale woman will probably be more cautious when she gardens behind her house after she had $100 stolen from her wallet while gardening last Friday afternoon.

A thief entered the unlocked front door of Mrs. Richard Gates' home on Central Street ' Auburndale, and stole the money and a diamond cocktail ring while she was in her backyard from 2 to 4 p.m. Friday.

Police warn other gardeners to lock any unseen portion of a house while in the yard.

Board of Aldermen

Community Development passes

Creation of a Community Development Department and a plan for increased parking for Boston College Law School were approved by the Board of Aldermen Monday night.

A reconsideration motion was filed on the Boston College plan Tuesday, so it will be discussed further by the Board. Land Use Chairman Ald. Joseph McDonnell filed the reconsideration.

The Community Development Deparmtment, which would consolidate planning and development, housing, redevelopment, conservation, urban beautification and similar agencies in one department with one department head was approved by a vote of 17-3, with four aldermen absent.

Prior to passage, it was amended by Ald. David Jackson to include a provision enabling the Board to assign some powers within the department by ordinance.

Jackson pointed out that without this additional section, the Board would be delegating all control of the department to its head.

Jackson's addition passed on a unanimous fvoice vote.

The consolidation was proposed by Ald. Terry Morris.

Now the city must go to the State Legislature with enabling legislation which the Legislature must pass before Newton could implement consolidation.

Supporters of consolidation pushed Monday to have the planned passed by the Board so they will have time to seek the enabling legislation during the current session of the General Court.

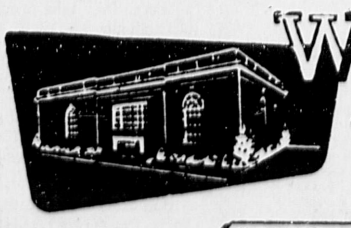

Jackson wanted to send it back to committee for further study because he had been unable to attend two of the meetings on the plan.

His motion to send it back to committee lost by a vote of 14-4.

Essentially, the plan abolishes the Planning Department, Planning Board, the Newton Redevelopment Authority the Newton Housing Authority and replaces them with a "municipal department

Betty Ford's candor

The reaction to remarks on premarital sex, marijuana and abortion by Betty Ford on national television indicate a couple of things.

One is that a lot of Americans apparently would prefer to believe the world is the way they think it ought to be instead of how it is. Another is that when a political figure is honest about how things are, he or she is portrayed as endorsing the situation.

But maybe the critics are overlooking what kind of political campaigners the Fords really are. While the President has been out wooing the conservatives he fears may switch to Reagan, his wife may be working the other side of the street and luring the 18 year olds into the Republican fold.

Anyway one thing seems pretty sure. When Betty Ford says she endorses the Equal Rights Amendment, she practices what she preaches.

Dead Democracy

At the outset, there were comparisons between the election law convictions of India's Prime Minister Indira Gandhi and the Nixon impeachment crisis of a year ago. As to how democracy is supposed to work to protect itself from abuse of power, all those comparisons can be put to rest.

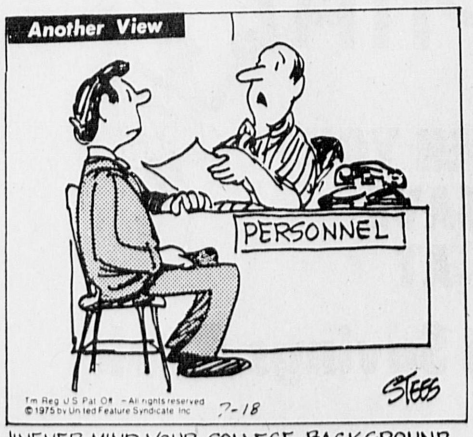

The Indian parliament has found a way to resolve the whole business. It simply changed the law to say that the offenses of which Mrs. Gandhi was convicted no longer exist.

That apparently means there is no case for the Indian supreme court, which was scheduled Monday to start hearing the appeal of Mrs. Gandhi's conviction and its mandatory penalty of not being able to hold elective office for six years.

To make things more certain, parliament amended the penalty provision to leave it to the discretion of President Ali Ahmed, who happens to be an appointee of Mrs. Gandhi.

There are some sparks of freedom left in India. Its two national news agencies sent detailed stories of the action of parliament and the explanations of what it meant. But the new censorship caught up. The story was cut to two paragraphs with no explanation of how the action applied to Mrs. Gandhi. Parliament's action was described as "a bill to amend election law."

That is not all which is being amended by the sad events in India. The collapse of what was described as the world's largest democracy puts an enlarged responsibility on the United States to explain and demonstrate the principles of self-government to the world.

Environmentalists taking over the world

Commentary by Henry J. Taylor

The Environmental Protective Agency's bureaucrats, a full 8,700 of them snug inside their annual $1 million payroll and with their volunteer ecol-freaks and environmental extremists, have gone wacky.

Extremes are always dangerous. The Nader groups, the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, etc., are people who deal in extremes; they build a whole armada inside the bottle. It is woefully difficult to penetrate their flackery. As Sen. Robert A. Taft said of Joe McCarthy: "A good case, but overstated."

You simply cannot reason with etremists. They act like busy sheep dogs barking the sheep into line. Nor do they want to be reasoned with. They want power; Ralph Nader and his groups, the Sierra Club, Friends of the Earth, etc.

The EPA bureaucrats are beholden to them; their systematized blackball can cost a bureaucrat his job. So, working hand in glove with the EPA, they get power. It's the vicious circle of "You scratch my back, I'll scratch yours."

Take our energy crisis. The environmental etremists often step forward with solutions that are worse than our problem. They are always in there with elbows flying and knees pumping. As a result, Congress has dawdled with our energy crisis nearly two years and done nothing.

For example, what could be more obvious than that we must utilize Our fine, literally superabundant, almost-smokeless coal? But our ecol-freaks frightened Congress into decreeing the Clean Air Act. It states that a fraction of one per cent of sulphur in the air threatens America's health and well-being. That's utterly ridiculous.

Don't forced cutbacks in electricity, heat, transportation, etc., damage America's health and well-being. Isn't it lethally dangerous for us to depend on oil imports from hostile or unstable Arab nations?

The EPA's contention that we're being asphyxiated by our industrial plants is refuted by overwhelming scientific data. But the EPA ecologists' panic-mongering has falsely victimized us.

The EPA forced Boston parking lot companies to reduce their employes 25 per cent to reduce air pollution. The EPA finally abandoned this nonsense, but was able to enjoin San Francisco's completed plan for a convention hall and beautiful buildings construction in a slum.

Water pollution? The EPA's sensational claim that carcinogenic materials in peoples' water threatened New Orleans residents with cancer was proven totally hypothetical, but nevertheless became Congress' Safe Drinking Water Act.

Moreover, the ecol-freaks are getting wacky all over the world.

For example, England's environmental extremists loudly insisted that the supersonic Concorde's sonic boom damaged famous old British cathedrals. They placed instruments in them, but these showed absolutely no such evidence. Instead, the instruments showed plenty of damage from the cathedrals' own bells.

Britain's government approved on Sept. 13, 1973, the tunnel under the English Channel. But British environmentalists, theorizing about scars on rural Kent, opposed it. The great tunnel has since been shelved for this and other reasons.

Subarctic Canada is loaded with natural gas. But Canadian environmentalists are fighting to obstruct a multibillion-dollar pipeline to the gas-starved United States.

In Australia, a remote 200-square-mile area is filled with phosphate, a very precious export commodity. This was an ocean-bottom some 25 million years ago. A few whale vertebrae that old are found there. Austrialian ecol-freaks seek to prohibit further phosphate mining to protect such fossile findings.

Norway's environmental extremists (without one shred of evidence) blame Norway's seaside pulp and paper plants for the myriad of rodent lemmings which, every few years, rush into the sea in the Trondheim region en masse and drown.

America's ecol-freaks have already caused many valuable pesticides to be prematurely banned. They have stopped our supersonic plane. They are ready to stop solar energy.

Unknown to us, the EPA can blackball nearly every type of major city construction and has become the final word on nearly all job-producing, consumer-needed development by invoking the abused name of ecology.

There is a serious lack of sense of priorities in the environmental question. And until we compromise with common sense, the pressure of the ecol-freaks is an invitation to the American people to a self-beheading.

George Wallace's dilemma . . .

Commentary by Henry J. Taylor

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Reelected Alabama Governor George C. Wallace is not faced by a political problem. He is faced by a dilemma.

A lifelong Democrat, he is a certain contender for the Democratic Party's nomination for President of the United States. Until shot in Maryland during the 1972 Democratic primaries Governor Wallace won more votes than any other contender in the primaries. Again and again he upset all predictions from one end of the country to the other.

Many observers feel that after the shambles of the party's nomination of Sen. George McGovern, to say nothing of Mr. McGovern's campaign, the Democratic party left wing will confront high odds in trying to nominate at its 1976 convention a left-winger all over again — including Sen. Edward M. Kennedy.

But here enters the Wallace dilemma. If the Democratic party denies Governor Wallace the nomination, as well it may, it is a vast oversimplification to suggest that Governor Wallace and his followers go to the national electorate as a third party.

The split in the Democratic party votes, and it could be huge, could elect Republican Gerald R. Ford.

When Theodore Roosevelt bolted the publican party and formed his Bull Moose party in 1912, the split votes of the Republicans defeated Republican candidate William Howard Taft and elected Democrat Woodrow Wilson, a minority winner, President of the United States.

This lesson is by no means lost on Governor Wallace.

Looking ahead to 1976, the way to read the revitalized career of Governor Wallace is to view it in terms of the Democratic nomination and a great, surging push against the weakened Republicans or, denied the convention's nomination, this dilemma.

Governor Wallace is a deeply mellowed man. Not an ounce of rancor is left in him. As a World War II flyer who volunteered for many missions in the Pacific, he is also inherently fatalistic. This fatalism has matured into compassion. It even extends to his private feelings about Arthur Herman Bremer, who attempted to assassinate him in 1972.

Governor Wallace will be 56 on August 25. While a youth he twice won the Golden Gloves championship. And in this state his stamina has always been regarded as phenomenal.

In the Silver Springs, Md., hospital after Bremer shot him, Governor Wallace felt he was on the mend — clearly out of the woods. But, suddenly, the doctors told him that, weak as he was, only a second major operation could save his life. Governor Wallace has since faced a third, fourth, and fifth major operation. And, most recently, he broke his leg!

The lower-limbs paralysis has not changed. An elevator at the rear of the Governor's mansion carries him to the second floor. There he practices his daily therapy. At his speaking engagements, now frequent, a podium supports his legs like the podium Franklin D. Roosevelt used through the years.

You find Governor Wallace relaxed at that podium, but the later handshaking and bantering with each person in the long lines of those who come to greet him is meat and drink to George C. Wallace.

But, behind the scenes, the great support is kindled by his wife, Cornelia, a truly remarkable woman of great charm and helpfulness.

Mrs. Wallace is writing a book; a story of an American girl's life in our great country. The manuscript begins with a poignant reference to her husband, so touching that I asked permission to reveal it:

"To George: I will walk for you if you have no legs I will reach for you if you have no arms I will speak for you if you are mute I will interpret the sounds of the earth for you if you are deaf I will move your fingers over the shapes of the world if you are blind All these things I will do for you if you ask me to But if you ask me for sympathy, I would give you none For in obliging your wishes I would surely rob you of the spirit to meet the challenges of life."

A new tax credit for home owners

Analysis by Gus Tyler

NEW YORK — The average American family cannot afford to buy a home.

That is the conclusion of a study on the "Availability of Homes for Middle-Income Families" by the Library of Congress.

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D.-N.M., would like to do something about this by revising the tax law to help lower-middle America.

The price of the median single-family home in 1974 was $41,300. To buy and keep such a house required an income of at least $23,330. The median family income in the country, however, was only about half that sum.

In the years from 1969 to 1974, the price of the average home has risen by more than 20 per cent — from $34,100 to the present price. There are two reasons for this jump, according to Montoya. "Interest rates have nearly doubled for the average homeowner, and inflation has skyrocketed the cost of building materials."

To carry the median home at present entails a monthly cost of $468 a month — of which $306 goes for principal and interest on the mortgage and another $180 a month for taxes, insurance, maintenance, repair and utilities.

The present law that gives a homeowner a tax break by allowing him to deduct the cost of interest from his gross income does not — according to Montoya — offer much help to people in the lower middle-income bracket. The real beneficiaries are people in the upper-income bracket.

The reason is that the upper brackets pay taxes at a higher percentage and, therefore, the deduction is worth much more. For example: if you pay $2,000 in interest and you are in the 20 per cent bracket, you save $400; but if you are in the 60 per cent bracket, you save $1,200.

'You realize, of course, you run the risk of being gummed to death!'

Montoya proposes to correct this inequity by allowing a tax credit, instead of a tax deduction. This credit would be 45 per cent of the interest charge. In the example given above, both parties would get a credit of $900, that would be subtracted from the final sum due to Uncle Sam.

There would be a ceiling on this tax credit — so that if a man is paying $10,000 a year in interest, he would not be entitled to 45 per cent of that ($4,500) but would be limited to only $2,000.

In addition, this credit would only be applicable to a residence — not a business. (The provision would apply to coops and condominiums.) Finally, the credit would be available to one home only — the principal residence. If you are rich enough to own two or three homes, you should be rich enough to pay the going rate on the extra home.

Montoya figures that with this kind of a tax credit there would be another 100,000 families in the country who would be potential buyers of homes. If these families actually become home buyers that should give a little lift to the construction industry and to employment.

This tax credit would cost Uncle Sam about $4.5 billion in tax income. But, according to Montoya, most of this would be made up from the added income the federal government would get from a revival of business and employment in home building.

To some people crime is a pattern of life

By Henry J. Taylor, national columnist

Able FBI Director Clarence M. Kelley, a no-nonsense professional who swims in the clear waters of experience, cool and forthright, estimates that there are now 1.1 million full-time criminals in the United States. Eumenides with blood on their paws, you might call them serious crimes including rape and murder, have increased an appalling 18 per cent over 1974. "Highly specialized" pick pockets make about $15,000 a yea. Stock defrauders steal about $500 million annually. Shoplifters swipe another $500 million. burglars get away with $250 million, not including armed robbers. They take around $30 million. Embezzlers reap $225 million.

The sales of fake arthritis remedies alone exceed $225 million and self-employed professional men cheat the income tax collectors an estimated $8 billion per year.

Harlem's poor spend an average $10 per week on the illegal numbers game. Next to the food business, organized crime is today the second largest business in New York City.

Half of all U.S. arrests involve persons 18 years old or under. One in every six teen-agers will be in trouble with the law before he or she is 18. One of every 20 juveniles commits a crime. One quarter of all arrests involve those under 15.

New York City alone has at least 40,000 teen-age heroin addicts. This could grow to 100,000 by the end of 1975. Outside just one Bronx school, and in a single month, eight teen-agers were arrested for selling heroin.

At a recent conference of International Criminal Police Organization (Interpol) delegates from all over the world, they unanimously branded marijuana a dangerous drug. Yet a City College of New York study reveals that at least half the CCNY freshmen use marijuana. In the whole college, two students out of 10 use marijuana or other drugs. The heroin use is growing on the heels of the marijuana problem.

Director Kelley quietly ordered the FBI to study the police departments in 425 cities. The typical city increased its full-time police force to average one policeman for every 700 citizens. Yet 41 per cent of the cities with more than 100,000 population experienced over-average violence in 1975.

One of every 50 citizens will be the victim of a crime in 1975. The Kelley study investigated 228,032 arrests. Sixty-six per cent of the culprits had been previously arrested. Twenty-two per cent had been arrested twice; 11.7 per cent three times; 32.5 per cent four times or more. This is nearly a third of the entire 228,032 arrests.

Sixty-three per cent of those charged with rape had been previously arrested. Seventy-three per cent of those charged with murder had been previously arrested on the same charge. A baby born in one of our 50 largest cities has a two per cent chance of ultimately being murdered. This is more likely than a World War II soldier was to die in combat.

Of 539 offenders arrested in police killings, 77 per cent has been previously arrested. Sixty-seven per cent had been previously convicted. Director Kelley found that two-thirds of the police killers had been previously granted parole or were on probation.

Three out of 10 were actively on parole or probation when they killed a policeman. In one appealed case on the 23rd day after a convicted man should have been in jail, he murdered a police officer.

This is balanced justice? Our courts have utterly failed regarding previously convicted persons released to the streets and then rearrested for subsequent crimes.

The sick sentimentality that condones criminality and explains away acts of savagery as the inevitable reaction to social and other inequalities dismisses the individual from responsibility. Violence is not an abstraction. But by concocting the abstraction of collective guilt (whatever that means?), the proponents promote the dangerous trick of absolving all specifically guilty persons.

The fact is that, among many people, criminal acts are not an occasional slip; they are a pattern of life. Really threatening people walk around as free as a bird, do so in arrogant ease and then laugh their heads off about the state of affairs.

OPINION

Cold coverage

To the Editor:

Ald. Alan Barkin has been our neighbor and friend since his arrival on Parker Street some 12 years ago, and he was a Newton resident before then.

For at least 10 years we have seen him as a conscientious and fair-minded citizen who has contributed a great deal in his duties as alderman for Ward 8.

He received a great commendation for the able manner in which he conducted the meetings on low-income housing when he was chairman of Land Use a few years ago.

Our daughter, who has not lived in Newton since her college days, could not understand that with all of the recent publicity surrounding Alan Barkin, not one sentence was written about his contribution and devotion to our city that she had observed for so many years.

In fact the articles that have appeared in the Newton Graphic seemed the coldest of any.

As residents of Newton for 24 years, we would like to convey publicly our appreciation to Alan Barkin for his fine service to the City of Newton.

One side of Crystal Lake . . .

To the Editor:

Crystal Lake!

As a Newton resident, homeowner and taxpayer, I am disgusted with the Recreation Department's monopoly on the use of Crystal Lake.

Life saving programs, aquatic swim program, should be conducted during the daytime.

I work for a living, as do many other residents of this aree, and my only chance to swim is during the evening hours from 7 p.m. on.

On four occasions there have been senior life saving and swimming lessons in progress. On one occasion an aquatic show was in progress at 7:30 p.m. and the lake was closed. Up went my blood pressure!

My gripe is why can't these programs be conducted during the day? I am not against them, I think they have merit, but I see no reason to have these events occur during evening hours.

Also, I was dismayed by the Newton police attitude toward the few individuals who took a dip in a non-lifeguarded area of Crystal Lake Saturday, Aug. 2, the hottest day recorded in history.

To arrest these individuals and charge a fine was out of line. There are times when rules and regulations should be relaxed. After all, Walden Pond in Concord was open to all that hot weekend.

Crystal Lake is certainly not the most attractive area in the world.

With that obsolete bath house torn down, the peanut-sized beach expanded, it could be turned into a very attractive facility.

Like many improvements in this city, there will be lengthy discussions by the aldermen, and 10 years from now they will still be looking into the matter.

Elizabeth Marler,
Newton Highlands

. . . and the other

Dear Chief Quinn:

To you, our deepest thanks for your thoughtful consideration in maintaining and curbing, for the past weeks, the outbursts of nightly disturbances which have been most annoying and nerve-wracking, by an element which has no place in our City of Newton.

The thanks go out to your force of excellent men who have guarded and taken care of the needs of the residents around Crystal Lake, at all times, without prejudice and have at all times, acted, for the Law, as gentlemen.

We do have an excellent beach at Crystal Lake and there is no reason why these young people, aged 21 through 30 years of age, should use the premises for trespassing on property of those who abut the lake.

There is no reason why they cannot give or pay fifty cents for the privilege of using the facilities of an excellent program conducted by the Newton Recreation Department. If these young people can afford to pay for cigarettes and beer, they most certainly can afford to pay the fee for admittance to the Crystal Lake Bath House, for clean' wholesome recreation.

Our question is: What and where are the parents who permit midnight nude bathing and drinking?

We the voters and citizens of Newton try to contribute our share in the maintenance for the welfare of our young.

So, again, we wish to extend, to you and your force of men our deepest thanks in maintaining peace and dignity.

Residents of the Crystal Lake Manor

Now I understand

To the Editor:

Now I understand why Congressman Robert Drinan, S.J. is leading the pro-abortionists in Congress.

Drinan is on the National Advisory Council of the American Civil Liberties Union and "says he does not agree with all the views of the ACLU but believes that the better way to participate with such a group is by arguing rationally from within rather than trhowing stones from without."

On Right-to-Life groups, Cong. Drinan says "these people have a right and duty to protest . .x. However, I have continually urged the Right-to-Lifers to go back through the Courts rather than to seek to get a Constitutional Human Life Amendment."

The ACLU defends pro-abortionists, criminals and leftwingers only, Cong., never conservative groups who believe in liberty and justice. How about the civil rights of the unborn child?

Levine complimented

The executive board of the Newton Republican City Committee has sent the following letter to City Solicitor Howard Levine' commending him for on his efforts on behalf of the City of Newton. A copy was sent to the Newton Graphic.

Dear Mr. Levine: At a meeting of the executive board of the Newton Republican City Committee on Aug. 11, it was unanimously voted that a letter be sent to you congratulating you on your professionalism and the excellent job you did for the citizens of Newton in saving considerable money on the tax bills as a result of the recent school budget suit.

We feel that the city is fortunate to have as its city solicitor a man of your caliber.

"To become a barefoot doctor, a man or a woman must complete universal education, corresponding to compulsory education in the USA.

"They are sent from a commune to a district or county hospital to receive at least six months training in health care methods.

"On their return, they become part-time health worker and part-time regular worker in the commune under the direction of commune physicians.

"Their work includes immunizations, family planning, prenatal care, midwifery, first aid, treatment of common illnesses, as well as environmental hygiene.

"There are over one million barefoot doctors in China, three per 1,000 people, . . . and their role in education of the population is quite appreciable."

Both doctors agree that the conservatism of the major medical associations, such as the American Medical Association, is holding this country back from better medical services for the poor.

Like most doctors in private practice, Diana is a member of the AMA, but her husband, working only in a hospital, is not.

, .PD Te-Wen notes that the student medical associations have very liberal ideals, but most of them are forgotten when the students become doctors and are making a lot of money.

The West Newton doctors have many stories to tell and slides of their homeland and expressed some interest in talking to groups in the area.

Keep the rink running

To the Editor:

I don't know how many people are aware of the possible demise of the Charles River Skating Center. To close Charles River would be a tragedy!

The indoor skating facility has the potential for being the finest skating facility in the Greater Boston area. There is no question that skating is continually growing in popularity. The City of Newton, as well as several of its surrounding towns, has no indoor rink of its own.

Where will all the hockey, figure and 'fun' skaters go to enjoy this sport?

It's time the City of Newton spent some of the taxpayers money where they can see it and enjoy it.

If there are no private investors to save the skating center, then it should be the responsibility of the city to keep the facility running for its citizens. Perhaps towns like Wellesley and Needham would be willing to combine with Newton in this effort.

Both young and old in this fair city have a lot at stake here. Let's hope this huge City of Newton can somehow keep the Charles River Skating Center running for all its citizens to enjoy.

Contract

bargaining committee could be reached Wednesday morning for comment.

The final contract for the police has been signed by arbitrator Paul Summers and Newton Personnel Director John Ritchie, but the police representative has not yet signed.

Police Union President John Quinn said Wednesday that vacations have kept him from talking with lawyer Joseph McParland and negotiatior Gerald S. McAullife who represented the union in the binding arbitration process.

Quinn said,"It's not the package we bargained for," but confessed there is no recourse available now.

The union president said he would have gone along with the factfinder's recommedation if the city had accepted it.

The union's final asking package for the binding arbitration was the factfinder's recommendation of 8.75 percent the first year and 10 percent the second year, a difference in the final agreement of less than $100.

The other main contention of the police was the overtime pay. The police wanted the factfinder's recommendation of time-and-a-half back to Jan. 1, 1975, but the city only offered back to May, 1975.

Going before the factfinder, police had asked for overtime back to May, 1974, and a pay increase of 20 percent.

Under the binding settlement, the 20 sergeants will earn $16,670, the 10 lieutenants will receive $19,166, and the seven captains will receive $22,043.

of planning and development." A nine-member community development board would be created.

Similar consolidations have been carried out in Worcester, Springfield, Wellesley, Quincy, Medford, Lowell and Arlington.

Boston College

A total of 573 parking spaces for the Boston College Law School, to be relocated this fall on the old Newton College of the Sacred Heart campus in Newton Corner, was approved by a vote of 21-0.

McDonnell said Tuesday he had moved reconsideration because he decided the location of the road inside the campus to the parking lot should be reviewed.

The plan approved gives the college permission to put 50 parking spaces behind Keyes House North and Keyes House South in the campus.

Aldermen also approved two five-month trial periods in which Colby Street and then Westchester Road would individually be closed to through traffic and the general traffic pattern would be studied.

Grant Avenue

A move to try making Grant Avenue one-way north between Commonwealth Avenue and Beacon Street for 45 days was sent back to the Street Traffic Committee for further study.

Reconsideration

Reconsideration of the Board's denial of Newton-Waltham Bank plans for a parking lot in Newton Corner failed.

The motion to reconsider was made by Ald. Richard J. Bullwinkle after the Board denied the bank plan July 7.

Reconsideration failed by a voted of 9-7 with eight aldermen, including Bullwinkle, absent.

Human Rights Commission wants $20,000

The Human Rights Commission, revampe ago by a new city ordinance, will request a $20,000 budget that will include the salary of a full-time investigator of complaints filed with the group.

At the meeting last Wednesday night, the first meeting of the nine-member group in three months that had a quorum present, procedural rules were discussed that would be used with its new subpoena power.

The budget request that the aldermanic Finance Committee will hear next month includes $7,000 for a full-time secretary. The request for the factfinder's salary is $9,000. .

Florence Rubin, chairwoman of the budget committee, said the commission will also request $600 for a six-month ethnicity education program in the community and $300 for a film on the Police Department.

At least seven groups are planned to be included in the ethnicity education program during three-hour evening meetings. Featured will be the Italian, Jewish, Black, Greek, Irish, Chinese, and Yankee American communities, and possibly the Spanish community.

The film on the police will show the department from the views of a student, a parent, and police officer.

Last year when this project was mentioned, the high school had agreed to donate time and facilities if the commission would finance the materials needed.

The rest of the $2,500 in the budget would be used for office supplies, advertising, subscriptions, and postage. isory council member and

Robert W. Snyder, adv chariman of the rules and regulations committee, presented a summary of Worcester's regualtions for its Humand Rights Commission.

Steven Levinson from Worcester who advocates that Newton adopt regulations similar to Worcester's, was not present at the meeting as planned because Snyder felt the commission should review the rules further.

Lawyer Snyder told commission members and the five other people present that the Worcester rules would be a firm base to use for drafting Newton's rules.

"There's a lot to be said for a formula that has been proven with results'" Snyder said, referring to Massachusetts Supreme Judicial Court cases that upheld the application of the rules and the hearing process they describe.

Snyder made it clear that he did not propose adapting the Worcester rules exactly as they were written, since the two cities have different problems.

Worcester is twice as large as Newton, has a larger minority population, and has a lot of problems with the police, he said, noting the special wording in the rules about police complaints.

The City of Worcester also has a large staff for its commission, Snyder said, and rquires a lot of mailings for each complaint. This also could be changed to fit Newton's needs.

Newton's Human Rights Commission is the February, 1975, revision of the Community Relations Commission which has the power to suboena witnesses for an investigation to insure the civil rights of any individual or group.

It has an advisory council of 20 members which must meet four times a year by law, which includes one member of a law enforcement agency, the School Department, clergy, labor union, real estate, and a fair housing or other appropriate . civil rights organaization.

The commission's duties also include enlisting the cooperation of various community groups to help eliminate discrimination and achieve harmonious intergroup relations in the city.

One member of the adviso8ry council, Mrs. Silverstin, said she has been serving on three committees8 for one-and-one-half years, but only one committee has ever met.

Commission Chairman William Ramsey admitted there were some committee chairman that have not called meetings around real issues, and some committees may no longer need to meet regularly.

RAmsey also said he will be asking one chairman to resign, and may be asking some advisory council members to do the same since they have not attended meetings.

Ramsey wouldn't name anyone specific for the upcoming resignations, but said they would be requested by the meeting on Sept. 10.

To repalce inactive members, the chairman said he would recommend people to the mayor to appoint.

The commission will also meet Sept. 3 to discuss the Worcester regulations before the specialist, Levinson, addresses the group the following week.

Brutality complaint heard by Human Rights Commission

A claim of police brutality and discrimination by the police against a Needham youth was heard in a closed informal hearing last week by the members of the Human Rights Commission.

Capt. John J. Bartinelli said Monday, "I feel it was a very fair hearing" with Michael Miller and his parents.

Paul Miller, the father of the 17-year-old youth, filed the formal charges that stemmed . from the July 4 incidents in Upper Falls.

Miller was arrested for trespassing and had his case dismissed in Newton District Court July 24.

Miller and his family could not be reached for comment.

iPD Human Rights Commission Chairman William

Ramsay said the commission will meet in a private mediation session to decide on a recommended settlement. If both parties accept the recommendation that may have been made Tuesday, Ramsay will announce the settlement next Monday,

Newton reps firmly oppose 'unreasonable welfare cuts'

The Newton delegation to the Massachusetts House of Representatives stood firm last week against what they called unreasonable welfare cuts proposed by the governor.

While the House of Representatives, on a 200 to 31 roll call, approved a series of welfare cuts, including the elimination of 18,000 so-called employable persons from the General Relief rolls, Rep. David J. Mofenson, House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and Elderly Affairs, Rep. Lois Pines, Rep. Peter Harrington, and Rep. Richard J. McGrath voiced concern for the lives of human beings who will be affected by the cuts.

In a joint statement, they saidy:

"We firmly believe that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts must not abandon its historical humanitarian commitment to the poor and indigent. In economic hard times, we must all tighten our belts, reduce state spending, but not drop whole categories of needy people from state aid.

"The proposal we were asked to vote on included a provision which will automaticall eliminate 18,000 persons from General Relief regardless of whether or not they have been able to find work and regardless of hether or not there are any jobs available.

"Today there are nearly 400,000 persons out of work in Massachusetts. In such a climate it is highly unlikely that the 18,000 scheduled to be dropped will find jobs.

"In the past year, the Division of Employment Security has shown it is capable of placing into jobs only a small fraction of those unemployed welfare recipients who want to work.

"Between July 1, 1974, and March 31, 1975, over 87,000 General Relief and AFDC recipients asked the DES to find jobs for them. Only 6,942 ever found jobs, a placement rate of only eight percent.

"Now the governor wants to drop 18,000 allegedly employable General Relief recipients. But the Division of Employment Security has already admitted that it will not even try to place between 4-6,000 of the governor's 18,000 'employables' because it regards them as 'unemployable.'

"Last year, Cuyahoga County, Ohio, which includes Cleveland, dropped its policy of giving General Relief aid to single adults and childless couples. A follow-up study this spring indicated that 20 percent of the former recipients admitted to turning to crime to survive. While 85 percent actively looked for work, only 21 percent found work in a less economically depressed area than Massachusetts.

"The cost of incarcerating a former General Relief recipient who commits a crime in search of food will cost the state far more than the $38 a week it currently pays in welfare.

"As of July 1, Cuyhoga County discontinued the program and reinstated its former policy of providing aid to the needy.

"Massachusetts, in adopting the governor's proposal, becomes the only state in the nation in which a destitute person looking for a job and unable to find one will be denied any assistance from the state."

During the debate Mofenson offered an amendment to provide that General Relief assistance shall be granted for those whom the department determines are employable only after an applicant has submitted evidence from the Division of Employment Security that he or she has registered for work at a local employment office of the division.

Under no circumstances, according to the Mofenson amendment, would assistance be continued if the applicant failed to maintain his or her registration for work or failed to accept the offer of "any employment which pays the minimum wage, does not cause undue hardship, which is not available due to a labor dispute and in other respects meets other requirements as determined by the department."

The Newton delegation also supported an amendment which would have provided for a "workfare" program under which persons would perform public service wrok to qualify for General Relief assistance.

Under "workfare," General Relief recipients would work on public service projects at $2.10 an hour for two days a week. During the other days, they would be free to lood for permanent other employment.

According to the Newton delegation, "these proposals would have had the effect of not penalizing persons who want to work but just can't find jobs. We don't want to punish people who are unable to work because of the economy."

B.OTH OF THESE AMENDMENTS, HOWEVER, WERE REJECTED BY A MAJORITY OF THE House.

CETA reports 38 openings

Newton area CETA reported this week that 38 new on-the-job training positions are now open to eligible unemployed west suburban workers. Interviewing for the training posts, paying between $3-$3.75 per hour, is now underway at area CETA offices, 90 Bridge Street, Newton.

Director Charles F. Miller said that after an initial training period, usually three to four months, trainees become regular employees of cosponsoring companies. Newton CETA reimburses employers for one half of training costs, he said.

New job opportunities available to eligible persons in the 10 towns covered by Newton CETA are:

Allston: office clerk; Needham: offset pressman, electronic assemblers (20); Newton: carpet layers (2), cafeteria counter supervisors (2), bakers (2), assemblers (3), customer service person; Walthan: machinist trainee, canvas workers (2), spray painter, rubber molder, lathe set-up operator.

Miller reiterated that these openings are available to eligible residents of any one of the 10 west suburban CETA towns: Bedford, Brookline, Dover, Lexington, Lincoln, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Wellesley and Weston.

Eligibility for Newton area CETA programs is determined by federal norms.

Applicants must be unemployed for at least 30 days and in a life situation described by one of the following categories: Vietnam veterans, welfare recipients, handicapped persons, members of minority groups, persons over 45 or under 22, female heads of households, offenders and ex-offenders, technologically displaced workers, school drop-outs, former manpower trainees, and persons with limited English-speaking skills.

Riverside line may branch off to Needham

The branching of the Riverside Line from Cook's - function to Needham is one of several options for service to Needham that the MBTA is studying.

A study to be completed by Oct. 15 by the C.E. Maguire consulting engineering firm will also be the feasibility and environmental impact of extending the Orange Line from Forest Hills to Needham.

Other elements in the $300,000 study will be the upgrading of commuter rail service' adjustment and expansion of ridership projections, and an exapanded community participation program.

Prison escapee to serve 25 years for rape here

A prison escapee was sentenced to 25 to 50 years in Walpole State Prison for the kidnapping. and sexual assault of a young Brighton teenager near Hammond Park, Chestnut Hill, Newton last summer.

William D. Langton, 34, formerly of Forest Hill Drive, Braintree, pleaded guilty to charges of kidnapping, rape, sodomy, and forcing the 13-year-old to commit oral sex.

On June 29, 1974, Langton, after escaping from Bridgewater Correction Institute where he was serving a sentence for armed robbery, forced the victim into a car near St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton.

His sentence given last week in Suffolk County Superior Court will be served after Langton completes seven more years for the robbery conviction.

Selectmen's Assn. hits proposal to vary assessing methods

The Massachusetts Selectmen's Association Monday expressed opposition to a proposal to allow assessing by various methods in cities and towns. The testimony was delivered in written form to the members of the House Committee on Ways and Means during a hearing in Gardner Auditorium at the State House.

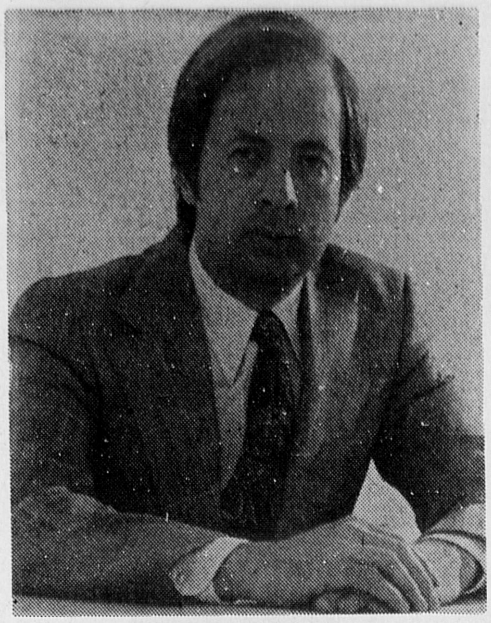

In opposing the legislation, the selectmen urged the legislature not to become involved in "the Boston political arena" by passing House Bill 5398. "The state constitution," according to the MSA," is clear in requiring that all cities and towns value at full and fair value so as to insure equity for all taxpayers."

The letter to the committee further noted that the Supreme Judicial Court, in the Sudbury case, commented about Boston by stating "the process (in Boston) has lost contact with reality."

The organization, which represents selectmen from most of the 312 Bay State towns, urged the committee to defeat the legislation and thereby insure equitable assessing practice throughout the state's 351 cities and towns.

The bill would allow assessors to choose one or a combination of the three major forms of assessing property value: comparison of sales price, capitalization of income and replacement cost less depreciation.

This, according to the selectmen, would weaken the responsibility assigned to the State Tax Commission by allowing the Appellate Tax Board to get involved in the administrative area.

Legislators hear roles of area Council for Children

The Newton-Wellesley-Weston Council for Children, a citizen advocacy group of the State Office for Children, has held the first of a series of informal meetings with local legislators.

The functioning of the council, concerns about the Human Service Budget, welfare cuts and program curtailment and Title XX guidelines were discussed with Sen. Jack Backman of Brookline.

Rep. David Mofenson of Newton, co-chairmen of the joint legislative Human Service and Elder Affairs Committee, Rep. Edward Dickson, of Weston and Ben Bush, assistant to Sen. David Locke of Wellesley.

Joanne Williams, chairwoman of the Council Legislative Committee le the meeting and the presentation of council functions by some of its members.

Renata Selig, member of the Proposal Review Committee described how the Council sets its priorities regarding community needs and the review process followed before funding decisions are made.

Dianne Becker' member of the Monitoring and Evaluation Committee, discussed the monitoring of programs funded by the Office for Children, the Department of Public Welfare, and the Department o,, Mental Health in the Newton-Wellesley-Weston area.

The committee is concerned with working with area agencies to improve the quality of children's services and monitoring for contract compliance.

Meg Cline, the Director of the Educational Development Center Day Care Center in Nonantum discussed the importance of the funding provided by the council in establishing their day care program.

Rick Williams, cochairman of the council, discussed what happens to programs when the state agencies are unable to provide funds.

One such example is the withdrawal of Department of Youth Services Funds for Delinquency Prevention Programs such as the one run by the Newton Community Service Center. This in turn diminished the resources of community in dealing with increasing anti-social behavior among adolescents.

Rhona Shoul offered specific examples of people's needs which if not met by community resources will escalate the incidence of broken homes, disturbed children and increasing personal tragedy.

Beverly Smith raised the concern of the council regarding the Title XX guidelines now being written by state offices. This newest Federal Social Service Legislation will replace Title IV-A on Oct. 1, 1976.

It allows for greater flexibility in eligibility requirements and program components but thus far the state has chosen not to take advantage of these but to continue the more conservative approach which existed under the old guidelines. The council is looking forward to continued contact with out area legislators and working with them to provide for the needs of children in our communities.

Alcohol purchase signs praised by Registry

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Robert Panora has commended the Newton Youth Commission and the Police Department for posting warning signs concerning the purchasing of alcoholic beverages by minors in package stores throughout the city.

Panora called the warning signs "an excellent way to attack a serious problem of young people at the source. This will certainly contribute to highway accident prevention in Newton and elsewhere in the Commonwealth," he added.

Mayor Theodore D. Mann added congratulations on the success of the program and noted that only by co-operation between the Youth Commission, Police Department, and the merchants are programs like this possible.

Emerson's ECHO classes emphasize language skills

The Emerson School's Title One faculty celebrated the 200th birthday of our nation with a six week program used to expose Emerson School youngsters to as many educational areas as possible, particularly the communitative skills.

The faculty's goal was to have each child enhance his early childhood education as much as possible. The Early Childhood Opportunity (ECHO) program totatled 76 children this year.

Each child was given individual help and encouragement to seek his or her own needs and interests. All this was done within an educational framework that allowed children a climate of ordered and guided freedom.

Each classroom was physically structured to blend the school's offering into the children's various interests and needs.

Although teaching styles varied, each staff member was broadly based in the communicative arts. There were a great many planned activities such as speaking, listening, and writing. For the younger children a great deal of time was devoted to alphbet and phonetic activities.

An endless number of reading readiness materials were employed as well. Discussions and experience charts were used in connection with trips, cooking, games and playground activities.

The ECHO children met from 9 a.m. to 12 noon daily.

The teachers involved in the Emerson Program were motivated by a total commitment to children.

Three of the Title I Summer School teachers are regular faculty members of the Emerson School. The other three had taught at the Emerson during previous summer programs.

Therefore the staff came to this year's summer program with a knowledge of the community and its' needs. Both pre-kindergarten teachers were assigned the children they will have in class this fall.

This has provided a wonderful opportunity for the teachers and their pupils to know each other before they meet in a formal classroom situation in September.

The faculty members and their respective schools are: Thomas A. Etre, Jr., principal of Franklin; Judy Lynch, Hyde; Sue Carlin, Hyde; Karen Challen, Franklin; Sheila Temkin, Janet Cotter, and Barbara duMoulin, Emerson; Barbara Yesley, psychologist, Emerson; Kathy Marsh, speech therapist, Lincoln-Eliot and Emerson; Marilyn Antonellis, secretary, Franklin; Diana Barron, work-study supervisor, Newton South High; Carol Schuft, Mary Ellen Bowers, Joanne Smith, Ellen Dippo, Brenda Trask, and Cathy Morris, worky-study students; CETA workers Ann D'Angelo and Bill Fraser; custodians, Dan Burns and Ed Sullivan.

Field Trips

Some ECHO programs and activities included trips to Norfolk Agricultural School, Stoneham Zoo, Waverley Oaks, Larz Anderson Park in Brookline, the Boston Common and the Swan Boats, and a tour of Boston Harbor on the Windjammer "Spray."

The children were visited by Channel 38's Willie Whistle, Franklin Schools' music director Tom Wormwood, Smokey the Bear, the M.D.C. traveling zoo, and a telephone company installer. Through the use of films, Yogi Bear and Walt Disney Friends also payed a visit.

Communications

There was a great deal of parent participation during this summer program, from cooking in the classroom to being of tremendous help on field trips.

Parents responded to the schools' psychologists suggestion to come in and discuss children and community problems.

Parents shared ideas and discussed children's problems particular to their youngsters and sought input from their peers.

It was immediately realized that each of us share the same basic problems in behavior and motivation with our children. These meetings were held on a regular basis and will continue in September during the school year.

Parents who walked their children to and from school usually chatted with teachers about their children and the community. Formal parent conferences took place for each child.

A weekly newspaper, ECHO IV, was sent home to each parent, describing weekly activities of all aspects of the summer program. Contributors were the principal, faculty and specialists.

Family Day

On Aug. 6, the ECHO Program held its' Family Day Picnic and Open House. Children were observed in a classroom environment and saw a slide tape program put together by the principal Page 4, ECHO ? and teachers.

Parents, friends, children and faculty participated in a picnic from 10:45 until dismissal time. Total number involved in this gala day were approximately 250 people

Food Service

A special summer food program for children in the ECHO program was provided by the U.S. Dept. of Food and Nutrition Service. The purpose of the program was designed to provide nutrition for children. This was done by serving a well balanced meal during summer months.

The meals were distributed daily to each child and usually consisted of a sandwich, usually meat or cheese, fresh milk, jice and fresh fruit.

Meals were also distributed to children on the playground or in other Emerson School programs.

In addition to the Title I program Emerson School also housed instrumental music for 52 students. Boston State Reading Tutorial Lab for 62 students and the Community School sponsored mini-crafts workshops for 70 children.

All were the offerings of the Newton Public Schools and Title I.

Reading, Tutorial

Sixty-two children received tutoring in reading on a 2 to 1 or 1 to 1 teacher-pupil ratio as part of a Boston State Practicum at the Emerson School for five weeks.

These children worked with 40 teachers from the greater Boston area, who are enrolled in advance degree programs at Boston State College. The youngsters ranged form grades 1-6 from Emerson, Franklin, Hyde, Meadowbrook, Countryside, Newton Catholic' Spaulding and Mount Alvernia Academy.

Music

An active four week instrumental music program involved more than 50 children ages 5 to 11. They met for flute, clarinet, recorder, violin, brass and orchestra lessons daily.

A new twist was added to this summer's music program, parents also participated in music instruction involving both the recorder and violin instruction. The program ended with a thoroughly enjoyable concert.

Mini-Workshop

The Title I Parent Advisory Council and the Emerson Community School Program co-sponsored it's second year of mini -workshops. Enthusiasm and attendance was very high.

The mini-workshops for "Summer 75" included Photography, Gym Hockey, Rhythm — Music Creative Movement, Fun Making Things with Re-Cyclable Materials, and Origami and Paper sculpture. These courses were taught by members of the Recreation Department, junior and senior high school aged children and parents.

Library

There was a new addition to the Emerson Title I staff in the form of an exceptionally talented and qualifiifed librarian.

Her main goal was to help the children develop a positive attitude toward books and the library, to improve reading readiness and reading skills, to learn how to use the library and stimulate interest in books.

The librarians' means of accomplishing these objectives was by: reading and telling stories to younger children, talking about books, instruction in library skills and use of the library, helping find suitable books for specific reading levels and interest, and to coordinate her activities with that of the classroom teachers.

"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1775 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex, village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.

To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day, if you will especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1975.

Great screen lover was a father, too

If you were to ask someone nder the age of 25 who Errol Flynn was, chances are you would receive a blank stare. But inquire about Ronald Colman and the response would most likely be, "Oh yes, he's that Conway fellow in Lost Horizon, isn't he?"

Colman was indeed the handsome dark-eyed English actor who, after making 54 films, will long be remembered for this one role as the man who found Shangri-la. According to his daughter, Juliet Benita Colman, author of "Ronald Colman: A Very Private Person," the film expressed many of her father's ideals.

Juliet, in a recent interview, happily recounted that the New York Museum of Modern Art showed Lost Horizon, to standing room only and when credits were flashed on the screen the entire audience applauded wildly.

As she speaks of her famous father, you search her pretty face for traces of a Colman resemblance. Failing to find any, you casually mention it and she laughingly agrees that she inherited only her father's large head, broad forehead and bony knees, but none of her mother's characteristics. Whereupon her artist husband, Jim Toland, hastily interjects that though she is blonde and fair-skinned, she does bear a resemblance to the beautiful Benita.

The book about her father is written with great care and sensitivity and could never have been written by anyone other than Juliet. She explains: "Had someone wanted to write about my father, it would have meant going to friends of his who had known him intimately, and I doubt there would have been any response because now, just as during Dad's lifetime, these people would not want to betray his trust and friendship.

"I did not know very much about Dad's early life. I spent over four years researching, getting to know him better through conversations with the people he had known. I had little or no concept of him as a shipping clerk or as a soldier. I learned that the limp he always tried to hide was a reminder of a Halloween night in 1914 when he almost lost a leg in World War I. I also learned about the tragic mistake he made with his first marriage and why he had a horror of public places where he might be recognized, or worse, accosted by his first wife.

"I wasn't aware of Ronnie being anything other than my father. We were very close because in those days he wasn't filming. He was never away from the house unless he was doing "Halls of Ivy" on the radio, and then it was like having a father with a 9-5 job. I didn't associate him with being an actor . . . a Robert Redford sort of thing. He was just my Dad and his name happened to be Ronald Colman.

"Dad and I were very close. He would always tell me bedtime stories and we would write notes to each other when we were sick . . . he was an absolute doting parent. It always amused Mother because no woman had control over my Dad and yet from the very beginning I had total control. I could wheedle him into doing anything from piggyback rides to playing ball—there was always this enormous quantity of love.

"When I was about eight or so, he ran Prisoner of Zenda at our home and I was really too young to take it in. When I was nine, I recall being allowed to invite four chums of mine to our home for the filming of Random Harvest. My parents had invited Greer Garson and I recall her coming in slightly after the film had started. Because I hadn't seen her in a very long time, it was quite a shock. There she was with this frightful head of carrot colored hair. My friends and I just couldn't believe that color, it was so ghastly, and all we could do was whisper and giggle. It was due to this distraction that we didn't pay much attention to the film, and now, whenever I see Random Harvest I'm overcome with tears of remorse because I missed the opportunity of telling Dad how very much I loved his performance."

It seemed fated that Juliet would not see Colman as an actor until after his death. "He tried to show me A Tale Of Two Cities and the projector broke down before he came on the scene. He was unable to repair it, and so I didn't see the film until after I began researching this book.

The marriage was a second one for both Ronald Colman and his actress wife Benita Hume (who subsequently married George Sanders after Colman's death).

Though only thirteen when her father died, Juliet recalls her childhood as one of constant joy and caring. "My parents weren't young and Dad had already enjoyed great success and fame. I was very fortunate. I had the finest schooling, my own horse . . . it was marvelous. I suppose if they were younger and more flashy on the Hollywood scene, they could have easily flashed me around with them — it happened to other Hollywood kids, but my parents partied only with very close friends.

"Mother and Dad were perfectly balanced," said Juliet, "they complimented each other. She effervesced around his steady gleam and seeing them together was quite wonderful. I've come to the conclusion, while writing the book, that having children late (Mom was in her late thirties and Dad was fifty-three) they were emotionally stable, their marriage was stable and they were also financially stable. Yes, time was limited — those are the cons as opposed to the pros.

"I attribute my entire stability to them. Growing up could not have been better. It's the time you've had together that stays with you the rest of your life."

Juliet Benita Colman

Food and Fashion

by Ruth Lenson

Across the kitchen counter

Hungry for homemade yeast rolls, coffee cake or bread but somehow you don't have the time or inclination to bake bread from scratch?

Cheer up, because Dakota Bake-N-Serv, manufacturers of Rhodes frozen bread doughs has done all the work for you! You can pluck your frozen dough from your freezer counter in the supermarket, leave it in the refrigerator overnight to thaw, form it into attractive shapes, let it rise and bake it. Oh the lovely aroma of baking bread that will fill the house—every child ought to experience it and it's sad that so many of today's generation never have.

Above: half and half tea bread, sesame-topped tea bread and braided tea breads, all made from Rhodes frozen bread doughs. Ronald Colman with co-star Vilma Banky — one of silent era's most popular romantic teams — in scene from "Two Lovers," their last film together. Colman made a successful transition to talkies, Banky did not. It can all be found in a new book entitled, "Ronald Colman: A Very Private Person," by his daughter, Juliet Benita Colman.

If you like to entertain, but preparing for an elaborate party leaves you exhausted before the party starts, consider the once-popular afternoon tea instead. With the new frozen bread doughs, you can create fancy breads without mixing and kneading, and if you yearn for apple kuchen such as those grandma used to make, we suggest doing it the easy way with Rhodes frozen bread doughs.

Home baked bread can make any sandwich better. The Frank Wrapups here will delight the entire family—these can be made ahead and reheated, wrapped in foil, over a charcoal grill.

SESAME-TOPPED BREAD

Following package directions, let loaf of Rhodes frozen enriched white of honey wheat bread dough rise until double in size. Before baking, brush top of loaf with one egg yolk lightly beaten with four tablespoons water. Sprinkle sesame seeds on top. Bake according to package directions.

BRAIDED TEA BREADS

To make a fancy braid, let a loaf of Rhodes frozen enriched wite or honey wheat dough thaw, well-wrapped, in the refrigerator overnight. In the morning, let dough warm to room temperature. Split it lengthwise into 3 equal strips. Shape each strip into a cylinder, tapering the ends. Beginning in the middle and working toward ends, braid the strips together. Pinch the ends together to seal. Let the braid rise until double in size. Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Brush the top of the braid with egg wash (1 egg beaten lightly with 4 tbs. water). Generously sprinkle sesame or poppy seeds on top. Bake at 375 degrees for 25 to 30 minutes, or until the bread is golden brown and sounds hollow when tapped on the top and bottom. Cool on wire rack.

HALF AND HALF TEA BREAD

(2 loaves)

Place one loaf each of Rhodes frozen enriched white bread dough and honey wheat dough, well-wrapped, in the refrigerator to thaw overnight. In the morning, let them warm to room temperature. Split each loaf into 4 equal pieces lengthwise. Lightly grease two 8-½" x 4-½" x 2-½" bread pans. In each pan, place a piece of honey wheat dough, and a piece of white dough, and a piece of honey wheat dough side by side. Place another piece of white dough on top. Repeat for the second loaf with the remaining pieces of dough. Let loaves rise until they are doubled in size. Preheat the oven to 375 degrees. Bake the loaves for 25-30 minutes, or until they are golden brown and have pulled away from the sides of the pans. Remove them from the pans and cool on wire racks.

EASY APP[illegible]KUCHEN

(Yield: about 12 servings)

1 one-pound loaf Rhodes frozen white bread dough
1 egg, separated
6 or 7 apples (preferably cooking apples)
1-¼ cups sugar
1 teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup sour cream
1 cup corn syrup
2 tablespoons butter

The night before, remove the bread dough from the freezer and let it thaw, well-wrapped, in the refrigerator overnight. In the morning, slice the bread dough crosswise into 12 equal slices. Place the slices side by side in a lightly greased 12x8-inch baking pan. Brush them with lightly beaten egg white and let rise until doubled in size. Peel the apples and slice them thin. Cover the entire surface of the bread dough with overlapping rows of sliced apple. Mix the sugar and cinnamon well; sprinkle the mixture over the apples. Mix the remaining egg white and yolk with sour cream and pour evenly over apples, smoothing with the back of a spoon. Pour corn syrup over all and top generously with butter. Bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes.

FRANK WRAPUPS

1 loaf Rhodes frozen white bread dough
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, softened
10 frankfurters
2 tablespoons mustard
½ cup chopped onions
1 tablespoon milk

Let well-wrapped dough thaw and reach room temperature. Divide into 10 equal pieces. Roll each piece into a 6x4-inch rectangle; spread the pieces with butter to within ½-inch of edges. Slice each frankfurter lengthwise. Spread with mustard and sprinkle with chopped onions. Place filled frankfurters in the center of each piece of dough. Wrap dough around the frank and seal securely. Place on greased baking sheet; cover, and let rise until dough has doubled in size. Brush with milk. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 to 20 minutes. Serve hot. If desired, sprinkle with grated cheddar cheese after baking and broil until cheese melts.

Question: I have been looking for a recipe for a chicken mousse which can be made in a ring form and then turned out onto a bed of lettuce. I'm not one for complicated recipes, so please, if you can, publish an easy one. Thank you very much.

O.C.D., Waban

Answer: Most attractive in appearance, very short on preparation and long on flavor, here is your recipe:

CHICKEN MOUSSE

2 envelopes unflavored gelatin
1-¼ cups chicken stock or consomme
3 egg yolks
2 cups finely chopped cooked chicken
one-third cup chopped celery
2 tablespoons finely diced green pepper
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Salt and white pepper to taste
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
1 recipe French Dressing (below)

Stir the gelatin into ¼ cup of the stock and let it soften for 15 minutes. Beat the egg yolks and remaining stock in the top of a double boiler over simmering water, until thickened. Add the gelatin and stir until it is dissolved. Take from heat and cool. Add the chicken, celery, green pepper and parsley and season to taste. Fold in the stiffly whipped cream and pour the mixture into an 8-cup mold or ring mold, rinsed in cold water. Chill for at least 2 hours. Unmold on a lettuce lined platter and serve with French dressing (below). If a ring mold is used, fill center with cold cooked green peas, lightly bound with dressing and sprinkled with chopped mint.

FRENCH DRESSING

one-third cup tarragon vinegar
1-¼ to 1-½ teaspoons salt
¼ teaspoon freshly ground black pepper, or to taste
1 teaspoon dry or brown mustard, optional one-third cup olive oil
one-third cup salad oil

Stir vinegar with salt and pepper and mustard until the salt dissolves. Stir in the oil and store in a closed jar in the refirgerator. Shake very well before using.

We wish to thank Mrs. E.L., Norwood, who has written to say that on her recent trip to Arizona, an elderly "farm lady" gave her a recipe for a most delicious applesauce cake that took first prize in a county fair. Our thanks to you both for sharing this recipe.

COUNTRY APPLESAUCE CAKE

4 cups all purpose flour, sifted
4 teaspoons baking soda
1-¼ teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons cinnamon
½ teaspoon nutmeg
½ teaspoon cloves
2 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup vegetable oil
2 cups sugar
3 cups unsweetened applesauce, heated
½ cup raisins
½ cup chopped walnuts
Carmel frosting (see below)

Sift together flour, soda, salt, cinnamon, nutmeg, cloves and cocoa. In a large mixing bowl combine vegetable oil and sugar. Beat until well blended. Stir in hot applesauce, blending thoroughly. Add dry ingredients, blending well. Stir in raisins and walnuts. Turn batter into 2 well greased and floured 9x9x2-inch cake pans. Bake in hot oven 400 degrees for 15 minutes REDUCE OVEN temperature to 375 degrees and bake for about 15 minutes longer. Remove to racks. Let stand in pans for 5 minutes. Remove from pans and cool on wire rack. Fill and frost with Carmel Frosting:

CARMEL FROSTING

½ cup butter or margarine
1 cup dark brown sugar, firmly packed
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup milk
2 cups sifted confectioners sugar

Melt butter in a medium saucepan over low heat. Stir in brown sugar and salt. Bring to a boil over medium heat; boil hard for 2 minutes, stirring constantly. Remove from heat. Stir in milk. Return saucepan to heat; bring to a full boil. Remove from heat, cool to lukewarm. Stir in confectioners sugar, beating until smooth.

Question: When I misplace a recipe or lose it I become extremely angry with myself and especially if it's a recipe I've hung onto for a long time. My family just loves scalloped potatoes and I had a simple but just delicious recipe that called for cream of mushroom soup, milk and seasoning and I have tried making up the measurement of the ingredients but while the dish is good, it's not correct. Please hunt through your files—maybe you have this recipe.

Mrs. D.R., Dedham

Answer: And A-hunting we went and came up with the following which we think is exactly the one you've requested!

SCALLOPED POTATOES SUPREME

8 cups thickly sliced pared potatoes
¼ cup chopped green pepper
¼ cup finely chopped onion
1 can (10-½ oz.) condensed cream of mushroom soup
1 cup milk
2 teaspoons salt
Dash pepper

In greased 11x7x1-½ inch baking dish or 2 quart casserole, alternate layers of potatoes, green pepper, and onion. Combine remaining ingredients and dash pepper; pour over. Cover; bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes. Uncover and bake 20-30 minutes longer or till potatoes are tender. Serves 8

Days

Enjoying a swim at the Tanglewood Beach are children from Boston, Brookline and Newton. Their outing was part of a program called, "Days in the Arts," sponsored by the Boston Symphony Crchestra and funded by the Massachusetts Dept. of Education. Elise Coverdale, Karin McCullogh, Pamela Bowers and Bonnie Fraser of Newton were among the participants.

Sixth graders visit Tanglewood to spend five 'Days in the Arts'

It is a hot, humid Monday morning in Boston and 40 nervous and excited school children are gathered around a large Peter Pan bus that will take them to the Berkshires to participate in a very unique experience in arts and interpersonal relationships.

The 6th graders are from Boston, Brookline and Newton are part of a program called "Days in the Arts" sponsored by the Boston Symphony Orchestra and funded by The Massachusetts Department of Education.

The children arrive at Tanglewood each week to spend five busy days meeting professionals from the Boston Symphyon and students fromthe Berkshire Music Center. They also go on field trips throughout the area visiting Chesterwood, the Rockwell Museum, the Shaker Village and the Pleasant Valley Wildlife Sanctuary Workshops at Jacob's Pillow, a performance and seminar at the Berkshire Theatre Festival as well as talent shows theater games and sports are included in the program.

"Days in the Arts" is designed to bring youngsters from diverse backgrounds to an environment which provides for a personal involvement and total group participation in the aesthetics. The program provides an in-depth arts experience outside the classroom and an understanding of the behind-the-scenes activities of the artists.

On Friday morning the students were given a demonstration nn how to play the violin by Harry Ellis Dickson, a first violinist in the Boston Symphony, assistant conductor of the Boston Pops Orchestra and Music Director of the Youth Concerts at Symphony gives an instrument demonstration for the children.

"How long does it take to play the violin?" one boy asked.

"A musician never stops learning, it take a lifetime." Dickson answered.

After several students tested their talent on the violin the group walked over to the rehearsal at the shed to hear the Boston Symphony and Tanglewood Festival Chorus rehearse a weekend concert.

Next in store was a tour of the Tanglewood grounds given by Harvey Young, one of the counselors in the program. Another counselor, Anthony Leonard, who is a percussion student at New England Conservatory, gave the students an informative talk about various percussion instruments that were in one of the rehearsal sheds on the grounds.

There are six counselors in the program, each with a background in the arts, who work with a Head Counselor Betty Lane , herself a professional soprano.

The "Days in the Arts" program invokes different reactions from everyone involved. For some students this is the first time they have been away from home. Many have never been around kids of a different race and living together is an experience in itself.

Florence Dunn, a music teacher at a Brookline elementar school and one of the chaperones on the last trip said. "There's no doubt about the benefit of the program for some it's a new experience in every way. It's difficult to get the kids to express their fellings, you look at them an wonder what's going through their minds."

"I look at my job in terms of what I can do for each kid," said Kim Storey, one of the program's counselors who will enter Harvard Gradute School of Education next fall. "I try to teach them in terms of having each experience help to open their eyes."

This summer approximtely 320 students will have the opportunity to escape the routine of a city summer and share in the experience of "Days in the Arts" in the Berkshires.

"We are giving city and suburban kids a chance to learn not only about the arts but also about each other and to accept and appreciate the similarities and differences of their backgrouns," said Anita Kurland of the Boston Symphony staff, the program's director.

"When we first came here, no one talked to each other on the bus. Now no one wants to say goodbye. I'll really miss everyone" remarked one of the students.

On Firday afternoon the bus returned to take the group back to Boston. It was evident that this experience had reached everyone in one way or another. Even thegroup's chief troublemaker was teary-eyed and the lst to board the bus. As addresses and pictures were being exchanged one of the boys remarked to another.

"We act as though we're never going to see each othr again," and was immediatley advised that his new pal would be over to visit next Saturav

"You know you've reached them all in some way. For some it just takes a little time." Mrs. Kurland observed.

If only she could have heard one of the student's conversation: "I think I'm going to see if my teacher will let me take up the drums next fall."

Straight Talk About The Weight Industry
By THAD. McGEORGE

Losing weight, or controlling weight, is a very personal thing for women, it is most difficult for anyone to be objective

And it is obvious why some so-called health spas promise miracle weight losses, and are able to charge high fees. They play on the individual's secret desire to be slim again or fear of losing their figure.

It is almost impossible to put a price tag on this very personal need. And, yet, the desire not to be overweight is certainly a right one, not only for appearance, but for health.

This is why Gloria Stevens Figure Salons, the largest chain of figure salons for women in New England, has many thousands of women of all ages, attending their salons each week of the year.

The Gloria Stevens method, the M.E.D. method, motivation, exercise and diet, has no hocus pocus about it. Gloria Stevens does not beguile a potential member with talk about how relaxing a steam bath or a sauna can be.

Women come to Gloria Stevens to lose or control their weight. And to show the tangibility of the M.E.D. method, how each woman is treated as a person, with specific individual needs and goals, Gloria Stevens offers an introductory two weeks for $10.00.

Gloria Stevens honestly feels that this specific offer, two weeks for $10.00, is scrupulously fiar to each potential member. It takes the uncertainty away of what Gloria Stevens can personally do for you. ADVT.

SGT. WILLIAM MUNROE

Member of Lexington's minuteman company, Orderly Sergeant to Capt. Parker, tavern owner, Sgt. William Munroe formed with the Lexington men on April 19, 1775. He fought the British when the first shots were fired, and later during the day as the red-coats retreated. His tavern, still standing, was used by both British and Americans for treating wounded. Heroic Sgt. Munroe is typical of the thousands of minutemen who assembled to protect life, liberty and property. These minutemen were forerunners of today's Massachusetts National Guard.

Bicentennial Stitchery

Country Day students stitch the Revolution

In October, 1974, seventh and eighth grade students at Newton Country Day School of the Sacred Heart travelled to Boston for the first field trip connected with their Bicentennial Stitchery Collage.

The purpose of the trip, and of future trips, was to become familiar with the historical events that would be incorporated into the designs for the panels of the Collage.

Tours included visits to landmark buildings and places connected with the Revolution. The students saw the State House designed by Fullfinch and also the Old State House which housed many old paintings, pieces of china from the 1700's, as well as a suit worn by John Hancock and his family coat of arms.

They also went to the site of the Boston Tea Party, visited the Boston Museum of Fine ARts to see a collection of paintings of colonial days, and the period rooms furnished in colonial era, all of which gave us many ideas for the designs.

After the trips, the students discussed what they had seen. All of this tied in with the eighth grade American History courses and will be invaluable to the seventh grade students later on. After this thorough background in history, they felt they were ready to begin designing and sewing.

First, the girls learned to perfect the stitches needed for the collage. They built small frames, covered them with burlap and drew on a design. The stitches used were the satin stitch, for a smooth filled-in effect; the chain-stitch, for thick outlining and detial work; French knots for texture and bulk; the cross stitch, for design and lettering; and the basting and running stitches, for outlining.

After this, they spent much time drawing and talking before we finally agreed on the scenes we wanted to portray: a British flag, to symbolize English rule; the hated Stamp Tax, which we had learned was one of the causes for the Tea Party; a typical colonial family, to utilize our information about costumes; the Boston Massacre; the Boston Tea Party; the Old North Church, and Paul Revere's ride.

While the students were designing, the maintenance supervisor built the 4x6 foot frames on which they would stretch the burlap. Once the designs were completed and the burlap attached to the frames, they transferred the designs onto the burlap with white chalk and were ready to begin stitching, or attaching felt, which was found to be very compatible with the stitches.

The actual stitching on the panels was begun in February, 1975 and finished in May. Everyone enjoyed working together on the project; they became expert stitchers while lerning a lot about Boston's role in the Revolution.

Exercise: key to a longer life?

Exercise may be the key to better health and longer life. Or it may not No one knows for sure.

"Although no one since the time of Plato has doubted that exercise is good for you," says Dr. L. Howard Hartley, cardiologist and head of the cardiac exercise laboratory, which is part of the cardiovascular unit at Beth Israel, "not a single person has scientific evidence to prove it. There are, of course, strong indications that link exercise with good health, but they are mostly circumstantial."

Despite the lack of hard data proving the efficacy of physical activity for longevity or general health, Dr.Hartley, who is also associate professor at Harvard Medical School, is a firm advocate of endurance training. "Those activities that involve the large muscle groups, such as jogging, biking and swimming, are best for proper conditioning. On the whole, calisthenics are probably not as good as the sole type of exercise because they don't have the same impact on the body although they are useful for warm up and limbering up," he expalined.

"Even though the physical effects of exercise have not acutally been proven to be beneficial," Dr. Hartley continued, "all people who, for instance, job regularly, say they feel better. If you asked someone who jogs on a scheduled basis to give it up, you would more than likely meet with spirited resistance. The psychological benefits are undeniable."

There are also measurable physiological changes that occur with physical training, such as an improved working capacity, a lowering of the heart rate and systolic blood pressure, a lessening of nervous tension, and a reduction of blood lipids, cholesterol and triglycerides.

What Hartley would like to learn is whether or not such alterations in a person's physiology, which appear to be salutary, are being counterbalanced by some presently unknown adverse effects.

"It's time to stop conjecturing and postulating and do the studies," Hartley declared. "We need to find out exactly what the merits of exercise as a preventive and therapeutic medical tool are.

"However," he added, "there are certain drawbacks. If the effects on longevity are to be examined, the cost of such a study would be astronomical and it would involve thrusands of subjects. In addition, no one wants to be in the control group. It looks as though we'll have to compromise for now, settle for less than an all-inclusive study, and determine the advantages of exercise on the basis of the information that is available."

Even without a study to prove it, people in America are convinced that physical fitness is good for them as is evidenced by the increasing numbers who job and ride bikes.

Hartley recommends that inactive people who wish to begin a physical training program first have a medical examination to confirm their basic health. For men over 30 and women over 40, he also advised a stress test, which would assist in detecting unsuspected abnormalities and determine the appropriate amount of exercise.

"Ideally," he said, "a person should join a regular fitness program or set aside specific times for work-outs."

A snesible program, according to Hartley, would include first, a warm-up period to stretch the muscles, then perhaps alternate jogging and walking for 20 to 30 minutes, finally cooling off by walking for about 15 minutes. After such a schedule of activity, he recommends a warm, not hot, shower.

"The big error most people make when they start exercising," he points out, "is that they try to do too much the first few times. They expect more than their bodies, unsued to do too much the first few times. They expect more than their bodies, unsued to strenuous activity, can deliver. Then they get discouraged. They would be more successful in sticking to a schedule if they started out at a low work level and gradually increased the intensity as their abilities improved."

Realizing that a research effort of the proportions necessary to prove the benefits of exercise on prolonging the lives of normal people is impractical for a single organization. Hartley, feeling that research must start somewhere, has begun a study of the useful results of exercise training on patients who have suffered heart attacks.

"Here at BI, we are looking at questions that can be answered in a reasonable amount of time. We are interested in the practical results of exercise conditioning on the heart attack victim–does he feel better sooner? Does he return to work earlier than other patients who are not training? Does cardiac rehabilitation reduce the cost of his illness?"

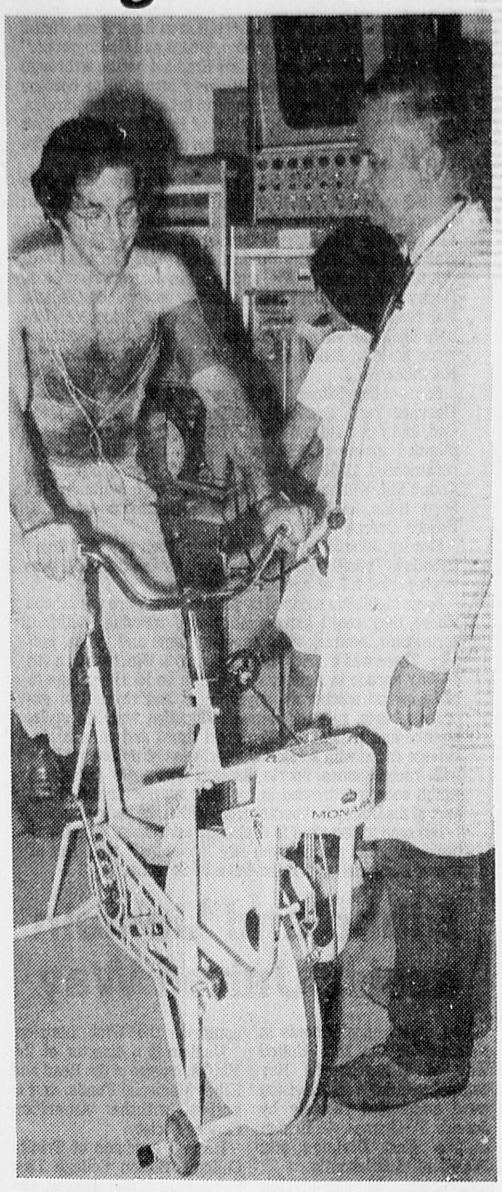

In the cardiac exercise laboratory, Hartley, assisted by Patty Brownstein, R.N., coronary care specialist, and Thomas Dryer, research assistant, is studying the physiological and psychological effects of the rehabilitation on the lives of these patients.

Using a stationary bicycle with precision instrumentation to measure exactly how much work a rider is doing and electrocardiograph equipment to monitor the heart rate, Hartley begins training patients with a very light work load. As they regain confidence in their bodies, and as the physical changes indicating a capacity for greater exertion occur, the amount of exercise a patient is permitted is gradually increased.

Then he can begin to work out in the less formal setting of a nearby gymnasium, though still under Dr. Hartley's care.

Said Hartley: "We are trying to give some structure tn the recovery period following a heart attack. Usually a physician will give the patient relatively vague instruction, based mainly on trial and error, as to how much he can do. The patient is then not sure exactly what his limitations are. It stands to reason that if a post-myocardial infarction victim exercises under careful supervision, he will move more quickly and vigorously toward well-being than one who doesn't."

Whether a person has already suffered from heart disease or whether he wishes to avoid it, it is obvious that many people today believe that an important road to better health is through exercise and as a result are becoming more active.

You could be 5% richer by NOW.

Liberal new banking laws now exist that are designed to put more money in the consumer's pocket. Everyone should understand these laws and the new benefits which are theirs for the asking.

Until recently only certain types of banks could handle checking accounts. For decades it was standard practice not to pay any interest on your balance.

The NOW Account has changed all that Technically, this is a savings account on which you can write drafts. In effect, it becomes the equivalent of a checking account, except for one very big difference. The law states that you can be paid up to 5% interest on your balance. We, in fact, pay the full 5% compounded continuously.

One disadvantage of the NOW Account is the 10¢ or 15¢ per check or draft which some banks charge. But Freedom Federal has eliminated this completely, if you keep a $100 minimum balance.

For your added convenience, drafts are consecutively numbered and when cancelled are returned with your monthly statement.

Finally. One-stop banking makes sense.

At Freedom Federal you get more than a free NOW checking account that pays you interest. You also get higher interest on savings than that paid by any Trust Company, Commercial, or National bank in the state.

What this means is that for the first time the consumer can do his checking and his savings at the same bank . . . and get the best possible deal on both. For the first time in banking history one-stop banking makes complete sense. At Freedom Federal.

Scout news

Recently, Senior Girl Scouts selected from all over the United States, Canada, England and Ireland joined together in and around the Boston area for a Bicentennial Girl Scout opportunity, "Boston, Beans and Battlegreens."

Its purpose was to study New England heritage through its early history and revolutionary struggle, to become familiar with the leading figures in art and literary circles, to learn crafts and skills typical of New England, to visit modern Breton, enjoy the beauties of this area and make new friends.

For one and a half days after their arrival, the girls visited and were shown around by their host families. In Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Janis Kalnajs hosted two Seniors, Cindy Seeds and Mary Fletcher of Duena Park, Calif. Rebecca Levin and the David Levins played host to Carol Whitehead, Paducak, Ky., and Carolyn Jones, Tulsa, Okla. Becky Aston and the Norman Astons entertained Chrissie Fairfield of Atlanta, Ga., and Catherine Briner of Connersville, Ind. Olivia Contrada and the Julio Contradas were hosts to Senior Girl Scouts Beth Ann Dempsey of Northfield, N.J.

Some of the visitors asked to see local highlights, Boston, Harvard Yard, Brandeis, Sudbury's Wayside Inn, Cape Cod, and yes, a ride on the MBTA. Before the busy filing of planned events of "Boston, Beans and Battlegreens" commenced, 12 Seniors enjoyed meeting one another at a Cedar Hill, Waltham, cookout, planned by a Waltham Girl Scout troop, led by Mrs. Robert Sutherland and Mrs. J. Rosson Overcash.

Sunday, June 29, hosts accompanied their new Girl Scout friends to Tufts University, Medford, for the start of a two-week period full of activities, workshops.

Some highlights enjoyed by participants were workshops where they could learn: macrame, weaving, quilting, scrimshaw, pewter, wood carving, jams and jellies, pottery. There was a mock town meeting in Winchester, a 4th of July parade in Arlington, a forum on local heritage to religion and witchcraft, government and revolution, expressive arts, role of women, education and life style, science and technology. The good times and cultural exchange ended with a colorful conclusion at a Country Fair with races, games, sports displays and a gay parade in which each girl dressed in costume representative of the part of the U.S. orthe country from which she had come.

Too soon it was time to exchange addresses, sometimes mementos and patches and say "good-bye" with lots of warm memories to tell the folks back home.

Advance course in first aid offered

The Newton Chapter of the American National Red Cross will offer an Advanced First Aid and Emergency Care course this fall. The course will begin on Sept. 10, 1975, and will probably end sometime in December.

It will be held at the Newton Red Cross Chapter House, 21 Foster Street in Newtonville, each Wednesday evening from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. A charge of $3 will be made for course textbooks.

Although no previous first aid training is required as a prerequisite for this course, it is designed to give persons such as policemen, firemen, ski patrol members, emergency squad members and others with the functional first aid capabilities to provide the immediate emergency care necessary to sustain life until qualified medical help can be obtained.

Therefore, this course includes such sophisticated first aid procedures for emergency childbirth. Cardio-pulmonary resuscitation techniques are also included.

Persons who are interested in this course should call the Newton Red Cross at 527-6000 for registration and further information.

Ms. Romano named to area health council

Kathy Romano of Newton Centre has been named to a regional health review committee which last year evaluated nearly $186 million of new health care projects.

Ms Romano has been appointed to the Review Board and Comment Committee of the Health Planning Council for Greater Boston, this area's Federally-designated health planning agency based in Newton.

The Review Committee coordinates the agency's review of "certificate of need" applications filed by health facilities in a 64-town area. Health institutions must file for a certificate before undertaking major changes in services, establishing new programs, or making major capital expenditures.

The Health Planning Council, through its 14 locally-based committees, reviews applications in terms of service area, bed need, financial feasibility, and potential impact within the community.

Recommendations of the local committee and the council are forwarded to the state's Public Health Council, which makes a final determination on each application. Last year, the Public Health Council concurred with over 95 per cent of Health Planning Council recommendations.

Ms. Romano is a member of the Health Planning Council's Board of Directors and its Area 523 Health Planning Committee. The Area Committee represents consumers and health providers from Newton, Weston, and Wellesley.

MINUTEMAN'S MUSKET

The standard weapon of 1775 was a 5 foot, 14 pound, muzzle-loading smooth-bore flintlock. While minutemen used whatever they had, many carried the British "Brown Bess", taken or brought from redcoats, or left over from the French and Indian War. Highly inaccurate, this musket might hit a target at 80 yards — seldom at 100 yards. For national defense, today's minutemen — the Massachusetts National Guard — are equipped with rifles accurate at 500 yards, fast-firing and light.

Gymnastics Program

The Newton Recreation Department finished its third Summer Gymnastics Clinic on Aug. 7. The five instructors, Cindy Otil, Frank Giovannani, Margie Magraw, Steve DiBenedetti, Mary Pendergast were responsible for the success of this year's summer schedule.

Temperatures in the North High School gym were close to the high 90's on certain days, however the instructors managed to maintain their cool along with everyone else.

Younger children from 9 to 14 years of age were given instruction in the basics of floor exercise, balance beam, parallel bars, and mini tramp.

The next workout was somewhat of a gymnastics workshop, which older and more advanced gymnasts took advantage of.

Other clinics will be coming in the future winter months at Newton North High School. For further information contact Austin Moore in October at Newton North High in the evenings.

Dance Exercise Class

Amy Morris will be holding a dance exercise class at the Newton Centre Hut. This class derives from various contemporary modern dance and movement techniques. Its emphasis is on grace and coordination, posture and body alignment, muscle stretch and strength.

The class begins Friday, Sept. 5, for beginners and elementary students: 10-week session, once a week $5 and twice a week $10. Registration is Friday, Sept. 5, 9:30 a.m. at the Newton Centre Hut.

In the first game of the playoffs, Lorrie's began a strong hitting attack and some excellent fielding, defeating the Why Nots 16 to 8. Not to be denied, the Why Nots bounced back to a 17-15 win to take the series into the third game to be played on August 20th at Albemarle Field.

Plans have been made for the sixth annual banquet to be held at Post No. 440 on Sept. 18.

Service starts Sept. 6 to Wellington Station

Chairman Robert R. Kiley, of the Massachusetts Bay Transportation Authority, announced that the Wellington Station would open for passenger service with the first train Saturday, Sept. 6, 1975, at 5:24 a.m. The fare is 25 cents from the newest station on the Haymarket-North Extension of the Orange Line.

The formal dedication will be at 4 p.m., Monday, Sept. 8.

The board authorized Kiley to sign a contract for $10.4 million in federal aid for a $13 million program to upgrade the Lincoln Power Plant in Boston's North End and the South Boston Power Plant.

The three-stage rehabilitation program will be completed at the end of two years, with the first stage being finished in about 12 months.

The MBTA will hold a public hearing on Friday, Sept. 12, on its proposed Operating Assistance Project, including an application for $6,241,114 in federal aid. The hearing will be at 10 a.m. in the Conference Room of the Central Transportation Planning Staff, 27 School St., Boston.

Under the National Urban Mass Transportation Assistance Act of 1974, which became effective November 26, 1974, the authority is eligible for operating assistance of $6,241,114.

This sum is the fiscal 1975 allocation to the Boston Urbanized Area under a formula based on population density.

To be eligible for the $6 million, the MBTA must match this with $6.2 million, which will come from state aid and revenues separate from passenger fares.

Retired fur merchant develops painting skills

Gideon Cohen of Arlington is exhibiting a large selection of paintings and drawings at the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, now through early September.

Entirely self-taught, Cohen, who is now 81 years old, discovered his artistic talents only after his retirement from the fur business at the age of 70. Since then he has been painting with enthusiasm and skill, often on as many as five paintings at once.

Cohen uses a palate that is soft and mute in tone. He works primarily with casein, preferring the effects he can achieve with this medium, though he also uses oils and does pencil drawings.

The paintings on view include a series entitled Floral Symphonies, showing masses of brightly colored garden flowers that reflect his love of music and gardening.

A member of the Cambridge Art Association and the Lexington and Arlington Art Associations, Cohen has exhibited widely in the New England area including shows at the Circle Theatre Gallery in Brookline, the Newton Free Library and the Edith Fox Library in Arlington.

Cohen's works have also appeared at Harvard University, at Symphony Hall, and at many local banks.

Summer hours are 9-9 Monday through Friday, with the library closed Saturday and Sunday through Aug. 31.

Some Vt. farmers still waiting to collect

MONTPELIER, Vt. (UPI) — While farmers along the Champlain Valley are battling a summer-long drought of unprecedented proportions, the state auditor's office is still working on damage claims resulting from the disastrous floods of 1973.

Auditor of Accounts Alexander Acebo said Tuesday his office has completed work on about 200 of the 220 claims submitted or expected from local governments for federal assistance.

In all, claims totaling about $13 million in federal aid have been submitted, Acebo said.

The largest came from Cavendish which asked for $893,000. The Cabot Water Department filed the smallest claim, $170.30.

According to Acebo, $4 million, representing 150 of those claims, already has been paid to towns by the federal government. He said his office has processed another $3 million worth that are awaiting final approval in the federal Disaster Assistance Administration's regional office in Boston.

He said four of the largest claims, totaling $1 million, have not yet been submitted from towns hardest hit the floods.

Jerry Lewis in a bind

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Jerry Lewis is in a bind over a controversey involving a beef at an old folks home near Seattle earlier this year.

Stories were printed that he stormed out of an auditorium incensed because the crowd was too small. He was accused of throwing a tantrum and crushing the feelings of the senior citizens whom he had promised to entertain.

The incident hurt Lewis' reputation. It made him look callous, self-indulgent and generally obnoxious.

Lewis may be self-indulgent. But callous he isn't. And because the affair may seriously affect his muscular dystrophy telethon Aug. 31, Lewis spoke out in his own defense.

"The serious thing about this is that I've lost the Seattle television station for my telethon. That will cost my dystrophic kids at least $200,000," he said.

"I'd shut up for once, but in 26 years I've raised $100 million to fight muscular dystrophy. We've established nine neuromuscular research centers among other things with those funds.

"I can't afford to lose a dollar or a quarter in contributions for thousands of dystrophic children because of this beef. As it is those kids picked a leader with a hell of a big mouth.

"I want to set the record straight. I volunteered to go to Seattle in the first place. I met a doctor at a New York benefit last June. He works with the elderly in the northwest.

"When he said, 'I'm trying to help the people who have been thrown away,' it really touched my heart. He needed money to continue his work.

"So I canceled an important Chicago engagement to fly to Seattle at my own expense to look at this doctor's facility. My whole purpose was to see how I could help raise funds for the place in the future.

"My idea was simple. If the old people had been thrown away, then I thought we could build a facility for old persons to care for dystrophic children. Each child would have a human being of his own.

"And having each old person care for a child would give them a feeling of being needed, a sense of importance.

"Okay, that was my only intent in going. There wasn't supposed to be any publicity about it.

"But pow! I walked into an overzealous public relations man who had hung signs all over the place advertising an in-person Jerry Lewis charity show. They sold for a good price. And get this, the show was scheduled for a joint called Pearl's Place.

"On top of that when the guy told me I had to entertain 50 or 60 old people in the hospital auditorium I blew my top. A picture was taken of me yelling at him.

"I agreed to greet a few of them and speak briefly, but there was no way I was going to do a show. I didn't have the right clothes, no orchestra. Nothing. What was I going to do, tell jokes about Cher to those lovely old people?

"Most of them were so old they didn't even know who I was. Many, many were senile.

"The story that I walked out on the old folks ripped my credibility apart in a microsecond. They couldn't have cared less whether I did a show or not.

"Show people are ripped off like this all the time. Once in Chicago a guy came backstage and said 5,000 people had bought tickets for a personal appearance he had advertised.

"He'd never talked to me before in his life. He said, 'You're doing a show. I dare you not to show up.'

"How do you alienate 5,000 people? Especially if it's for charity. That particular one I think benefited a home for the tall. When I told the audience what happened they laughed. They thought it was part of my act."

Lewis sighed heavily.

"Anyway," he concluded, "I want people to know what happened up in Washington. I can take bad publicty. But when it involves innocent children and the dystrophy campaign I have to fight back."

Bit Parts: Vic Morrow has been added to the cast of "The Bad News Bears" ... Martha Keller has landed the top feminine role opposite Laurence Olivier and Dustin Hoffman in "Marathon Man" ... Wayne Newton will guest star on the "The Cher Show" Oct. 12.

Tips On Storing Meat And Poultry

As soon as you get the meat home, take off the store wrapping and rewrap it loosely in wax paper so that air can get to it. Sometimes it's more convenient to put it in an open dish and cover it loosely with waxed paper. Put in refrigerator.

If you're freezing the meat, however, it should be wrapped airtight.

If possible, take the meat out of the refrigerator before cooking and let it stand until it is at room temperature. About an hour for small cuts, two or even more for large cuts.

Calls for office to fight drug abuse

Claiming that drug abuse — especially that involving heroin and cocaine — is a chief cause of our soarking crime rates, Congressman Joe Moakley (D-Mass.) today backed creation of a long term coordinating office for drug abuse activities to enable the Federal Government to continue its important fight against drug abuse.

"Good policework is only one weapon in our arsonal against drug abuse. Effective treatment, counseling, and rehabilitation is also essential'" noted Moakley. "That's why we need this new legislation." On June 30, 1975, the Special Action Office for Drug Abuse Prevention in the Executive Office of the President was terminated. The new measure creates an Office of Drug Abuse Policy and revises its function to cover areas of coordination and policy development.

"Right now, there are alread in existence 16 drug abuse treatment and prevention agencies in the Federal Government," Moakley said. "We need this coordinating Office of Drug Abuse Policy to avoid chaos and to ensure that the various programs dealing with drug prevention and abuse treatment are effective," he added.

Moakley explained that the legislation will authorize over $25 million for the next three years to carry out the functions of the new office. "Not only will the Federal agencies be under the control of the Office of Drug Abuse Policy, but it will also coordinate State and local efforts to control and treat drug abuse," he said.

"The 1972 Act, which first set up this type of office, allowed for a special workplace of this kind to function for three years," the Congressman stated. "Unfortunately, drug problems are still with us," Moakley said.

He went on to express his opposition to Administration efforts that would let the Office terminate. He cited testimony before the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee by the Acting Director of the Alcohol Drug Abuse and Mental Health Administration which indicated that the drug abuse problem is on the increase in the United States today, especially in the area of heroin abuse.

Moakley, a member of the House Rules Committee, will take up consideration of this bill when the House goes into Session in September. "We cannot turn our heads and pretend drug abuse does not exist," he said. "We must recognize the problem does, in fact exist, and fight it head on'" he added.

Illinois State Will Need Basketball Coach

NORMAL, Ill. (UPI) — Will Robinson, the head basketball coach at Illinois State for the past five years, resigned Monday to become director of scouting services with the Detroit Pistons of the NBA.

Athletic Director Warren Schmakel said he expected to name a successor in the near future, probably by the end of the week.

Robinson, 64, was the first black head basketball coach at a major university when he came to Illinois State in 1970. Robinson's best year was the 1973-74 season when his team finished with a 17-9 record.

Palmer, Singleton Win Honors

NEW YORK (UPI) — Pitcher Jim Palmer and outfielder Ken Singleton, both of the Baltimore Orioles, were named Monday as the co-winners of the American League's "Player of the Week" award for the week of August 11-17.

Palmer, who leads the majors in victories with 19 and also has nine shutouts, threw two shutouts last week to lower his league-leading ERA to 2.24.

Singleton, a 28-year old switch-hitter, batted .577 for the week with 15 hits in 26 at bats.

He has taken part in civic, community and church affairs in Massachusetts, during the many years he and his family have lived in Newton Centre. He is an officer of the Temple Mishkin Tefila, president of the temple's PTS, and has served on the temple Board of Directors.

He and his wife, Betty, have two married daughters, Diane Modest and Roberta Loberfeld, and a granddaughter, Rachel Loberfield. He is associated with the Hanson Knitting Mills, and Mack Shirts.

During his term as president of NAMBAC, he will be working on legislation concerning the problems confronting the salesmen.

Dr. Drapkin to watch over hospital diseases

The appointment of Dr. Mark S. Drapkin as geographic full-time physician in infectious diseases at Newton-Wellesley Hospital has been announced by William S. Brines, administrative vice-president.

Dr. Drapkin of Brookline comes to Newton-Wellesley from Massachusetts General Hospital where he was senior resident and an infectious disease fellow.

A graduate of Downstate Medical Center of the State University of New York in Brooklyn, Dr. Drapkin was an intern and junior resident at the Center's Kings County Hospital. In addition, he has done tumor immunology research at the National Institute of Health.

He also will be helping to assure appropriate and safe administration of antibiotics, as well as contributing to the teaching of interns and residents at Newton-Wellesley.

On America's industrialized farms, some 80 gallons of fuel are used to produce a single acre of corn. But because of corn's high yield, it returns about four calories of food for each calorie of energy used to produce it.

Each Rotarian to look for 5 blood donors

The Newton Rotary Club will join with other Rotarians in Greater Boston fall in a large scale blood drive with the Red Cross.

Chairman Edward W. (Bud) Flannery, district governor of Boston District 791 of Rotary Club International, recently addressed the Newton Rotary Club at a conference at Valle's Steak House.

In addressing President John B. Gregorian and the other officers, directors, and members present, Flannery announced the beginning of the blood donor program within the Rotary, District 791.

It will be organized in cooperation with the Red Cross and all 51 local Rotary Clubs within the district with the goal of obtaining 14,000 pints of blood or five pints for every Rotarian in the district.

District Governor Flannery also announced that he will actively seek to raise district membership from 2,800 to 3,100 members, and, to that end, he urged Newton Rotarians to bring the word to the many businessmen and civic leaders in Newton who are currently not affiliated with this organization.

He emphasized that Rotary International President Ernest Imbassahy DeMello's aim for 1975-76 is "to dignify each human being," and that this goal as with Rotary sims in general is worthy of every community member's support.

As part of our effort to "dignify each human being," Flannery said, Rotary Clubs in this district will be joining in a service project with District 220 in Africa to assist the Rotary Club of Livingston, Zambia, in the improvement of medical services in that area.

According to Dr. Joseph H. Gallow, animal expert at Georgetown University, owners of dogs and cats are buying more of the cheaper "dry" foods and less of the higher priced "wet" foods.

Success is the NAA Lions and Nick Pasquarosa

By LINDA FRITZ

""Yes, I played football in high school," confesses Nick Pasquarosa, ""And I was awful."

This may seem like quite an admission coming from the head coach of the Newton AA Lions. What is even more amazing is that Pasquarosa attributes his coaching success to his inability to achieve stardom on the high school gridiron. According to Pasquarosa, his lackluster playing now allows him to understand some of the problems his young players face.

As Pasquarosa explains, his other secret ingredient is ""I'm a football freak!"

His enthusiasm for the sport led his to help Fred Dalicandro coach the Newton Patriots in the late 1960's. In those days the Patriots were the only Pop Warner A team in Newton. But according to Pasquarosa, only boys from the North side seem to participate. The Lions club was started, therefore, to serve the South side. Pasquarosa became its head coach.

As a coach, Pasquarosa's record is outstanding. The Lions, made up of boys under 13, have won the Garden City Cup four times in five years. For the last two years, they also made it to the Youth Conference Eastern Mass finals. To top off their record last year, they roared into first place becoming Eastern Mass champs.

But the Lions '74 season did not begin with a roar. At their first game — a non-league exhibition encounter with Norwood — they let out only a whimper, and a sorrowful one at that. ""The team was awful," admits Pasquarosa. ""The boys' timing, physical conditioning, and agility were all off."

With a lot of coaching and changes in positions' the Lions began to look better. Nevertheless, they lost again, this time to Framingham, another non-league team.

The boys went home and practiced and practiced and practiced. They were determined to put an end to the losing streak.

Determination paid off when Brookline, a traditionally strong team, came to Newton. The Lions easily chalked up a 38-0 win.

Savoring the taste of success, they roared through their Sudbury encounter 26-0. Simultaneously, they proved that the Lions even away from home were capable of becoming a champion team. But could they beat Waltham?

Yes! Despite Waltham's strong back, the Lions racked up an impressive 24-0 victory.

Everyone thought the next game would be a cinch. Brighton had a poor football reputation. According to Pasquarosa, however, the Lions were not at their best, even though they won 38-0.

The Newtonites, however, would have to improve if they were to beat Wayland. Wayland had one of the best backs in the league. To achieve their 20-6 victory, the Lions devised a special defense to combat Wayland's star player.

Heady with the taste of success, the Lions were all looking forward to going to the playoffs. But Pasquarosa was not sure. He felt the season was long enough without post season playoffs. Without committing himself, he took the boys to Dracut. ""It was a cold and blustery day," he explains, ""And the boys played excellent ball. They convinced me that they had it in them to be a champion team.

But the Lions still had the Newton Patriots to play. A win here would mean the West Suburban championship along with the Garden City Cup. The Lions took the game easily with 38 rushes for 291 yards and a score of 34-0.

THE PLAYOFFS

The win put the Lions in the playoffs. For their first game the Newton boys were pit against Watertown. Although the Lions offensive performance was tarnished by penalties, the defense was at its best. The Lions claimed a 22-0 victory.

The victory pushed the Newton team in the final play off game with the East Lynn Raiders. The Raiders had already won two play off games beating both Everett and Billerica. The final game was held at B.C. Coach Pasquarosa claims, ""It was the epitome of two excellent football teams." Newton scored points and East Lynn 12 in the first half. The Lions defense kept the Raiders score in place thereby making the Lions the champions.

Player Rich Filler proved his worth in the East Lynn game with a rushing record of 176 yards. Other players deserving note include Jim Schmidlein, John Kane, Tim Hoban, Charlie Slack and Paul Butters.

In recollecting last year's season Pasquarosa points to Schmidlein as ""a steady offensive right tackle." As for John Kane, he played center with total dedication to the position. Quarterbacking for the Lions were Hoban and Slack. Tim began pre-season practice asking to play end. As a favor to Pasquarosa, he tried quarterbacking and proved that his cool efficiency could pay off. Simultaneously, Hoban freed Slack for playing halfback. Slack along with Butters proved to be successful halfbacks as well as valuable linebackers.

Perhaps, however, one of Pasquarosa's greatest coaching successes was Tony Amicangioli. At 107 pounds, Amicangioli was the lightest tackle to ever play A team ball in the Suburban League.

Nevertheless, every football team is more than seven players. The other team members were Paul De Luca, Carl Pasquarosa, Charlie Rogers, Greg Cooper, Jason Michaels, Kevin Hayden, John Williams, Mark Waters, Gary Chin, Rich Shone, Don Martin, Doug Jackson, Wayne Bornstein, Noel Foley, Bill McGary, John McLellan, Frank Oglesby, David Smith, Mark Sullivan, Scott Seidman, John Forti, and Brian Fleming.

From this crowd, the '75 returnees include Shone, Cooper, Pasquarosa, Sullivan, Foley, Waters and Oglesby.

While these boys should make the nucleus of a good team, as of August 13, the Lions were short nine players. Coach Pasquarosa, however, is hoping to fill the roster before their first game on Labor Day weekend, when the Lions meet the Pop Warners from Linthicum, Maryland.

South soccer: Old & New Faces

By RICHARD S. GROSSMAN
Sports Correspondent

Some students anxiously await the beginning of school (well, maybe one or two students), while others would rather forget about the whole affair. There is, however, a third group that is getting a head start on the year. That is the Newton South High School soccer team, a combination of old and new faces.

One of the new faces at South is the new varsity coach, Clifford Crowther. Mr. Crowther, currently an English teacher at Weeks Junior High, is a graduate of Amherst College and a former instructor at the New England Lawn Tennis Association. He was also the coordinator for Arts 6-Title III, a federally funded Newton program, and has also been the head soccer coach at Weeks for the past several years.

During the offseason Coach Crowther is involved with the BAYS (Boston Area Youth Soccer) program. He has been the prime organizer of the four Newton BAYS teams. He is on the staff of the Eastern Massachusetts School of Soccer, a program for boys aged 10-18, at Brandeis.

"I am optimistic about the coming season for two reasons. First, we have several returning, proven players, and we also expect new people, those who haven't played soccer before. Good athletes, even inexperienced ones, can always help a soccer team."

The new captain of the South squad is certainly not a new face at South. Peter Jennings has been on the soccer team there for two years, and before that was the captain of the Weeks' soccer team. As a junior Jennings was named to the All Dual County All Star team and is also captain of the baseball team.

Help your child become a tennis player

By BUCKY ADAMS

PART II, LEARNING THE GAME — AGES 7 & 8

In part 1, I talked about the ways in which a child could develop coordination and skills at a very early age. This will make it easier for him when he actually begins to play tennis later on.

Around the age of seven, you can begin hitting balls to your child from the other side of the net. It is a good idea to have your child start on the service line on one side of the net, and you may hit balls to him from the service line on the other side.

For the first few session, I suggest hitting to his forehand. The backhand is a more difficult shot than the forehand. Despite what you may have heard about it being a "more natural" stroke than the forehand, I have rarely seen a seven year old who has a better backhand than forehand. It is a good idea to have the child start with the easier stroke and attempt the more difficult stroke after he has confidence.

At this point, each session should last about a half hour and you may have two ro three of these hitting sessions a week, if the child seems eager.

As I stressed last week, these hitting sessions should always be a fun thing. A child can't relax or enjoy himself if his mother and father get upset every time he misses. Once the child stops feeling at ease, he usually starts playing poorly.

After a couple of weeks, both you and your child may move a little further away from the net and try to rlly the ball back and forth. Try and see if you and he can hit it back and forth ten times, without missing. If you do it, go for fifteen. Each time you break the old record, go for a new one. This will help your child concentrate on control and consistency, rather than power and shotmaking. (Those things come later on)

Once your child is able to rally the ball, you may let him try serving the ball. Later on you can have him stand close to the net and try hitting the volley. This also is a good time to teach him how to keep score.

By the age of eight, your child should be ready to take tennis lessons from a qualified professional. Starting him in a clinic with a few other children his own age, is a good idea. The clinic gives him a chance to learn drills, play competitive games, and at the same time, be under supervision so that his form is improving. Occassionally, a child will have more trouble with a certain stroke than the others. That's when a private lesson might help.

Another reason clinics are good is because your child gets to meet others his own age and his own ability. After a while, he will be able to play with them on his own.

Your child now has a good start in tennis. He will have a good chance of becoming a top tennis player. But more importantly, he has been turned on to a game which is a lot of fun, good exercise, and which will last him a lifetime.

In Part III, I'll discuss where your child goes from here.

The International League: Its second division teams

By DAVID BERGER

In this article, I will give you a look at the final six teams of the International League; their good ballplayers, their overall assets, and a peek at their liabilities.

In seventh place with a respectable .500 record is the Upper Falls Lions. The Lions are one team who much credit must be given too. Picked in the beginning of the year to be one of the final three teams, they have had a very interesting and competitive season always willing to give 150 percent. Leading the way for the Lions are their first three hitters, Dave D'Angelo, John Raymonds and Gordie Moore.

D'Angelo, younger brother of Newton South's Mark, is a centerfielder who's fielding talents have not quite caught up with his hitting ability. He is a small player who agonizes many pitchers by walking quite often. And, although not very fast, he is a good hustler who knows how to run the bases.

Raymonds is both an excellent number two hitter and a fine pitcher. He is a fast runner who often will take the extra base. As a pitcher he is not overpowering but he usually does enough to win. The number three hitter is Gordie Moore, a hitter-magician who uses a bat like a wand. He is equally adept at hunting or hitting away. On a good team he would be one of the stars in the league. As it is he is the best player for the Lions although not known outside of his teammates.

In eighth place, almost in a repeat of last year's season is Our Lady's. This team seems to always finish around eighth, never improving or falling.

Paving the way for Our Lady's this year is Jerry Moriarity and John McAuliffe. Moriarity, the batter who broke up Peter Cappadonna's bid for consecutive no-hitters, is a line-drive hitter while McAuliffe is a power hitter.

In ninth place, a keen disappointment this year is Carson Post.

Thsi team has talent and is led by one of the league's best hitter-oitchers Steve Rand. Rand is a very powerful hitter who has more than a couple of homers; when right a pitcher who could be one of the best. A couple other multi-talented players on Carson Post are Steve Riviere and Tom Forsythe.

Tenth Place Red Sox

In tenth place this year is a team that is one of this league's perennial losers, the Elks' Red Sox.

This team does have a couple of good players such as Harry Sankange and John Tocci. But although both of these players are above average hitters they do not compensate for the Elks mediocre fielding and pitching. This is a team that just simply does not have the players to compare with some of the first teams in the league.

In eleventh place this year is Sacred Heart. This is an expansion team which seems to have a good future, but had tough luck. Credit must be given to the team because, although often way behind early, they always gave all they could and always tried their best. Sacred Heart, even though it does not have a lot of first-rate ballplayers does have a couple, such as Dan MacEwen and Joe Fucci. MacEwen is the leading pitcher on the club and one of its better hitters. As a pitcher he has a live fastball and good control. It was his pitching ability that gave Sacred Heart their biggest win of the year, a 10-3 clobbering over Upper Fall. Fucci is the team's best hitter who has also been able to draw many free tickets to first base.

But most of the credit to making Sacred Heart a competitive team this year should belong to their manager. He has made his boys hustle every game and has given all his players a chance.

In the dungeon for the second straight season are the Ok Hill Cubs. This has been one truly consistent and outstanding team through the whole year. Always able to snatch defeat out of the hands of victory, nothing has been too much for this team. A keen rival to the original Mets, the Cubbies have only won two games in two years. But whereas a team such as Sacred Heart who have won only two games, is competitive every game. Oak Hill often has to forfeit the final few games of the year.

Leading the way for them this year is Mark Rubin, David Katz and Stan Pazos. Rubin is probably their best player, a good pticher and a solid hitter. Both Katz and Pazos are good hitters with decent power.

Lobsters eliminated

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pittsburgh Triangles defeated the Boston Lobsters, 23-14 Tuesday night to win the best-of-three World Team Tennis Eastern Division playoff championship and will travel to the West Coast to meet the Western division winner Thursday.

The victory was a sweep of the home-and-home series as the Triangles defeated he Lobs in women's doubles, women's singles and men's doubles, then clinched the match in the men's singles between Pittsburgh's Vitas Gerulaitis and Boston's Bob Hewitt when the score was 4-4. Play was ended at that point.

The Triangles' Evonne Goolagong Cawley defeated Greer Stevens in the women's singles 6-2 and teamed with Peggy Michel to defeat Miss Stevens and Wendy Turnbull in the women's doubles 6-3.

Pittsburgh's men's doubles team of Gerulaitis and Mark Cox defeated Hewitt and Ion Tiriac 7-5.

Newton and Waltham: sports comparison

By BUDDY BERGER

A couple of weeks back in the annual Harry Agganis High School All-Star football game, Waltham had three starting players and one reserve picked to the squad, while Newton had just one reserve picked. Another couple of weeks back, an all-star team from the Newton twi-National division took on an all-star team from the Waltham Connie Mack League, their answer to ours, and they beat us in two out of three contests, the Newton win coming on a fluke run.

And Waltham's league had four or five Newton players participate in it, while no Wlatham players were playing in Newton's.

Why all these juicy facts you ask? Why to put up the Waltham sports programs so much and put down Newton's? Very simple. It's to show how two neighboring cities can be so close geographically, yet so far in athletics, ranging from the Little League level, all the way up the high school level. The proof lies in the following facts.

Newton and Waltham both support Little Leagues. But while Newton's Liggle Leagues run through June, Waltham's are just ending now with assorted all-star games, some going a regulation nine innings. And there are the play-offs that have not even started yet. Why does Waltham run their Little Leagues so much further into the season while Newton does not? Another fact is that recently Waltham sent one of their Little League teams to New York for a tournament. Newton has not done this in ages, and I'm sure kids of that age would love to have the chance of supporting their town in competition in an out-of-town tournament.

If we move on to the older kids, we have the Newton twi-International League, for the 13-15 year olders, and then we have two leagues for the Waltham kids. There is a Babe Ruth League and there is a Mickey Mantle League. It is true that Newton's league is still going on, as they are now in the play-off. And they do play a good 21 game schedule. But both of Waltham's leagues have had their play-offs runing through August, and they also have the extra bonus of going away to tournaments. And plenty of them. Not only did Wlatham send a Mickey Mantle League team to a tourney in New York, but has also sponsored a Babe Ruth League Invitational Tourney, and a 13 year old Babe Ruth Invitational Tourney. A TOURNEY JUST FOR THEIR 13 YEAR OLDERS.

Now we get to the 16 to 18 year bracket, and we find our Newton twi-National division and their Connie Mack League. Newton's league ran through July, with the play-offs running to the first of August. They played 15 regular season games, while the Waltham league, which by the way ran to just last week, played 18 regular season games. This league was supported by 10 teams, to just six for the Newton league. So whay, you might ask.

So more kids were able to play, while less were able to participate in Newton. And there is just no reason for this, as it would not be hard to put a few more kids out in uniform in Newton. A couple of more interesting items are the fact that while there were 15 games played by the Newton league, a lot of them were only played to four or five innings, because of darkness. This never happened in Waltham as they have an extremely well constructed, and most complete complex around for youth baseball. It has a fence, lots of bleachers, dugouts, concession stand, and most important, lights. When they start a game, it goes for the full seven innings, or into extra innings if needed.

And if all these items alone are not important, then just think how the kids feel when they go out on a field that is built for the pros. It certainly is conducive to good hard competition, and a lot of fun. An, of course, this league had their own little group of represen-tives, that went to New York a couple of weeks back, and played in the Northeast regionals of the Connie Mack League. Included in this group were three Newton players, whose names I won't mention, but who all played a big role in the Waltham team's fine showing. Why is it that Newton kids go to play in this league? Because they know that it is an excellent league, and even though it might not be much better than Newton's, it still has the qualitites mentioned above that Newton's does not.

What about other sports? Well, Newton does have three fine basketball leagues, and they have good softball leagues also. But so does Waltham, and as a matter of fact, Waltham just sent a somen's softball team to the Nationals in Salt Lake City the other week. And last but not least, Waltham has a senior A hockey team that plays in both the winter and the summer in competitive leagues.

I haven't brought out all these criticisms against Newton sports just for the sake of criticizing. I've done it because I'm both a sports fan and participent in Newton sports, and I think with a little work, we also could be on the same level of sports competition as Waltham, and I for one would like very much to see it happen. There is no logical reason why Little Leagues in Newton shouldn't run longer so kids that have nothing to do in the summer coulc improve their ball playing. There is no logical reason why we could not either add another Babe Ruth League to Newton, or add on another few teams in the National Division. Why couldn't we make on park like that of the facility in Waltham?

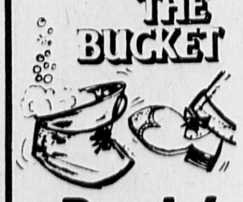

And lastly, why couldn't we either sponsor a tourney in Newton, So we could have teams from other local towns come in and play us, or even go out on a limb, and send some of our youth teams to tourneys, out of state. Why not sit down with Waltham recreation leaders, and ask how they went about doing it? I'm sure they would be glad to help us, and in the long run, give the majority of kids the taste of playing ball the professional way, for the short time that they do play.

Lasers for printing getting off ground

NEW YORK (UPI) — The use of the high speed laser beam in printing and other communcations, bedeviled by one setback after another, at last seems to be getting off the ground.

Three M Co., St. Paul, says it has sold about a score of laser beam recorders for computer output microfilm data systems in 16 states and four foreign countries.

They are used for such purposes as financial reports, recording of automobile and other product warranties on microfilm, putting insurance policies and records on microfilm or microfiche, and large scale credit analysis reports. Ultimately, they will be used in various kinds of publishing and printing.

International Harvester Co.'s truck division at Fort Wayne, Ind. recently gave public demonstration of its 3-M laser beam recording system. IHC previously had used an electron beam recording system for computer output microfilm that was much slower. But even that system was so fast the company sold time on it to 20 other companies, mainly for making microfiche records and documents.

But the use of the laser beam in mass communications such as periodical and catalog printing and book printing has been restrained by technical and commercial problems. Its most effective use right now is for making microfiche cards or microfilm at high speed cheaply. Microfiche and microfilm have many advantages over printing on paper. They are compact, relatively cheap to produce, very cheap to distribute and versatile. They don't require color separations and color plates to reproduce colors.

The stumbling block is that both microfiche and microfilm have to be read on reading machines. While the number of such machines in use is increasing steadily, they would have to become as common as TV receivers or portable radios before microfiche publishing of magazines, newspapers and books could become widespread.

Some microfiche enthusiasts think that will happen before the end of this century.

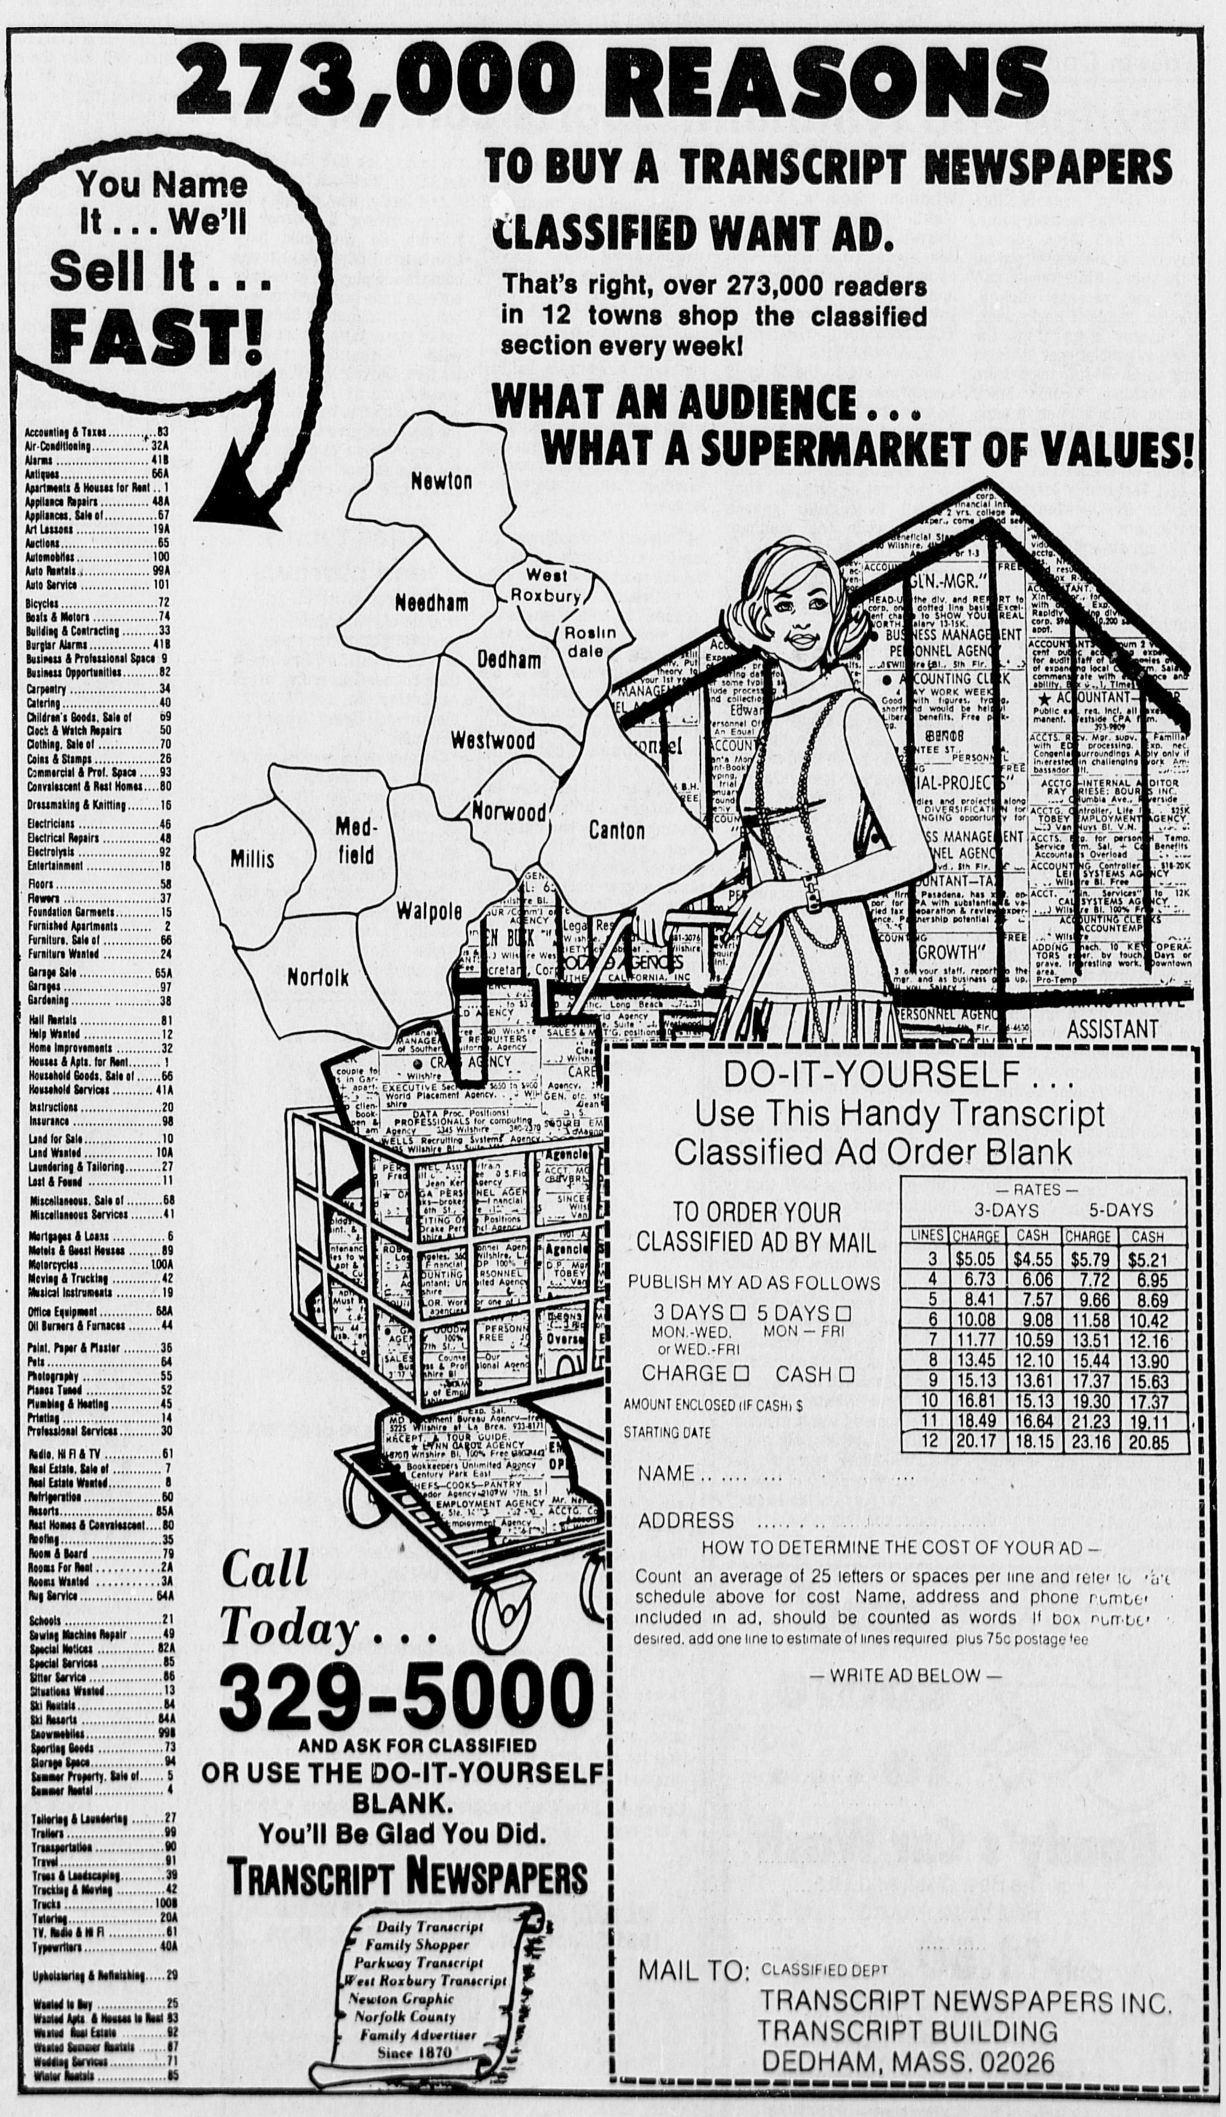

Three years ago, several companies, including Photon, Inc., of Wilmington, Mass., major maker of photocomposing machines, believed they were on the verge of using the laser beam to set cold type and make printing plates. Photon even planned to go into immediate production with such a machine but the effort ran into various difficulties.

Now, Photon has announced it expects to install several laser beam systems early next year. But it will not be the system contemplated in 1972 which used the laser beam to replace the Xenon lamp printing system. The new system uses the laser to print characters at stupendous speeds and at definition good enough for perfect reproduction in dots or strokes on either film or paper.

It is a "dry" system—no chemical developing is required —working with computer stored type fonts. It is much faster than the laser system tried three years ago and many times as fast as any other system of making printing plates, a Photon spokesman told UPI.

Also three years ago, Cartier's, the Fifth Avenue jewelry store, gave a demonstration using the laser beam for point-of-purchase advertising. A ghostly hand wearing a ring and holding up a necklace was floated in space on a laser beam in a full three dimensional display.

Building boom in tennis courts

There's Money in Tennis
By LeROY POPE
UPI Business Writer

NEW YORK (UPI) — The building boom in indoor and outdoor tennis courts has made tennis instructing a thriving profession.

Practically every town in America now has at least one tennis instructor. Many cities have a score or more. In most areas they work year around. And there's a lucrative resort field; no successful resort hotel can afford to be without a tennis pro. With fees that can run to $35 for a half-hour lesson, most make a good living.

It's not just the growing popularity of tennis as a family sport that is creating the boom, it's the opening of big money earnings to both young men and young women in professional tennis if they first succeed in reaching regional or national prominence as amateurs.

Naturally the tennis instruction boom has attracted the attention of the entrepreneurial promoter, with varying results. An ambitious plan to run a chain of tennis clinics at a number of resorts, using the prestige and personality of Billie Jean King, came a cropper and landed in bankruptcy.

But Rod Laver and Roy Emerson have been successful for several years with their tennis camp at Hilton Head, N.C. Margaret Court and John Gardner and Ken Rosewall operate highly successful tennis ranches in Arizona.

Don Budge has one in the Carolinas and John Newcombe and his wife also operate a successful school.

But the founder of one of the newest and most ambitious tennis schools, Nick Bollettieri, says just as star baseball players rarely make good big league managers, topflight stars don't necessarily make good tennis instructors. "The very competitive instinct that makes them such great stars may make them too impatient to be a fine teacher," he explains.

Although Bollettieri had some early success as a tournament player, he has spent his career as a teacher. He is tennis director at two Puerto Rican resorts and has several members of the Rockefeller family among his personal pupils.

Over the years he has worked out his own system of teaching, involving different tactics for each level from beginners to pros seeking to improve their game. With the aid of the late Vince Lombardi, the football coach, he founded a highly successful co-ed tennis camp on Wayland Academy's campus at Beaver Dam, Wis., in 1968. He followed with a second camp on the Amherst College campus near Boston.

Last year, he joined Arnold Pohs, a Wall Streeter, and Steven M. Contardi, head pro of the Queen City Raquet Club in Cincinnati, forming the Nick Bollettieri Corp. to operate a series of seasonal tennis clinics around the country and several year round clinics at large centers like the club in Cincinnati. He has more than three-dozen instructors.

Bollettieri thinks his venture is bound to grow particularly because of the explosive development of women's tennis and the general growth of tournament tennis.

He said tournament tennis is becoming so big few tournament players any longer have time to devote to instruction.

Investigation widens into natural gas

ENERGY WORLD
By WILLIAM E. CLAYTON

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For five years, the Federal Trade Commission has been trying to determine if natural gas companies got together to win higher rates by poor-mouthing the size of their gas reserves.

The FTC investigation has run into delays, but a congressional committee has taken up the matter and widened the investigation into the possibility that companies also deliberately held back production.

The reserves figure is crucial to natural gas rates because the Federal Power Commission has allowed higher interstate gas rates as reserves are shown to decline.

A federal court entered the picture with an order to the FPC to investigate supplies of gas available to Transcontinental Gas Pipe Line Co., because of the Houston-based firm's contention it ran suddenly short.

The outcome of the scrutiny will help determine how — and whether — the federal government continues to control prices of gas in interstate sales. The debate centers on whether higher prices will produce more gas and whether some companies have held back production in anticipation of more money down the road.

The FTC's Bureau of Competition, which did that agency's investigation, has built what it contends is enough of a case for an antitrust complaint to be brought against 11 gas-producing companies and a trade group, the American Gas Association. The AGA is not the producers' organization, but it has acted as their conduit of reserves estimates to the FPC for its rate-making decisions.

James T. Halverson, head of the competition bureau, said there is evidence to allege that the companies and AGA "agreed, by jointly maintaining and participating in a system each knew or should have known was inadequate and unreliable, to attempt to influence the wellhead price of natural gas." The flow of data to the FPC has no safeguard against "use of biased or manipulated data," Halverson contended.

The commission decided July 29 to continue the investigation and to put off the issuance of a complaint for the time being. One lawyer who has participated in the case called that decision "a cop-out."

The commission will try in court to get data from seven companies who have ignored subpoenas — Shell, Texaco, Mobil, Exxon, Standard of Indiana, Standard of California, and Tenneco. It has material from the AGA and Gulf, Continental, Pennzoil and Union of California.

Kenneth Anderson, who moved to the FTC from the Justice Department to work on the investigation, said, "This investigation has been going on for five years. It is time to do something about it."

A congressional subcommittee headed by Rep. John E. Moss, D-Calif., has been investigating whether reserves data are accurate and whether natural gas producers had ever consciously held back production in expectation of higher prices.

Moss said last month there is evidence that, by shutting down some production capacity needlessly during a high-demand time, some companies did hold down production.

The subcommittee has a somewhat simpler task than the FTC. The subcommittee can look for evidence of companies' holding back production. Then it can report, or write up legislation. The FTC must build a provable case of antitrust violations out of distortions of statistics, or it must let the matter drop.

No Sweat Savings.

Sometimes the hardest work of all is trying to save a few extra dollars. Those everyday necessities just seem to eat up your paycheck until there's nothing left to tuck away for the future.

But there is an easy way to build a nest egg. The Payroll Savings Plan. Just sign up where you work, and any amount you specify will be set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. It's so simple, you almost forget your money's there working for you.

And, pretty soon, you'll be surprised at how your savings have grown.

The Payroll Savings Plan. Takes some of the perspiration out of planning ahead.

Take stock in America.

Bonds mature in less than six years.

Automotive outlook

They'll Be Getting Smaller
By EDWARD S. LECHTZIN
UPI Auto Writer

DETROIT (UPI) — By 1982, as many as 5 per cent of the domestic cars sold in the United States — perhaps one-half million — will be manufactured by foreign firms in U.S. facilities.

Two years before that happens, gasoline will cost more than $1 a gallon and subcompact cars will be the top sellers in this country.

These are the predictions of market researchers representing major suppliers of parts and materials to the automobile industry. A survey of their startling outlook for near-future trends for American transportation was commissioned by the trade publication Autoproducts.

The survey was conducted by the Automotive Market Research Council, formed in 1966 by a small group of market researchers who felt they could improve their abilities and the comparability of market data by sharing methods and ideas. In 1970, the AMRC began polling members for group forecasts of automotive supply and demand.

Among some of their other predictions:

—Subcompacts and compacts will account for 60 per cent of U.S. total production in 1979, while subcompacts (the Pinto, Vega and smaller cars) will be the largest selling size of domestic cars in 1980.

—In 1979, a federal tax based on either vehicle weight or engine horsepower will be passed by Congress and private automobiles will be banned from the downtown area of at least one major city in 1980.

—Volkswagen will be assembling cars in the United States in 1979 and more than 5 per cent of domestic passenger cars sold in 1982 will be manufactured by foreign firms in U.S. facilities. The Swedish automaker Volvo plans to begin assembling cars at a Chesapeake, Va., plant in 1977

— Technological advances predicted include maintenancefree batteries supplied as standard equipment in at least 50 per cent of U.S. passenger cars by 1979, with 1980 bringing elimination of spare tires, factory-installed air conditioning in at least 75 per cent of U.S. compacts, and rear disc brakes on more than 85 per cent of U.S. passenger cars.

—U.S. production of an electric or battery-powered car will exceed 50,000 vehicles a year by 1980.

—An engine other than the reciprocating piston will be standard equipmnent on at least one passenger car model by 1980. Some predicted as early as 1978.

According to Autoproducts, the AMRC members also committed themselves to the more serious business of forecasting production and sales figures for passenger cars, trucks and buses.

They see 8.2 million passenger cars and 2.75 million trucks and buses as their median forecast of production in North America this year.

Forecasting 1976 sales, the AMRC median anticipates 10 million passenger cars (domestic and imported), down 800,000 from the same forecast they made last fall. Imports, however, remained the same in both forecasts at 1.6 million cars, about 16 per cent of the market, compared with a record 20 per cent share now.

Their 2.75 million 1976 sales forecast for domestic and imported trucks and buses was down 300,000 units from last fall's prediction.

Looking ahead to 1985, AMRC forecasters see 13.25 million total passenger car sales and 4 million truck and bus sales in the offing. But, they also said the availability of mass transportation will have a major impact on how many cars are sold in 1985.

Get a hit of 'Nitrous Oxide'

By RANDY MUDARRI

If you can't get the real thing from your dentist, get a hit of ""Nitrous Oxide" from the Ward Street Players.

Done in a cabaret-type atmosphere, ""Nitrous Oxide" is a comedy revue that relies on close contact with the audience as well as a fastpaced format. Each of the first two acts consists of about two dozen scenes which touch upon human situations in a humorous manner.

In one scene, a middle-aged married couple recall what-happened-when during their married life by what television shows were popular at the time.

Much of the first two acts is taken from ""Feiffer's People" by Jules Feiffer. As with most of Feiffer's work, there is some socio-political humor mixed in with the horse laffs, and it blends wonderfully.

Having a fun time is clearly what the players have in store for the audience, as well as themselves. It is obvious that Jill Saret, Jana Tyler, Gary Kaplan, and David Frutkoff are enjoying themselves on stage. They all have a chance to display their talents in various roles.

Though an occasional scene will be a bit juvenile or extraneous, this comedy revue has a broad base of appeal. The show's comedy material holds its own, but it is the players that get the most out of it with their enthusiasm and ad libs.

Wide-eyed Jill Saret, perhaps given the least to do out of the four players, was at her best when as a parrot who verbally answers the door when it is knocked upon.

Jana Tyler, a very attractive girl, exhibits a wide range of characterizations, speaks very clearly, and is quite funny as the reluctant performer.

Gary Kaplan did best when playing the young tough but occasionally overacted in other spots. Kaplan also has a very distracting tendency to look at the floor, but that can be easily remedied with a little concentration.

Which brings us to the delightful David Frutkoff, who is clearly the darling of the audience. Though resembling an adolescent Jerry Lewis, he has an excellent speaking voice that he varies successfully. Light comedy is this young man's forte, and Frutkoff is as funny a guy as you'll find anywhere.

A very integral part of the show is music, which flows quite pleasantly as background as well as packing the few musical numbers that the cast sings. Pianist Eric Boyer is fine as is Michael Gennert on bass. Mitch Gordon not only plays the drums but is also the butt of a scene or two.

Andrew L. Golov's direction is excellent as he keeps the show moving surprisingly well. Though his lighting could be toned down a bit, Jeff Davidson's set is quite functional and imaginative.

The third act is a scene from Neil Simon's ""Plaza Suite." The plot concerns a young bride that locks herself in the hotel bathroom minutes before her wedding and the exasperating efforts of her parents to persuade her to come out.

Kaplan does well enough as the father, but reaches his emotional peak too soon, leaving him nowhere to go. His mug shots, though amusing, are too plentiful. Leslie Golov terribly underplays her role as the mother. There is no inflexion in her characterization at all. Nonetheless, there is no way this scene cannot be funny, for it is vintage Neil Simon and the audience loves it.

There is an evening of fun and frolic to be had at r Temple Emanuel, 385 Ward St., Newton Centre. Tonight, Thursday, August 21, is the last night you can see ""Nitrous Oxide."

'Citizen Kane' to be shown tonight at library

The acclaimed Orson Welles film "Citizen Kane" is coming to the Newton Free Library, 414 Centre St., Newton Corner, on Thursday, Aug. 21, at 7:30 p.m., and to Newtonville Branch at 9:45 a.m.

"Citizen Kane," often voted the best film of all times and described by one major film critic as close to being the most sensational film ever made in Hollywood, will be screened free of charge.

With direction and screenplay by Welles and Herman J. Mankiewicz, and with the brilliant music of Bernard Hermann, Citizen Kane is one of the most surprising and cinematically exciting films every made.

Welles found the camera a perfect instrument for his dramatic energies, able to absorb his prolific ideas. The picture is of overpowering scope, especially in its rapid and graphic rotation of thoughts.

The film recounts the successful career of Charles Foster Kane, modeled after Hearst, whose dying word "Rosebud" sets a reporter off on a search into the meaning of the men's life.

The film records often conflicting, sometimes overlapping views of Kane's life; how as a poor boy he came into great wealth, how he became a newspaper publisher, how he aspired to political office and was defeated because of personal scandal, how he devoted himself to material acquisition and finally died in the palatial estate, Xanadu.

Sure and penetrating performances are given by Orson Welles, Joseph Cotton, Everett Sloane, Agnes Moorehead and Ruth Warrick.

Film fans are invited to view "Citizen Kane," the final film in the NFL summer series of free feature films.

Movie fans are reminded that free weekly Wednesday noon movies and two Thursday Film Series, sponsored by the NFL, resume Sept. 25.

Films planned for the '75-'76 season include Bronowski's 13 part series "The Ascent of Man," "The Entertainer," and "Room at the Top."

Annotated film listings with dates will be available at all Newton Libraries in the fall. Pick up a copy of the NFL Bulletin, check this newspaper, or listen to radio station WNTN for news of all library activities.

The Newton Country Players have selected Larry Levison of Chestnut Hill as producer and Margaret Spicer Annis of Newtonville as stage manager for their season's curtain-raiser, Rodgers and Hammerstein's Pulitzer Prize-winning musical, "South Pacific."

The perennial favorite will be directed by John Deming of Newton Highlands.

The production will be available at reduced rates to sponsor groups and theatre parties interested in fund raising for Sunday through Thursday bookings, Nov. 23 to Dec. 7, at Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton, with its seating capacity of 200.

Currently a vice-president of the Players, Levison created light design and served as light and sound technician for the spring productions of "Dr. Fish" and the award-winning "The Real Inspector Hound." He was responsible for light design and served as light technician for "The House of Bernarda Alba" and also worked set construction crew and as light technician for "Pal Joey."

Recipient of a BA degree in biology from U. of Massachusetts in 1972, Levison was credited with light design and served as light technician for ten years at Camp Naticook, Merrimack, N.H., encompassing over musical productions.

He has worked extensively on special effects, and appeared on stage as Marrin' Sam in "Li'l Abner" and in numerous original productions and musical revues.

A six-year member of the Board of Directors and a past president of the group, now entering its 20th season, "South Pacific" will mark Mrs. Annis' fourth assignment as stage manager, having held a similar position for mountings of "Suds," Gabriel Ghost" and "The Balcony," the latter at N.E. Theatre Conference Drama Festival entry also, and as assistant stage manager for both the fall and spring tours of "Sam Stiller, Private Eye," and its NETC Drama Festival performance as well.

Mrs. Annis served as producer for the award-winning NETC Drama Festival entry of "The Real Inspector Hound," "Pal Joey," "See How They Run" and "Anything Goes." She also worked stage crew for the Players' 1974 NETC competition offering of "Eve's Complaint."

Margaret Annis

Larry Levison

In her ever-varying involvement, she has served as choreographer for "Little Mary Sunshine," worked props for "Everything in the Garden" and set decor and lights for "Gold in the Hills." She was light technician also for "And Miss Reardon Drinks a Little," both as a regular season's offering and as a NETC Festival entrant.

A student of dance at the American School of Ballet, N.Y.C., she performed for two years in the Theatre Guild production of "Carousel" on Broadway, later appearing as one of the Snow children and as a village girl with the national touring company.

Mrs. Annis has appeared in a number of musical plays including "Roberta," "Desert Song" and "Brigadoon" with summer stock companies in Dallas, St. Louis and Allentown, Pa. 400,000 volunteers in two years. But the big news is the kind of people coming in.

Today's Army is getting a unique view of today's young people.

In the last two years without the draft, over 400,000 young Americans have chosen to serve in the Army.

As a result, the Army today stands at full authorized strength and is, in fact, ahead of schedule for fielding 16 ready divisions.

Not only are the numbers impressive, but so are the people. 66% of them have completed high school. 14,000 have some college behind them. And they'll be able to continue their educations while in the Army.

According to commanders in the field, today's young volunteers are making terrific soldiers. They're looking for personal challenge, and getting it. They're at an age where they want to test themselves, and they're doing it. In return for responsibility, opportunity and maturity, they're giving 100% to the job of soldiering.

It's a good situation, and getting better. And perhaps not so surprising when you consider what today's Army has to offer:

We start a young soldier at $344.10 a month, with a raise to $383.40 in just four months.

For those who qualify, there are over 200 specific job-training courses to choose from. Most of these courses develop skills that can be used in civilian life.

The opportunities to continue a formal education are varied and extensive. We have soldiers who go on to complete high school. Soldiers who start and finish college. And some who even acquire advanced degrees.

Today, the Army's educational opportunities have been expanded with the introduction of "Project Ahead"—a program that involves over 1200 colleges and universities and enables a young person to enlist in the Army and start college at the same time. And all with the Army paying up to 75% of the tuition costs.

In addition to salary, there are the traditional benefits of food, clothing, housing, medical and dental care, and 30 days' paid vacation each year. All of which allow the more enterprising to build a savings account.

And there is the opportunity for travel. Not only throughout the continental United States, but to Europe, Hawaii, Korea and other assignments around the world.

The Army offer reads well, but it doesn't come easy. It takes intelligence, courage, discipline, teamwork, pride in self and love of country. It says a lot for America that, in just two years, 400,000 young people have volunteered to serve in its Army.

Tax hike likely $10

By ELIZABETH McKINNON
of the Graphic staff

There will be an increase in the tax rate of at least $9.20, probably closer to $10, per thousand dollars of assessed valuation. The current rate is $150.40.

This was the feeling of the aldermanic Finance Committee, which held a special meeting Monday night to hear the recommendation of Mayor Theodore Mann on setting the tax rate for 1975-76.

The city has the largest amount of surplus in its history, Comptroller Lawrence Marino said — $4.47 million. Of that amount, $3,060,000 has been certified by the state as "free cash" available for use.

The Mann administration has asked the Board of Aldermen to approve the use of $2.5 million from the $3 million to offset the expected tax increases.

The Finance Committee listened Monday night but took no action, deferring any vote until after a special meeting set for Sept. 8, by which time the FinCom members will have had time to digest the information and ask questions.

If the mayor's recommendation is followed, the amount of money left in surplus will be $560,000, more than ever before. But the expenses of running a city are also higher and less predictable than ever before.

A listing of potential liabilities includes $230 000 additional cost of hospital and medical insurance for municipal employees and $162,000 for the School Department's Chapter 766 program. The latter figure is the difference between what was anticipated as state reimbursement and what was actually promised on the "cherry sheet."

Another $257,000 must be available for the Metco program under terms of the consent judgment that ended a taxpayers' suit for restoration of a $500,000 cut in the School Committee budget by the Board of Aldermen.

Other unknown potential liabilities are a possible need for more money because of the stringent budget this year, a snow emergency, additional cost of collective bargaining, and repair of heating and ventilation equipment at Newton North High School.

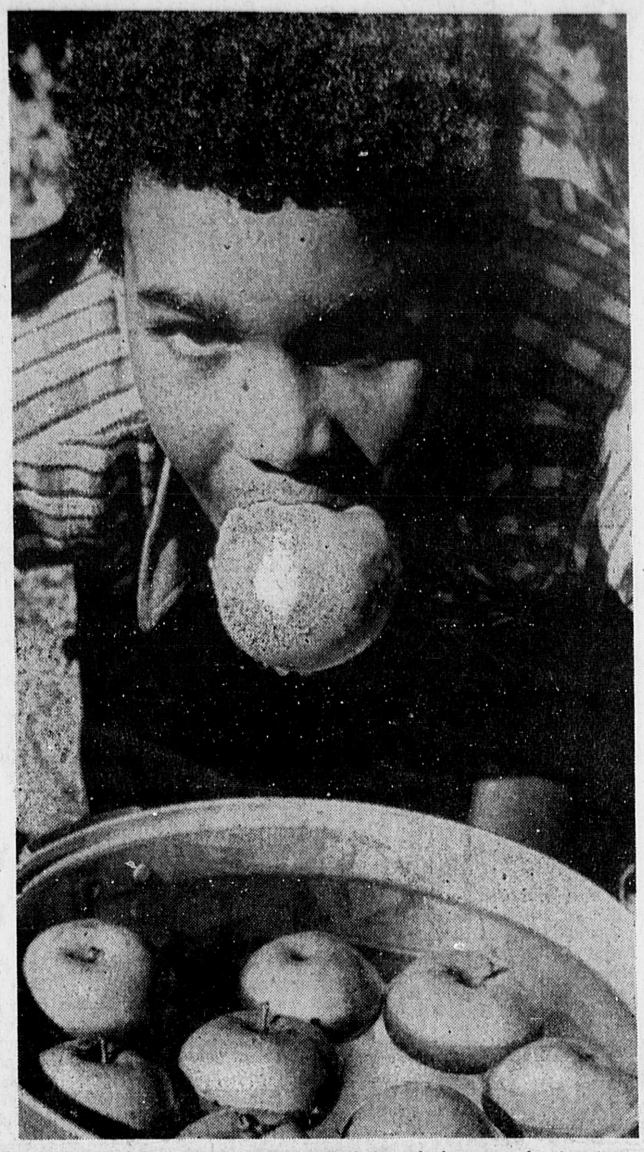

Despite the fact that these liabilities may total more than the $560,000 recommended to be kept in surplus, the Mann administration feels that the deficit, if any, will not occur until the last quarter of the fiscal year, around March or April, when the state allows recalculation of surplus and use of some of it.

Uncollected taxes, which will be paid to the city over the next few months, total $1.2 million, Marino said.

FinCom Chairman Sidney Small, who engineered the school budget cut last spring, argued briefly about the two School Department items. He said the $162,000 had already been given to the School Committee as start-up money for Chapter 766 (for special-needs children) in 1973. "If they ask for it again, they should be reminded," Small added.

Schools are ready for 15,690 kids

About 925 Newton residents will experience their first day in school next Thursday when they begin kindergarten at Newton's 23 elementary schools.

In all of Newton's 30 public schools, there will be about 15,690 students. This will be the eighth consecutive year that enrollment has dropped since 1967 when it was 18,424.

All elementary schools will begin classes on Thursday, Sept. 4, the official first day of school, from 8:45 to 1 p.m., as always on Tuesday and Thursday. On the other three days, elementary school runs until 3 p.m.

Memorial School in Oak Hill will have a new acting principal. John F. McAdam, a teacher at the school last year, will be the school's last principal.

The School Committee voted to close the shcool and send all the students to Spaulding School in 1976 because of declining enrollment.

New additions at Lincoln-Eliot and Davis schools will brig hten up the recesses of kids at those schools, in addition to providing more space. The outsides of the new gyms and classrooms are painted with brightly colored fruit, numbers, and geometric designs.

The schedule for the school year is 184 days long.

Christmas-Hanukkah vacation begins after the close of school on Friday, Dec. 19, and classes will begin again Jan. 5. Schools will also be closed the weeks beginning Feb. 16 and April 19.

Other holidays include Yom Kippur, Monday, Sept. 15; Columbus Day, Monday, Oct. 13; Veterans' Day, Tuesday, Nov. 11; Thanksgiving recess, starting Nov. 26 at noon; Martin Luther King Day, Thursday, Jan. 15; Good Friday, April 16; and Memorial Day, Monday, May 31. Closing is set for Friday, June 25.

Major changes in the School Department include a new personnel director and a new physical education director.

Hope Danielson took over the personnel post of James Laurits after he resigned during the summer, and Joan Schmidt is new to Newton as coordinator of physical education.

The Newton schools are continuing participation this year in a program to provide lunches to children in all schools who cannot afford to pay the regular price.

To apply for free or reduced-price meals financed by the National School Lunch and School Breakfast Program students should apply to the principal of their school. The decision is based on the financial need of the family, and appeals may be made to Director of Support Services John Gilleland.

On Monday, Mayor Theodore Mann swore into office Nunzio J. Piselli as acting director of public works and Frederic Arata as acting street commissioner at a ceremony attended by city officials and labor leaders.

Before being appointed to his new post, Piselli worked for 27 years as a construction development clerk in the Street Department. In 1968 he was transferred to City Hall to serve as administrative assistant to the street commissioner.

Arata began in the public works field as a laborer in 1951 and later became foreman at the highway division of the Auburndale and Elliot Stteet yards, before being appointed in 1973 as general superintendent of streets in the city.

Newton Metco program not hurt by funding cut

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Newton's request for the funding of the School Committee's 350-student Metco program will not be affected by the recent move of the state Board of Education to reduce Metco funding in some communities.

The state board asked local school committees to lower their Metco requests to 10 percent below the maximum allowable reimbursement, but Newton submitted a request in May that asked for 13.5 percent below the maximum.

According to Karl Fuller, Metco administrator for the Department of Education, "Secretary of Education Paul Parks' office is asking all towns to consider further cuts voluntarily so other communities can enter the program."

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink said Wednesday morning that he would not recommend that the School Committee reduce its request for funding the voluntary busing program for Boston minority students coming to Newton.

"I cannot see how Newton can entertain any cuts" in the budget. "We (the School Department) did not ask for any more money than the program costs the taxpayers," the superintendent said.

Newton requested $502,540.89 to cover costs for basic instruction and the direct costs for salaries and supplies just for the Metco services . The personnel hired with Metco funding are shared with any students in schools needing their services.

The cost for transporting the students is estimated at $140,165. The state agreed to continue to reimburse all transportation costs.

Acting on the recommendation of Superintendent Fink, the School Committee adopted a long-range plan for participation in Metco that would result in raising the percentage of minority children in Newton schools to 9.4 percent.

The plan to bring 444 Metco students to Newton in 1978 was started by adding 100 students in January, 1974. When the School Committee approved these additional students, it raised the charge to the state from the cost of the program alone to include the basic instruction fee.

The two categories, basic instruction costs and direct costs, average out to be $1,435 for the 350 students.

The state formula allows Newton to charge $1,660, slightly lower than the average of the three tuition rates for

Rhoda Davidow candidate for Ward 8 post

Rhoda Davidow, 105 Country Club Rd., has announced her candidacy for the Board of Aldermen as Ward 8 alderman.

Mrs. Davidow, a 20-year resident of Ward 8 , believes that seeking the Ward 8 aldermanic position is a logical extension of her 20 years of interest and concern in the Newton community. She knows the community well and as a member of the Board of Aldermen she will be able to examine and act on the serious issues facing Newton today.

She is concerned with real estate revaluation, the future of the Newton school system, and the use of open land and recreational facilities. Aware of the problems faced by the tax-paying citizens of Newton, she intends to evaluate these problems and respond in a practical and responsible way.

An early resident of Oak Hill Park, Mrs. Davidow was a member of the Oak Hill Park Association and secretary of the Oak Hill Park Women's Club. Her initial interest in neighborhood concerns broadend to the entire Oak Hill community when she moved to her present address.

Her children attended the Oak Hill School, Meadowbrook Junior High and Newton South High School. Mrs. Davidow was on the PTA boards of both the Oak Hill School and Meadowbrook Junior High

Notice to candidates

The Newton Graphic will be accepting announcements from candidates in both the general and preliminary elections until Monday, Sept. 8, at 5 p.m.

Announcements of candidacies will appear in the Graphic through the Sept. 11 edition. After Sept. 11, no announcements will appear.

The Newton Graphic news deadline is Monday at 5 p.m. The office will be closed on Labor Day. The deadline that week will be Tuesday at 5 p.m.

Budge enters race for Ward 4 seat

Donald M. Budge of 31 Ithaca Circle, Newton Lower Falls, has announced his candidacy for alderman-at-large from Ward 4.

There will be two vacancies in Ward 4 because both present aldermen-at-large for the ward will not be candidates for reelection.

Budge and his wife, Eveleen, have been residents of Newton for 15 years. They have four children attending Newton schools.

A veteran of the U.S. Navy, Budge is an attorney-at-law and a certified public accountant. He received a Bachelor of Science degree in business administration from Northeastern University and the degree of Juris Doctor from Suffolk University Law School.

He was president of the Newton Lower Falls Improvement Association for four years and a member of the (Lower Falls Project Area Committee) (LOPAC) the citizens participation committee involved with the Newton Redevelopment Authority activities in the Lower Falls area.

He has served as a member of the Newton Selective Service Board for the past several years. Currently he is a member of the advisory board of the Newton Human Relations Commission.

In Budge's opinion the most important issue in this election is the question of fiscal responsibility on the part of all elected officials. No longer can the city afford the luxury of ever-expanding services. Each piece of legislation must be weighed against the cost to the taxpayers and the real value to all the citizens.

Budge believes that consolidation of some of the administrative functions of the Newton Housing Authority, Newton Redevelopment Authority and the Planning Department could provide the necessary coordination needed in the various programs now being implemented by the city.

An example of where efficiency can be improved is in the Public Works and Engineering Departments. Although, in

Robert Stiller seeks Ward 8 alderman seat

Nomination papers for Ward 8 alderman have been filed by Robert Stiller, 21 June Lane, Newton Centre.

Since 1969, Stiller has been active in the political life of Newton, and has successfully lobbied for legislation to protect and improve the quality of life and education in Newton.

Stiller has recognized that as Ward 8 contains over 360 acres of land that could be developed, it is, and will continue to be, a prime target for developers. He has successfully opposed proposals that would have opened the area to the development of multiple-family housing and to the institutionalizing of existing home sites in this traditionally single-family-home area.

His views on housing and zoning have earned him invitations as a guest lecturer at Newton South High School, the Winsor School, and at Boston College. The President's Council for Environmental Quality interviewed him with regard to the current housing and zoning laws and their impact on the residential community.

Stiller is a member of the Newton Taxpayers Association and has strongly supported their efforts in urging the Newton School Department to provide the best in education, but within the means of the city's taxpayers to support their programs. He has constantly urged fiscal restraint in view of the declining school enrollment.

Backman files bill to create state job-opportunity program

At the same time as the Massachusetts State Senate was rejecting his last-ditch effort to prevent the cutting of more than 18,000 employable people from general relief without providing jobs for them, State Sen. Jack H. Backman Brookline-Newton has filed legislation on behalf of the Special Commission on Employment to create a statewide job-opportunity program.

The legislation contained in the Commission's Second Interim Report is based on an earlier bill co-filed by Backman and State Sen. Ronald C. Mackenzie. Sen. Backman has requested that the job-opportunity package be referred to the Senate Committee on Ways and Means for a hearing at the earliest possible date. Backman is hopeful that it is the first step toward providing not only general-relief applicants but also a substantial portion of the state's nearly 400,000 unemployed persons with meaningful work.

"This bill is a direct challenge to those members of the general public and the legislature who say everybody on welfare should be made to work. The challenge is now whether these legislators and the public are willing to take action so that every person who wants a job will be given the opportunity to work," Backman said.

To meet this challenge, the commission's bill creates an Office of Public Employment to develop jobs, both within private industry and government. Areas targeted for employment programs include public safety and crime prevention, the environment, health care, education, transportation and recreation. These jobs would be created by both state and municipal agencies with input from labor unions to represent industry and government.

Backman said, "At the present time, the Division of Employment Security is completely inept. In the city of Boston, with over 5,000 "employables" referred to the Division of Employment Security for job assistance, the division referred exactly one person to a job, according to the last bi-monthly report of the department."

The Special Commission's bill attacks the dual failure presented by the inability of private economy to employ all persons seeking work and the government's incapability to provide other job opportunities or fully adequate public services, Backman said. The concept of job opportunity enables state and local governments to have a measure of administration and input as to who will be employed and where their energies will be directed, thereby allowing for the hiring of unemployed and disadvantaged workers whose energies can be utilized to attack many of the problems facing society.

"If the governor, the legislature and the public feel that the 400,000 unemployed are playing games and really don't want to work, I challenge them to support the Special Commission's legislation which would provide a job opportunity for all people who want a job and are willing to work," said Sen. Backman.

At the present time, according to the Division of Employment Security, there are only 9,000 jobs in their job bank. The division claims that this represents a total of 50,000 available jobs on the grounds that employers have five jobs for every one they list with the agency.

Backman stated, "The figures of DES are in error to begin with. According to a survey of DES made in 1973, there are, at most two to three jobs for every one listed with DES. Their statements, however, point up the complete inadequacy of our present state Division of Employment Security. The division now frankly admits that private industry doesn't consider them as a worthwhile resource at the present time."

The Job Opportunity Rights Act of 1975 provides statutory recognition of the right of every unemployed person to a meaningful job opportunity commensurate with his physical and educational ability and development. The mechanism utilized in the legislation for stimulating state manpower policies so as to increase job opportunities is a public service employment plan directed and managed by a newly created Office of Public Service under the supervision and control of the Secretary of Manpower Affairs.

Mayor wants stronger bond among advocates

Mayor Theodore D. Mann of Newton has called for the strengthening of organizations dealing with municipal problems in order that city and town governments may gain added strength in dealing with the governor and the state legislature.

Meeting at the State House with representatives of the League of Cities and Towns, the Selectmen's Association, and the Massachusetts Mayors' Association, Mann called for a conference of communities which would bring to it representatives from each of the major groups in order that a concentrated effort be made for legislation which would deal with problems municipalities have in dealing with state government.

Mann, executive vice president of the Massachusetts Mayors' Association and a strong advocate of municipal organizations, added that "Cooperation is needed if we are to successfully fight against the inequities of such matters as the state distribution formula and the increased costs burdening local communities as a result of the passage of legislation without proper funding mechanisms by the State Legislature."

The meeting of municipal organizations was held immediately after members of the group met with Lt. Gov. Thomas P. O'Neil, Secretary of Manpower Howard Smith, and Secretary of Community Development William Flynn, who, along with other members of the Governor's cabinet, met with representatives of municipalities to discuss problems of mutual concern.

CETA summer work program assisted 505 area youths

More than 500 economically disadvantaged young people from this area have been enabled to contribute significantly to their family's financial health this summer through a youth work-experience program sponsored by Newton CETA.

Working a 35-hour week, the 505 young people earned a grand total of $270,000. The nine-week summer work program, ending August 29, will be followed by in-school work programs starting in September.

Individual young people earned $73.50 per week. Ninety percent were age 18 or under. They worked in a variety of settings and at jobs ranging from large-scale brush-clearing projects at the Storer estate in Waltham to a job at the State House, where one Newton youth worked as a data processing courier in the Department of Accounting and Finance.

Newton CETA director Charles F. Miller reported that as of August 18 the attrition rate for the program was extremely low: 32 young people from the original 537 enrollment left the program. The '75 summer total exceeded '74's tally by 60 young people.

"The number-one incentive for the kids was unquestionably the paycheck," Miller said. "The Newton CETA staff is more impressed with the good work performance turned in by almost all the kids. We're also pleased with good working relationships we've made through the young people with agencies and offices in the 10 towns we serve."

Newton CETA (Comprehensive Employment and Training Act) receives federal funding from the U.S. Department of Labor. It works with economically disadvanteged individuals and families to upgrade job skills and job opportunities.

Running one of 25 CETA programs in Massachusetts, the Newton office serves the towns of Bedford, Brookline, Dover, Lexington, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Wellesley and Weston.

Most of the summer youth jobs went to residents of the high-population cities of Brookline, Newton and Waltham. There were 102 participants from Newton at the close of the program. Applications were made directly by young people or by referrals from school counselors, welfare officials and Division of Employment Security personnel. No eligible applications were received from the towns of Dover, Lincoln or Weston.

Waltham native Walter McGuire heads the youth work-experience programs at Newton CETA. McGuire, a seasoned youth worker, formerly served as coordinator of EEA (Emergency Employment Act, forerunner of CETA) in Waltham.

McGuire stresses the continuity between summer work and in-school work programs. He estimates that two-thirds of the young summer workers will take part in Newton CETA programs when the school year starts. Interested young people can obtain further information by calling Newton CETA directly, McGuire said. Offices are at 90 Bridge St. in the Nonantum section of Newton; telephone number is 965-5750.

Mofenson acts to save privacy bill

State Rep. David J. Mofenson (D-Newton), chairman of the Special Legislative Commission on Privacy, substituted a new draft (House 6603) of the Commission's Fair Information Practices Act on the floor of the House last week, successfully overturning the resolve that the Judiciary Committee had reported out.

Mofenson noted that there was an effort in the House to reconsider the vote which if successful, would in effect kill the legislation for this year.

"This is not a partisan bill. We have the support of both liberals and conservatives concerned about the protection of individual rights of privacy," the representative said. "There are indications that the Senate will be responsive to the bill if we can get it through the House."

The Fair Information Practices Act sets forth responsibilities of government agencies and rights of individuals regarding use of personally identifiable data. Its purpose is to provide reasonable access by individuals to their records, a system of identification of state-operated personal data systems, and to provide civil remedies for violation of its provisions.

Woman paddles the Mississippi alone

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — Everybody she met along the river told her she couldn't make it.

"They'd say, 'Lady, there's just no way in hell you'll ever make it. What are you doing out here! Don't you know this river is dangerous?'"

But today Rebecca Johnson, 23, of Iowa City, Iowa, is drinking beer in the French Quarter and writing postcards to 150 persons she met on her solo canoe trip down the Mississippi River.

"They told me at Lake Itasca (where the river begins in Minnesota) 200 people a year start out on trips like this and most of them don't even make it to the first town, 94 miles downriver," said Ms. Johnson, who claims to be the first woman to paddle the length of the Mississippi alone.

"Then when I got to Memphis a man in a power boat said, 'Lady what are you doing out here! Don't you know this river is dangerous?'"

Designing couple makes master plans for Nigeria

By ELEANOR SIEGEL
of the Graphic staff

In this time of economic and energy crises, when architects, engineers and urban designers are searching for work, a Newton Corner couple, Laurence and Sherrie Cutler, produced a proposal which won their firm a $10.8 million contract. The contract is for the master planning of eight existing cities in Nigeria, including Enugu, the state capital in the East-Central states.

The young husband-and-wife team, who are both architects and urban designers, became friendly with a Nigerian urban designer who worked for their company, Ecodesign, Inc., in Cambridge. Ecodesign is a subsidiary of Combustion Engineering, Inc. — a billion-dollar industrial corporation.

As their friendship developed, so did their interest in the country, and the Nigerian, who worked in their office for two years, urged them to look to his country for work.

Nigeria, Africa's most populous country, is a member of OPEC and, since 1973' has been the seventh largest oil producer in the world. Also the president of OPEC is a Nigerian.

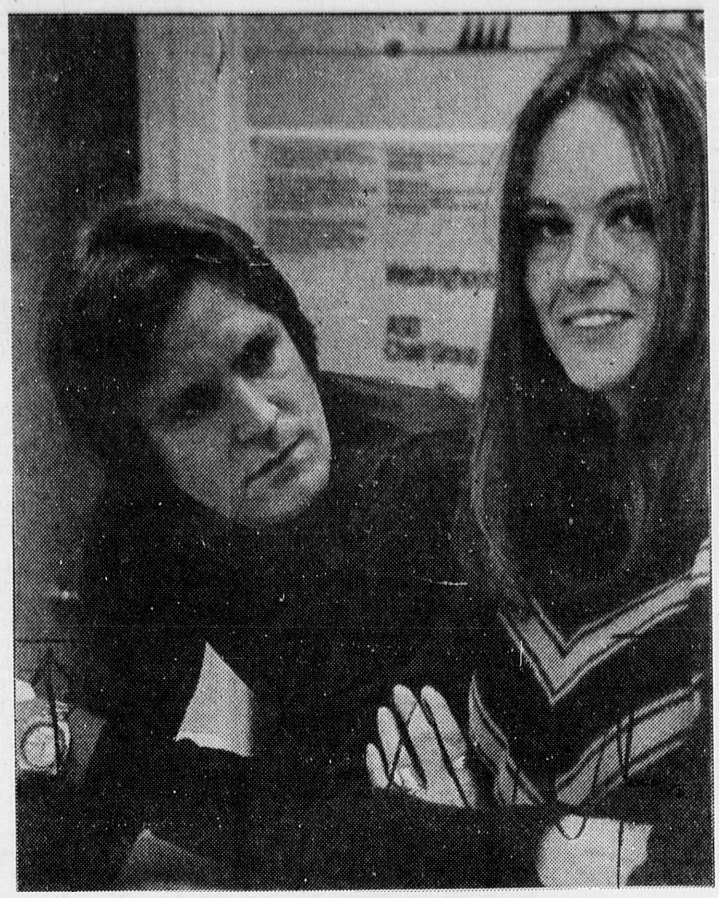

While the United States has now blacklisted the members of OPEC from mosfavored-nation trade status, Sherrie Cutler points out that "it was really Nigeria who pulled us through the oil crisis since after the Arab embargo, the Nigerians still sold oil to the U.S. at old prices."

Right now, with the petronairas, the name given to the earnings from Nigerian oil fields, the government wants to develop the country. The Cutlers submitted their proposal for planning to the Ministry of Economic Development and Reconstruction.

They got to know the country well through their Nigerian friends and through the visits that they made to the country before submitting their proposal. Each of their visits was for roughly three weeks at a time. They competed with large organizations from Bulgaria, Russia, Czechoslovakia, Denmark and England.

While there are presently some small New England contracting firms doing business there, this is the "first big American contract in many years," says Laurence Cutler.

Although the fees are substantial, the couple admits they are deceptive. For $8.6 million are in professional fees and $2.2 million are in reimbursable expenses. Ecodesign employs 13 people, while Combustion Engineering, Inc. employs 1500 architects, planners and engineers. The proposal included engineering groups which will do 75 percent of the project. Also, a large part of the fee will be kept in Nigeria since much of the work will be subcontracted to Nigerian consulting firms.

Laurence and Sherrie Cutler

During the planning study, the Cutlers say they will "take an overall look at the entire Eastern-Central state which is as big as Massachusetts, Connecticut and Rhode Island." They will evaluate the transportation, health services, water quality, erosion problems and housing.

Among the questions they will deal with is "If the needs are to retain people in an area to stem urban growth, then what do you do to keep people in the agricultural areas?"

A master plan will be developed for individual cities, each of which has its own characteristics. For instance, some are universityoriented, some are agricultural areas and some are the beginnings of industrial corridors. The Cutlers say they will try to design the cities to reinforce their roles in the region.

Adding to their complex tasks are some problems expressed in the summary proposal. These include "increasing urbanization, a high birth rate, inflation within the economy and the continuing loss of crops and livestock due to the drought in the North (which has) made food production a matter of great concern throughout Nigeria."

Compounding these difficulties is the destruction resulting from the 1967 civil war which destroyed some portions of the Eastern-Central state.

Laurence Cutler drew an analogy between the U.S. and Nigeria saying that "15 years ago Nigeria gained its liberty (from Britain) and 200 years ago we gained ours; four years ago they had their civil war and 100 years ago, we had ours."

One of the first steps the Cutlers took toward the problem solving was to gather pre-planning information. As part of their proposal they recommended a Center for Regional and Urban Studies be established which would evolve into a permanent center with a library in Enugu and possibly one in Cambridge. The center would be affiliated with the University of Nigeria and possibly with an American institution with which, the Cutlers say, discussions are taking place.

Thecenter would also be a data base since data is a "real problem" and for the most part unavailable. This lack makes it difficult to get mapping and because there is not enough statistical information, the Cutlers have to develop new techniques for planning.

One technique they will use is the Land Satellite which takes pictures of the land every 18 days. The Land Sat can give them a view of land use categories and how things are shifting.

An essential part of their plan is to offer "technical assistance and expertise" while utilizing Nigerians as counterpart professionals who know their own goals and ambitions . . . who can make recommendations and take into consideration history and culture."

Nigerian culture is for mostly unknown here and few realize that ancient Nigerian art influenced artists in the 1900's including Picasso.

Together with the Nigerians, the Cutlers hope to be able to correct such situations as "sprawl. . . which is already a problem along the major corridors." However, Sherrie Cutler says that "we here have mechanisms to begin controls."

Also, she points out that during this study Nigerians will have to decide what their attitude is toward the automobile." Right now, she says, "the estimate is that 80 percent of the population drive bikes and not cars."

And speaking of cars, the Harvard-educated couple, who selected Newton as a residence because of the schools, expressed dissatisfaction over the traffic in Newton Corner. The Cutlers, who have two youngsters, Max and Zachary, said they had complained to the mayor.

"It scares me," says Laurence Cutler, "to think that our oldest, who will attend Underwood School, will have to cross the street." They also spoke about the screeching brakes in the night. But as far as planning in their city . . . well, Sherrie Cutler compared it to a doctor operating on her own relative.

Correction

In a story about a new building proposed for the Newton-at-128 industrial park (Aug. 14 issue), the size of the building was incorrectly stated. The building proposed by builder Domenic Saraceno is two-and-one-half stories, not five-and-one-half.

In the same story, "personal problems" attributed to Saraceno should have been explained as relating only to problems involving the time required by Hatch Act hearings. Saraceno wanted to avoid hearings, if possible, in order to meet construction schedules.

Delicata bids for second term

Henry J. Delicata of 16 Middle St., Newton, has announced his candidacy for re-election to the Newton School Committee.

Delicata is a graduate of Bentley College with a degree in accounting, and plans to attend graduate school in September. He is employed presently as a budget analyst for the New England Mutual Life Insurance Company of Boston, responsible for monthly budget reports, and the implementation of new budgetary reporting methods.

In addition, Delicata has been an active Mass VITA Volunteer, acting on a consulting basis, helping non-profit organizations throughout the Boston area in setting up and maintaining accounting and budget systems.

He is also a member of Sons of Italy, Umberto Prino Lodge No. 1069, Newton.

Delicata feels that the three main issues in the upcoming election: will be fiscal autonomy and fiscal responsibility, declining enrollment and the consolidation of schools, and efficiency and reorganization of supportive staff.

Delicata believes firmly in fiscal autonomy but adds that it should be coupled with fiscal responsibility.

He feels that "some of the present school committee members have not acted responsibly to the present economic conditions, even in light of 100 percent assessment."

Delicata feels he is responsible, first, to all school children in Newton, and second, to all taxpayers in the city.

The problem of declining enrollment led to the establishment of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Declining Enrollment. The group concluded that school consolidation should be considered when a surplus of space exists, and also urged the development of long range planning so that consolidation if necessary would begin by September 1976.

Delicata accepts the committee's recommendations, however, he added that "a significant dollar savings would have to be realized before I would vote to close any neighborhood school."

"Efficiency and reorganization of supportive staff seems desperately needed," he said.

"Reorganization should occur simultaneously with the changes in the pattern of the school system, and one should parallel the other."

Delicata believes that there are definite dollar savings to be found in planned reorganization.

Finally, the candidate for his second term believes "Education should be progressive, never taking a step backwards. Innovative methods and techniques make it easier for teachers to relate to their students. However, the fundamentals and basic skills needed to progress are most important, and with a combination of fundamentals and innovative programs, education becomes easier and learning an experience."

Those over 65 may receive more benefits

If you're a Bostonian who's 65 or older, you may be eligible for additional federal benefits even if you receive income from other sources.

The Mayor's Commission on Affairs of the Elderly and the Social Security Administration are working together to screen Bostonians who may be eligible for Supplemental Security Income (SSI). SSI could mean hundreds of dollars in additional income each year for those who qualify.

If you would like to be included in the screening, call the Mayor's Elderly Hotline at 722-4646.

Cocaine seized by police at two Newtonville homes

Newton police and three special agents from the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration seized two packages of alleged to contain an estimated $40,000 worth of cocaine from two Newtonville residences Monday.

Stephen R. Paskow, 82 Madison Ave., was arrested on three drug charges and released on personal recognizance.

Police seized another package at 432 Newtonville Ave., but made no arrest.

Both packages were mailed from Bogota, Colombia, according to police, who were tipped by postal officials after a customs inspection uncovered the drugs.

Paskow has been charged with possession of a Class B substance (cocaine) with intent to distribute, possession of a Class D substance, and manufacture of a controlled substance.

Newton police who made the arrests were Det. Sgt. Arthur Fryar and Det. Joseph W. Donahue.

Public Hearing Sept. 8 on psychiatric halfway house

A petition for a psychiatric halfway house in Newtonville will be heard among eight petitions at a public hearing held by the Land Use Committee Sept. 8.

Seldom has a proposal been preceded by so much careful planning, attention to city requirements and discussion with neighbors.

As a result, Dr. Jerry Wacks has garnered support from 28 abutters and abutters to the abutters in the form of a signed petition that he will present to the Land Use Committee at the hearing.

A neighborhood meeting to discuss the proposal has been set up for Tuesday, Sept. 2, at the Central Congregational Church, 218 Walnut St., under the chairmanship of the pastor, Rev. Ernest Heeren.

Wacks and his partner, Dr. Robert Patterson, are both practicing psychiatrists from Lexington who want to start the first psychiatric halfway house in Newton.

The 16 residents of the house at 175 Walnut St. would be former patients of short-term psychiatric residential facilities' such as the McLean Hospital and the Newton-Wellesley psychiatric inpatient unit.

They will have been in the psychiatric treatment facility for an average of four to six weeks, and will stay at the Hunter House, as the house is now known and will continue to be known for periods ranging between three months and a year, according to Dr. Wacks.

During the time of their residency at Hunter House, the former patients will be required to have a job or go to school and to have a regular therapist away from the house.

Dr. Wacks and Dr. Patterson will be on call at all times, and the house will be managed by a resident houseparent couple.

Two neighbors have already offered to teach arts and crafts and dancing, Dr. Wacks said.

The psychiatrists are especially proud that their halfway house will not take the property off the tax rolls, and that it will pay its way in the city.

The house will be run as a nonprofit corporation. Drs. Wacks and Patterson will own the house and land and will lease the property to the corporation, which has already been set up, consisting of their families and a lawyer.

There is no residence in Newton for persons discharged from residential treatment facilities, Dr. Wacks says. "Loneliness is a big problem," he feels, even though many of the residents will have families they may visit on weekends and who will visit them at Hunter House.

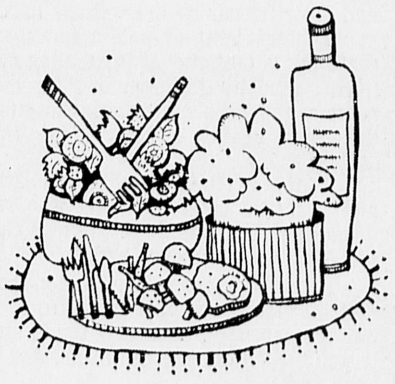

The cost per resident has not been decided yet but is likely to range between $125 and $150 per week, which will include everything.

There is no medical insurance that covers this cost yet, but Drs. Wacks and Patterson hopes that there soon will be.

Patterson pointed out that the cost of maintaining a patient in a residential psychiatric treatment facility after he could be discharged to a halfway house is far more than the expense of the halfway house.

No worse mess

Federal officials in Washington told a Transcript writer on a recent visit to the Capitol that public welfare in Massachusetts is the most poorly administered of any of the 50 States.

That opinion was supported by the results of recent audits by the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare which showed the Bay State record of over-payments and errors in disbursing benefits to be the worst in the entire nation.

This is not the fault of either Governor Michael S. Dukakis or Secretary of Human Services Lucy Benson. They inherited the situation from the administration of ex-Governor Francis W. Sargent who reportedly would like to stand for the Governorship again in 1978.

But whatever criticism may be directed at ex-Governor Sargent and the welfare director he imported from out of state, the hard fact is that Governor Dukakis and Mrs. Benson have not taken any effective steps to clean up the sorry welfare mess.

Dukakis and Mrs. Benson have held their positions for almost eight months, and there is not the slightest shred of evidence that there are any fewer cheats and chiselrs on the welfare rolls than when they took office last January.

Governor Dukakis confidently promised the people of Massachusetts they would have the best-managed state in the Union under his direction. To date the Governor has been long on promise and short on performance.

The administration of the state's welfare department was a disgrace under Sargent. It's still a disgrace under Dukakis.

While the state is confronted with a financial crisis of monstrous proportions, its welfare system is the most liberal in the country. People have been coming here from other states during the past several years to go on the welfare rolls.

But the most serious aspect to our haphazardly administered welfare setup has been that people, who don't need public assistance from the welfare agency and are not entitled to it under the law, have been getting it dishonestly.

The most flagrant fraud continues year after year in the state welfare department. Little is done to stamp it out or to weed out the crooks and cheats and chiselers.

People making $20,000 a year have applied for welfare assistance and have been paid it. Employees in the welfare department allegedly have put themselves and their friends on the welfare lists.

Blatant theft of public funds and it certainly is tantamount to stealing money from the public till is one of the principal reasons the people of Massachusetts are the most heavily taxed in the United States.

That was true under Francis Sargent, and it's true under Dukakis who in his advance billing was to be the best Governor Massachusetts ever had.

Federal figures in Washington showed that Massachusetts had the third highest welfare expenditures among the 50 states. It was topped only by California and New York State.

But Massachusetts does not have the third highest population among the 50 states.

There is no way Michael Dukakis, Lucy Benson, Francis Sargent or anyone else can justify the expenditure of more welfare funds by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts than by more populous states such as Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio.

The reason, in plain language, is that we have been getting our pockets picked by crooks who have been collecting welfare to which they are not entitled.

This could be the main issue against Governor Dukakis, when he next stands for reelection.

Much is written on minorities but:

How is the majority, white doing?

Analysis by Gus Tyler

NEW YORK — How well are America's minorities doing economically?

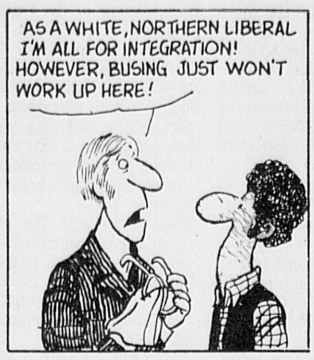

A current report by the United States Commission on Civil Rights (July 1975) tells the story in 24 statistical tables. But the conclusions you reach depend very much on how you read the facts.

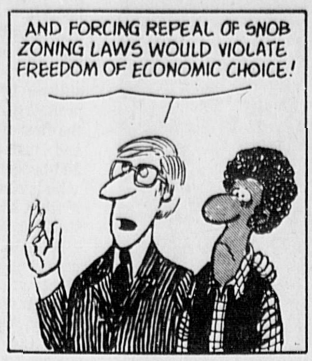

For instance, in comparing the median income of white and nonwhite families, the Report finds that "the dollar gap between the two groups has increased from $3,014 to $4,443 (in 1972 dollars)" in the years between 1954 and 1972.

The impression from this finding is that nonwhites are not making much progress or that, if they are moving ahead, they are not moving as rapidly as the whites.

But neither of these impressions would be correct. White family income in 1954 was $6,771; it rose by 1972 to $11,549 — an increase of 72 per cent. Nonwhite family income rose in the same period from $3,757 to $7,016 — an increase of 92 per cent. Hence, nonwhite family income has been rising more rapidly than white family income.

The Report offers further proof of this in still another one of its tables. In 1954, the nonwhite family had an income that was only 56 per cent of the white family; by 1972, the former had an income that was 62 per cent of the latter. This is slow movement — a catch-up of six percentage points in 18 years — but clearly nonwhites are moving up economically more rapidly than whites.

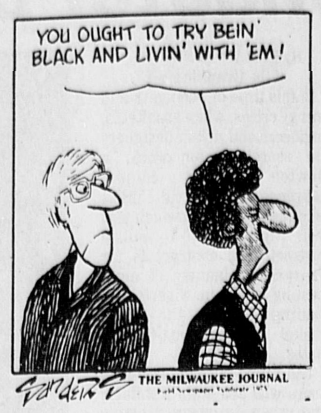

Because whites started so far ahead, even though their income rose at a slower pace, the amount was larger. To match dollar for dollar with the 72 per cent white increase would have required a jump of 130 per cent in nonwhite income.

Another for instance: The report says "in the critical professional occupations of dentist, physician and university teacher, the proportion of blacks relative to all persons in these occupations has declined, while in many other critical occupations proportionate gains have been minimal." Again, the report gives a negative impression. Yet the tables reveal that black dentists increased from 2,300 to 2,400 from 1960 to 1970, black physicians from 5,000 to 6,009 and black university teachers from 6,000 to 16,300. But because these have been rapidly expanding professions, the "percentages" of blacks have fallen — in all cases by less than three-tenths of 1 per cent.

Meanwhile the numbers of blacks in other professions has risen dramatically both absolutely and relatively. Social and recreation workers from 13,800 to 41,100, from 10 percent of the profession to 15 per cent; registered nurses from 32,800 to 65,200, from 5.6 to 7.8 per cent of the profession; actors from 3.5 to 6.7 per cent; accountants from 3,600 to 16,200, from less than 1 per cent to almost 2.5 per cent of the trade.

Taken in all, the number of blacks in professional and technical occupations has risen from less than 300,000 (228,100) to more than twice that number (616,300), from 3.7 to 5.4 per cent of the category.

While blacks have good reason to reach out for more of their race in the professions, to deny the progress that has been made is to belittle black ability and to discourage future efforts to make ours a nation of equal opportunity.

Just because Nixon's presidential act bombed is that any reason to keep him out of show biz?

Commentary by Virginia Payette

It's time, I think, to say a few kind words in defense of Richard Nixon. TV star Nixon, that is. So his presidential act bombed. Is that any reason to keep him out of show biz forever?

Besides, aren't they always telling us retired executives even those forced into early retirement should find themselves a second career?

And, since it's not likely Mr. Nixon's going to take up whittling San Clemente driftwood, the obvious choice is to spend his sunset years picking up a few bucks via the memoirs bit.

They've all done it. Truman . . . Eisenhower . . . Johnson. Even Johnson's Lady Bird. Not to mention an assortment of White House chefs, nannies, confidential secretaries, butlers, kennel keepers, wives, sons and daughters, bosom buddies, mistresses, etc. etc. etc.

The results weren't always best-sellers. None was ever snapped up by Hollywood. But they all looked impressive on coffee talbles and maybe even a few scholarly types even read them.

Mr. Nixon is going the same route. But he's tossed in a zinger: he's sold himself as a TV package to David Frost for a series of post-election specials. The price is a secret; all anybody will say is that it's "not quite" a million.

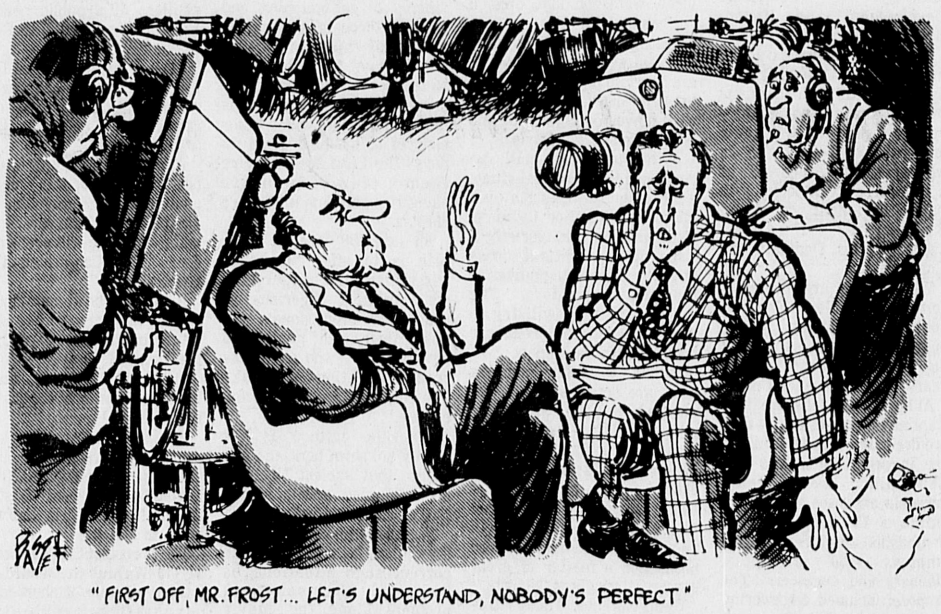

Well. This was all Mr. Nixon's enemies needed.

Out came the big guns, aimed uprighteously against "executive privilege being for sale to the highest bidder" . . "checkbook journalism at its criminal worst" . . . and the "international consortium of braodcasting" that smacked to some as "the muffled clang of laundered money."

Liberals fumed that, if he has decided the time has come to "tell all" about Watergate, the "appropriate forum" would be a congressional committee or a federal grand jury.

Come on. Do they really think Mr. Nixon is going to sit down with David Frost and say anything his critics really want to hear? Or that Frost, who is the most unctuous of fawning talk-show hosts, is going to nail him to the wall with anything but the most timid questions?

Nixon-watchers should know better. He is the only president in history to be run out of the oval office on a rail and, pardon or no pardon he's not about to blurt out anything that would further damage his image in the anals of time. What's really bugging them, most likely, is the fact that he's getting all that money for not saying anything. "Checkbook journalism" has nothing to do with it. Presidential reminiscences have always been for sale and no former Chief Executive has yet to admit he ever goofed in the official performance of his duties. Mr. Nixon has the same privilege, and if he can find somebody willing to pay up for whatever he's willing to remember out loud, why not? Ironically, after all those years of sworn enmity with "the media," he has picked it to present his case to the American public. There's no law that says he can't. There's also no law that says the anti-Nixon forces have to watch. Every TV set comes equipped with this little knob, see, and all they have to do is walk over and . . .

Under the Golden Dome

One case of bureaucratic reform in the Bay State

Analysis by David M. Rosen, UPI state house reporter

BOSTON (UPI) — Examples of effective bureaucratic reform in Massachusetts state government are few and far between, but one seems to be emerging at the Department of Public Utilities.

Earlier this year, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis filed legislation to abolish the sixmember, part-time Public Utilities Commission and replace it with a three-member, full-time board.

The bill was passed by the legislature and signed by Dukakis March 7. The new commissioners were named March 31.

Harold Keohane, a former assistant state attorney general, was named chairman of the new commission. The other two members are Eunice Howe, a Republican and member of the old commission, and Reginald Lindsey, an attorney.

The appointments came at a very important time for consumers. The new commission must act on about $350 million in utility rate increase requests and at the same time review the state's electric rate structure.

The decisions reached in the rate cases will have an immediate impact on the pocketbooks of millions of consumers. The conclusions reached in the electric study will have major long term impact on consumers, businesses and industries.

The new commissioners have been taking their job seriously. Since taking office, they have been doing the fulltime job they are being paid to do. They have sought maximum consumer input by conducting local and evening hearings on occasion.

In addition, the new commission has established good working relationships with the attorney general's office and the state Consumers Council. With the help of these agencies, the DPU has been closely scrutinizing utility rate filings.

While there have not been any immediately startling results, the new commission has made some decisions that have saved consumers money.

Just this month, for example, the DPU saved customers of three electric companies nearly $500,000 by disallowing inclusion of a non-fuel item in the company's fuel adjustment clauses.

The item, called a "capability response charge," is a fee paid by an electric company to the New England Power Pool if the company's reserve generating capacity does not meet NEPOOL requirements. The fee is credited by NEPOOL to the accounts of companies that provide extra reserve capacity to protect companies that are deficient.

Three electric companies — Boston Edison, Brockton Edison and Fall River Electric Light — tried to include a total of $457,538 in capability response charges in their August fuel adjustment clauses.

In the past, these clauses have been rubber stamped by the DPU. But this month the attorney general's office argued that the capability charge was for generating capacity, not fuel, and therefore did not belong in a fuel and purchased power charge.

The DPU agreed and knocked the money out of the company's fuel adjustment clause for August.

The amount of the savings to each individual consumer as a result of this DPU action will be small. But it shows an alertness and willingness to work which could result in larger savings if the same procedure is used in some large pending rate cases.

Lotta nonsense

By Norton Mockridge

NEW YORK — Lotta li'l nonsense today? Okay? All right, here we go:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Seligman of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., eager to keep up with the times, are changing their name to Seligperson!

A spry 80-year-old man walked up to one of the new Biorhythm computers in Los Angeles, which chart your physical, mental and emotional state after being notified of your birthdate. The old fellow informed the computer that he'd been born in 1895.

Nothing happened.

"I'm sorry, sir," said the female attendant, "but the Biorhythm computer is programmed only as far back as 1900."

"Great," said the oldster. "Tell it I was born in 1900. I'd love to be 75 again!"

Speaking of oldsters, an elderly couple I know took their first trip to Las Vegas and the first thing the husband did was to walk up to a slot machine in their hotel and drop in a silver dollar.

POW, he hit the jackpot—lights flashed, wheels spun, there was a frightening clanking noise, and dollars came pouring out.

"Let's get OUT of here!" cried his wife. "I knew if you touched that thing you'd break it!"

Morton Cooper, author of "The Queen," Bantam's new best-seller, called a family he knows to find out how they'd liked their move from a city apartment to a suburban house. He got the little daughter on the phone and chatted with her.

"How do you like living out there?" he asked.

"Oh, it's super!" cried the little girl, "Now I have my own room. And my brother has his own room. But poor Mommy — she's still stuck in there with Daddy!"

Kids, of course, do come up with the darndest things. A mother I know bought some of that soda pop that swears there's only one calorie in each bottle. The mother poured two glasses of the stuff and handed one to her daughter.

"I wonder," said the kid, squinting suspiciously, "which glass has the calorie in it!"

My friend, Sheldon Gorlick, can't figure out the logic of those posters put up by the American Hospital Assn. in connection with its 74th annual convention in Chicago. The poster says: "Let's Hear It For The Hospital."

"Aren't those the very same people," asks Sheldon, "who put up all those signs demanding 'SILENCE?' "

Comedian Freddie Roman is the kind of standup comic who usually does a very short turn—say 10 minutes. The other night, preceding Tom Jones at the Concord in the Catskills, he stayed on for 25 minutes. After the show, somebody asked him how come.

"Well," said Freddie, "it took them that long to get Tom into his pants!"

And then at Bianchi & Margherita's, Rocky Graziano told about a boyhood chum who's a champion tightwad. "That guy," growled Rocky," has still got the first hubcap he ever stole!"

Senior citizens' cookout

To the Editor:

Our annual cookout for the elderly which was held at Hawthorn Park on Sunday, Aug. 17, was attended by 450 senior citizens. Our diligent workers comprised cooks, waitresses, bartenders, yard cleaners, potwashers, prize committee, Red Cross aides, policemen, bus drivers, car drivers, an 8-piece band, Garden City Square dancers, exotic dancers and the Annunciator Drum & Bugle Corp., which in total numbered a minimum of 160 people. The majority of them were volunteers who worked very hard to make this cookout a huge success.

We had the misfortune to lose one of our hardest workers, Joseph "Cy" Lechiaro, who passed away while preparing to come to work at the cookout.

Our menu consisted of steak, chicken, hamburgers, hot dogs, salad, corn, watermelon, cantaloupe, ice cream, cake, cookies, coffee, tonic, wine, and much "spirits." Everything was well cooked, well served and well consumed. I dare say that every single person that attended this time enjoyed it and went away very happy and content.

I would like to state that many people are under the impression that this is a City-sponsored affair and would like them informed that it is not City-sponsored. Our workers do not get much recognition (which they so highly deserve) due to the fact that we do not have a public-relations staff.

In closing, we of the committee wish to express our heartfelt thanks for the assistance people have given us in making this such a great success.

Stop business encroachment

To the Editor:

A vote of thanks to Sacred Heart Church for helping us to stop the expansion of business parking into the residential areas adjacent to Newton Centre. We are becoming increasingly aware of the role parking plays in promoting business encroachment on this residential area.

As concerned residents we appreciate the church's speedy and positive response to our appeal to withdraw its recent petition before the Newton Board of Aldermen. The petition would have allowed the use of part of the church's parking lot as a facility for a limited number of business employees. Although such arrangements with nearby churches have been considered over an extended period of time, the bordering residents were alerted only at the last minute. Without the Sacred Heart office's good-neighborly consideration this important change might have taken place without proper attention to our interests.

As a group of involved citizens we are open to suggestions and assistance from residents who are concerned about the encroachment of businesses into the residential areas of Newton.

Bullwinkle supports acquisition of ice rink

(The following letter was received from Ald. Richard Bullwinkle.)

Dear Mayor Mann:

I stand ready to strongly support legislatively and personally the City of Newton's efforts to acquire the skating facility at the Charles River Skating Rink.

Your efforts to convince MDC Commissioner Snedeker of the recreation gap for Newton's citizens in this area is admirable.

As our earlier efforts to acquire the rink as a wholly owned city operation have seemed to flounder on the rocks of economics, may I suggest that the ultimate choice of acquisition can come from a wide spectrum of alternatives.

Some might be:

1. The MDC acquire the property and lease it to the City of Newton (at a nominal fee). The City of Newton would control it under a Skating Authority headed by the recreation commissioner.

2. Private and public funds be raised to purchase the facility outright (it has been done in many communities) under the same control as mentioned above.

3. The MDC acquire the property and leave it to a regional skating authority (consisting of, say, Newton, Needham, and Nellesley). The skating authority would be selected by the communities represented.

4. The MDC acquire and manage the rink as it does in other communities now.

The fact that the City of Newton pays in excess of $1 million (FY76) is a strong incentive to get a tax service for a tax dollar. At present Newton does not have a rink or pool managed by the MDC in its confines. This is not meant to be critical but rather a factual statement.

I would opt for choice No. 1 above because the need for such a facility is clearly demonstrated with over 600 youths in the Newton Youth Hockey programs, two high school teams, junior high school teams, and the general public. In addition, figure skating is in demand at reasonable prices in the city.

The Newton Recreation Commission and the Newton Youth Hockey group have been in the forefront in reducing the gap in Newton's recreational needs.

In acceding to your wish for a spirit of cooperation, I once again strongly advocate the need for such a facility and I stand at your service to help in the acquisition.

Board of Aldermen

Hospital graduates 12 in medical technology

Newton-Wellesley Hospital's School of Medical Technology graduated 12 students Aug. 18 in ceremonies held at the hospital. The students have now completed a one-year internship program and simultaneously received their B.S. degrees in medical technology from their respective colleges.

The School of Medical Technology requires three years of college or a bachelor's degree for admission, and a year of college credit is given for successfully completing the internship program.

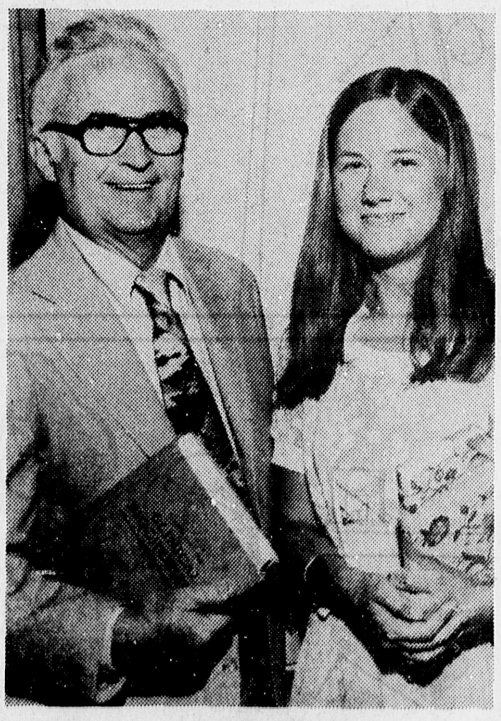

Approved by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists (ASCP), the school awarded certificates and pins to the 12 graduates. In addition, two outstanding students were given special awards for their progress during the past year. Donna Geneva, of Lawrence, was judged the top student academically, and Maria Pena, of West Roxbury, was considered the student who had shown the most improvement over the year.

The students received 600 hours in lecture presentations and spent nearly 1,300 hours rotating through each of the eight departments in the hospital's laboratory during their 12 months at Newton-Wellesley. The graduates took the National Registry Examination given by the ASCP August 15.

Four of the graduates will return to work in the Newton-Wellesley laboratory. They are: Miss Geneva; Joan Hutchinson, East Longmeadow; Miss Pena, and Mary Ann Sterite, Boston.

The other graduates are: Franklin; Victoria Scannell, Brighton; Christine Strycharz, Chicopee; Joan Sundblad, Marion; and Ann White, Avon.

Diane Bednarz, Uxbridge; Rachel Bradford, Falmouth, Maine; Janet Marquis, West Springfield; Carol Messere,

Top student

Donna Geneva was judged the top student among the 12 graduates. At graduation ceremonies, Dr. John H. Meeker, chief pathologist and director of the school presented an award to here. She, in turn, presented Meeker with the graduating class, gift, a book for the school's library

That opinion was supported by the results of recent audits by the federal Department of Health, Education and Welfare which showed the Bay State record of over-payments and errors in disbursing benefits to be the worst in the entire nation.

This is not the fault of either Governor Michael S. Dukakis or Secretary of Human Services Lucy Benson. They inherited the situation from the administration of ex-Governor Francis W. Sargent who reportedly would like to stand for the Governorship again in 1978.

But whatever criticism may be directed at ex-Governor Sargent and the welfare director he imported from out of state, the hard fact is that Governor Dukakis and Mrs. Benson have not taken any effective steps to clean up the sorry welfare mess.

Dukakis and Mrs. Benson have held their positions for almost eight months, and there is not the slightest shred of evidence that there are any fewer cheats and chiselrs on the welfare rolls than when they took office last January.

Governor Dukakis confidently promised the people of Massachusetts they would have the best-managed state in the Union under his direction. To date the Governor has been long on promise and short on performance.

The administration of the state's welfare department was a disgrace under Sargent. It's still a disgrace under Dukakis.

While the state is confronted with a financial crisis of monstrous proportions, its welfare system is the most liberal in the country. People have been coming here from other states during the past several years to go on the welfare rolls.

But the most serious aspect to our haphazardly administered welfare setup has been that people, who don't need public assistance from the welfare agency and are not entitled to it under the law, have been getting it dishonestly.

The most flagrant fraud continues year after year in the state welfare department. Little is done to stamp it out or to weed out the crooks and cheats and chiselers.

People making $20,000 a year have applied for welfare assistance and have been paid it. Employees in the welfare department allegedly have put themselves and their friends on the welfare lists.

Blatant theft of public funds and it certainly is tantamount to stealing money from the public till is one of the principal reasons the people of Massachusetts are the most heavily taxed in the United States.

That was true under Francis Sargent, and it's true under Dukakis who in his advance billing was to be the best Governor Massachusetts ever had.

Federal figures in Washington showed that Massachusetts had the third highest welfare expenditures among the 50 states. It was topped only by California and New York State.

But Massachusetts does not have the third highest population among the 50 states.

There is no way Michael Dukakis, Lucy Benson, Francis Sargent or anyone else can justify the expenditure of more welfare funds by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts than by more populous states such as Pennsylvania, Illinois and Ohio.

The reason, in plain language, is that we have been getting our pockets picked by crooks who have been collecting welfare to which they are not entitled.

This could be the main issue against Governor Dukakis, when he next stands for reelection.

Much is written on minorities but:

How is the majority, white doing?

Analysis by Gus Tyler

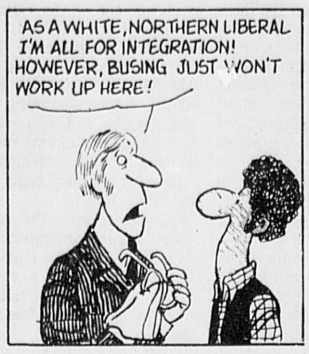

NEW YORK — How well are America's minorities doing economically?

A current report by the United States Commission on Civil Rights (July 1975) tells the story in 24 statistical tables. But the conclusions you reach depend very much on how you read the facts.

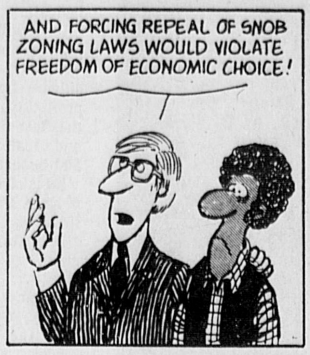

For instance, in comparing the median income of white and nonwhite families, the Report finds that "the dollar gap between the two groups has increased from $3,014 to $4,443 (in 1972 dollars)" in the years between 1954 and 1972.

The impression from this finding is that nonwhites are not making much progress or that, if they are moving ahead, they are not moving as rapidly as the whites.

But neither of these impressions would be correct. White family income in 1954 was $6,771; it rose by 1972 to $11,549 — an increase of 72 per cent. Nonwhite family income rose in the same period from $3,757 to $7,016 — an increase of 92 per cent. Hence, nonwhite family income has been rising more rapidly than white family income.

The Report offers further proof of this in still another one of its tables. In 1954, the nonwhite family had an income that was only 56 per cent of the white family; by 1972, the former had an income that was 62 per cent of the latter. This is slow movement — a catch-up of six percentage points in 18 years — but clearly nonwhites are moving up economically more rapidly than whites.

Because whites started so far ahead, even though their income rose at a slower pace, the amount was larger. To match dollar for dollar with the 72 per cent white increase would have required a jump of 130 per cent in nonwhite income.

Another for instance: The report says "in the critical professional occupations of dentist, physician and university teacher, the proportion of blacks relative to all persons in these occupations has declined, while in many other critical occupations proportionate gains have been minimal." Again, the report gives a negative impression. Yet the tables reveal that black dentists increased from 2,300 to 2,400 from 1960 to 1970, black physicians from 5,000 to 6,009 and black university teachers from 6,000 to 16,300. But because these have been rapidly expanding professions, the "percentages" of blacks have fallen — in all cases by less than three-tenths of 1 per cent.

Meanwhile the numbers of blacks in other professions has risen dramatically both absolutely and relatively. Social and recreation workers from 13,800 to 41,100, from 10 percent of the profession to 15 per cent; registered nurses from 32,800 to 65,200, from 5.6 to 7.8 per cent of the profession; actors from 3.5 to 6.7 per cent; accountants from 3,600 to 16,200, from less than 1 per cent to almost 2.5 per cent of the trade.

Taken in all, the number of blacks in professional and technical occupations has risen from less than 300,000 (228,100) to more than twice that number (616,300), from 3.7 to 5.4 per cent of the category.

While blacks have good reason to reach out for more of their race in the professions, to deny the progress that has been made is to belittle black ability and to discourage future efforts to make ours a nation of equal opportunity.

Just because Nixon's presidential act bombed is that any reason to keep him out of show biz?

Commentary by Virginia Payette

It's time, I think, to say a few kind words in defense of Richard Nixon. TV star Nixon, that is. So his presidential act bombed. Is that any reason to keep him out of show biz forever?

Besides, aren't they always telling us retired executives even those forced into early retirement should find themselves a second career?

And, since it's not likely Mr. Nixon's going to take up whittling San Clemente driftwood, the obvious choice is to spend his sunset years picking up a few bucks via the memoirs bit.

They've all done it. Truman . . . Eisenhower . . . Johnson. Even Johnson's Lady Bird. Not to mention an assortment of White House chefs, nannies, confidential secretaries, butlers, kennel keepers, wives, sons and daughters, bosom buddies, mistresses, etc. etc. etc.

The results weren't always best-sellers. None was ever snapped up by Hollywood. But they all looked impressive on coffee talbles and maybe even a few scholarly types even read them.

Mr. Nixon is going the same route. But he's tossed in a zinger: he's sold himself as a TV package to David Frost for a series of post-election specials. The price is a secret; all anybody will say is that it's "not quite" a million.

Well. This was all Mr. Nixon's enemies needed.

Out came the big guns, aimed uprighteously against "executive privilege being for sale to the highest bidder" . . "checkbook journalism at its criminal worst" . . . and the "international consortium of braodcasting" that smacked to some as "the muffled clang of laundered money."

Liberals fumed that, if he has decided the time has come to "tell all" about Watergate, the "appropriate forum" would be a congressional committee or a federal grand jury.

Come on. Do they really think Mr. Nixon is going to sit down with David Frost and say anything his critics really want to hear? Or that Frost, who is the most unctuous of fawning talk-show hosts, is going to nail him to the wall with anything but the most timid questions?

Nixon-watchers should know better. He is the only president in history to be run out of the oval office on a rail and, pardon or no pardon he's not about to blurt out anything that would further damage his image in the annals of time. What's really bugging them, most likely, is the fact that he's getting all that money for not saying anything. "Checkbook journalism" has nothing to do with it. Presidential reminiscences have always been for sale and no former Chief Executive has yet to admit he ever goofed in the official performance of his duties. Mr. Nixon has the same privilege, and if he can find somebody willing to pay up for whatever he's willing to remember out loud, why not? Ironically, after all those years of sworn enmity with "the media," he has picked it to present his case to the American public. There's no law that says he can't. There's also no law that says the anti-Nixon forces have to watch. Every TV set comes equipped with this little knob, see, and all they have to do is walk over and . . .

One case of bureaucratic reform in the Bay State

Analysis by David M. Rosen, UPI state house reporter

BOSTON (UPI) — Examples of effective bureaucratic reform in Massachusetts state government are few and far between, but one seems to be emerging at the Department of Public Utilities.

Earlier this year, Gov. Michael S. Dukakis filed legislation to abolish the sixmember, part-time Public Utilities Commission and replace it with a three-member, full-time board.

The bill was passed by the legislature and signed by Dukakis March 7. The new commissioners were named March 31.

Harold Keohane, a former assistant state attorney general, was named chairman of the new commission. The other two members are Eunice Howe, a Republican and member of the old commission, and Reginald Lindsey, an attorney.

The appointments came at a very important time for consumers. The new commission must act on about $350 million in utility rate increase requests and at the same time review the state's electric rate structure.

The decisions reached in the rate cases will have an immediate impact on the pocketbooks of millions of consumers. The conclusions reached in the electric study will have major long term impact on consumers, businesses and industries.

The new commissioners have been taking their job seriously. Since taking office, they have been doing the fulltime job they are being paid to do. They have sought maximum consumer input by conducting local and evening hearings on occasion.

In addition, the new commission has established good working relationships with the attorney general's office and the state Consumers Council. With the help of these agencies, the DPU has been closely scrutinizing utility rate filings.

While there have not been any immediately startling results, the new commission has made some decisions that have saved consumers money.

Just this month, for example, the DPU saved customers of three electric companies nearly $500,000 by disallowing inclusion of a non-fuel item in the company's fuel adjustment clauses.

The item, called a "capability response charge," is a fee paid by an electric company to the New England Power Pool if the company's reserve generating capacity does not meet NEPOOL requirements. The fee is credited by NEPOOL to the accounts of companies that provide extra reserve capacity to protect companies that are deficient.

Three electric companies — Boston Edison, Brockton Edison and Fall River Electric Light — tried to include a total of $457,538 in capability response charges in their August fuel adjustment clauses.

In the past, these clauses have been rubber stamped by the DPU. But this month the attorney general's office argued that the capability charge was for generating capacity, not fuel, and therefore did not belong in a fuel and purchased power charge.

The DPU agreed and knocked the money out of the company's fuel adjustment clause for August.

The amount of the savings to each individual consumer as a result of this DPU action will be small. But it shows an alertness and willingness to work which could result in larger savings if the same procedure is used in some large pending rate cases.

Lotta nonsense

By Norton Mockridge

NEW YORK — Lotta li'l nonsense today? Okay? All right, here we go:

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Seligman of Poughkeepsie, N.Y., eager to keep up with the times, are changing their name to Seligperson!

A spry 80-year-old man walked up to one of the new Biorhythm computers in Los Angeles, which chart your physical, mental and emotional state after being notified of your birthdate. The old fellow informed the computer that he'd been born in 1895.

Nothing happened.

"I'm sorry, sir," said the female attendant, "but the Biorhythm computer is programmed only as far back as 1900."

"Great," said the oldster. "Tell it I was born in 1900. I'd love to be 75 again!"

Speaking of oldsters, an elderly couple I know took their first trip to Las Vegas and the first thing the husband did was to walk up to a slot machine in their hotel and drop in a silver dollar.

POW, he hit the jackpot—lights flashed, wheels spun, there was a frightening clanking noise, and dollars came pouring out.

"Let's get OUT of here!" cried his wife. "I knew if you touched that thing you'd break it!"

Morton Cooper, author of "The Queen," Bantam's new best-seller, called a family he knows to find out how they'd liked their move from a city apartment to a suburban house. He got the little daughter on the phone and chatted with her.

"How do you like living out there?" he asked.

"Oh, it's super!" cried the little girl, "Now I have my own room. And my brother has his own room. But poor Mommy — she's still stuck in there with Daddy!"

Kids, of course, do come up with the darndest things. A mother I know bought some of that soda pop that swears there's only one calorie in each bottle. The mother poured two glasses of the stuff and handed one to her daughter.

"I wonder," said the kid, squinting suspiciously, "which glass has the calorie in it!"

My friend, Sheldon Gorlick, can't figure out the logic of those posters put up by the American Hospital Assn. in connection with its 74th annual convention in Chicago. The poster says: "Let's Hear It For The Hospital."

"Aren't those the very same people," asks Sheldon, "who put up all those signs demanding 'SILENCE?' "

Comedian Freddie Roman is the kind of standup comic who usually does a very short turn—say 10 minutes. The other night, preceding Tom Jones at the Concord in the Catskills, he stayed on for 25 minutes. After the show, somebody asked him how come.

"Well," said Freddie, "it took them that long to get Tom into his pants!"

And then at Bianchi & Margherita's, Rocky Graziano told about a boyhood chum who's a champion tightwad. "That guy," growled Rocky," has still got the first hubcap he ever stole!"

Senior citizens' cookout

To the Editor:

Our annual cookout for the elderly which was held at Hawthorn Park on Sunday, Aug. 17, was attended by 450 senior citizens. Our diligent workers comprised cooks, waitresses, bartenders, yard cleaners, potwashers, prize committee, Red Cross aides, policemen, bus drivers, car drivers, an 8-piece band, Garden City Square dancers, exotic dancers and the Annunciator Drum & Bugle Corp., which in total numbered a minimum of 160 people. The majority of them were volunteers who worked very hard to make this cookout a huge success.

We had the misfortune to lose one of our hardest workers, Joseph "Cy" Lechiaro, who passed away while preparing to come to work at the cookout.

Our menu consisted of steak, chicken, hamburgers, hot dogs, salad, corn, watermelon, cantaloupe, ice cream, cake, cookies, coffee, tonic, wine, and much "spirits." Everything was well cooked, well served and well consumed. I dare say that every single person that attended this time enjoyed it and went away very happy and content.

I would like to state that many people are under the impression that this is a City-sponsored affair and would like them informed that it is not City-sponsored. Our workers do not get much recognition (which they so highly deserve) due to the fact that we do not have a public-relations staff.

In closing, we of the committee wish to express our heartfelt thanks for the assistance people have given us in making this such a great success.

Thanks from the Committee. Nonantum Childrens Christmas Party Association, Anthony "Fat" Pellegrini, Chairman.

Stop business encroachment

To the Editor:

A vote of thanks to Sacred Heart Church for helping us to stop the expansion of business parking into the residential areas adjacent to Newton Centre. We are becoming increasingly aware of the role parking plays in promoting business encroachment on this residential area.

As concerned residents we appreciate the church's speedy and positive response to our appeal to withdraw its recent petition before the Newton Board of Aldermen. The petition would have allowed the use of part of the church's parking lot as a facility for a limited number of business employees. Although such arrangements with nearby churches have been considered over an extended period of time, the bordering residents were alerted only at the last minute. Without the Sacred Heart office's good-neighborly consideration this important change might have taken place without proper attention to our interests.

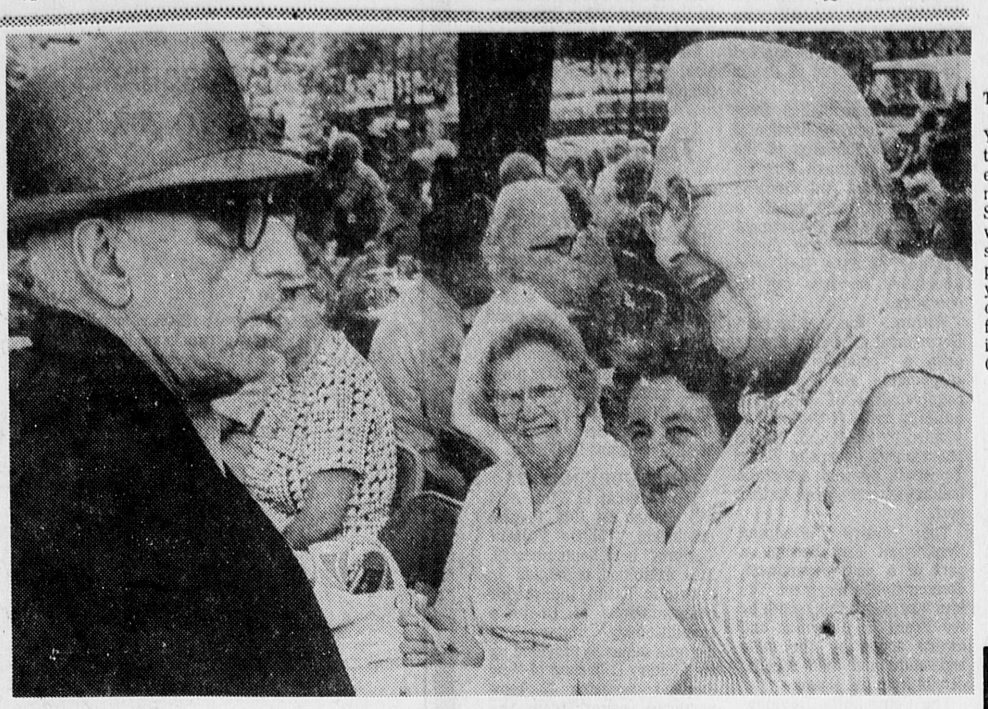

As a group of involved citizens we are open to suggestions and assistance from residents who are concerned about the encroachment of businesses into the residential areas of Newton.

Bullwinkle supports acquisition of ice rink

(The following letter was received from Ald. Richard Bullwinkle.)

Dear Mayor Mann:

I stand ready to strongly support legislatively and personally the City of Newton's efforts to acquire the skating facility at the Charles River Skating Rink.

Your efforts to convince MDC Commissioner Snedeker of the recreation gap for Newton's citizens in this area is admirable.

As our earlier efforts to acquire the rink as a wholly owned city operation have seemed to flounder on the rocks of economics, may I suggest that the ultimate choice of acquisition can come from a wide spectrum of alternatives.

Some might be:

1. The MDC acquire the property and lease it to the City of Newton (at a nominal fee). The City of Newton would control it under a Skating Authority headed by the recreation commissioner.

2. Private and public funds be raised to purchase the facility outright (it has been done in many communities) under the same control as mentioned above.

3. The MDC acquire the property and leave it to a regional skating authority (consisting of, say, Newton, Needham, and Nellesley). The skating authority would be selected by the communities represented.

4. The MDC acquire and manage the rink as it does in other communities now.

The fact that the City of Newton pays in excess of $1 million (FY76) is a strong incentive to get a tax service for a tax dollar. At present Newton does not have a rink or pool managed by the MDC in its confines. This is not meant to be critical but rather a factual statement.

I would opt for choice No. 1 above because the need for such a facility is clearly demonstrated with over 600 youths in the Newton Youth Hockey programs, two high school teams, junior high school teams, and the general public. In addition, figure skating is in demand at reasonable prices in the city.

The Newton Recreation Commission and the Newton Youth Hockey group have been in the forefront in reducing the gap in Newton's recreational needs.

In acceding to your wish for a spirit of cooperation, I once again strongly advocate the need for such a facility and I stand at your service to help in the acquisition.

Hospital graduates 12 in medical technology

Newton-Wellesley Hospital's School of Medical Technology graduated 12 students Aug. 18 in ceremonies held at the hospital. The students have now completed a one-year internship program and simultaneously received their B.S. degrees in medical technology from their respective colleges.

The School of Medical Technology requires three years of college or a bachelor's degree for admission, and a year of college credit is given for successfully completing the internship program.

Approved by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists (ASCP), the school awarded certificates and pins to the 12 graduates. In addition, two outstanding students were given special awards for their progress during the past year. Donna Geneva, of Lawrence, was judged the top student academically, and Maria Pena, of West Roxbury, was considered the student who had shown the most improvement over the year.

The students received 600 hours in lecture presentations and spent nearly 1,300 hours rotating through each of the eight departments in the hospital's laboratory during their 12 months at Newton-Wellesley. The graduates took the National Registry Examination given by the ASCP August 15.

Four of the graduates will return to work in the Newton-Wellesley laboratory. They are: Miss Geneva; Joan Hutchinson, East Longmeadow; Miss Pena, and Mary Ann Sterite, Boston.

The other graduates are: Franklin; Victoria Scannell, Brighton; Christine Strycharz, Chicopee; Joan Sundblad, Marion; and Ann White, Avon.

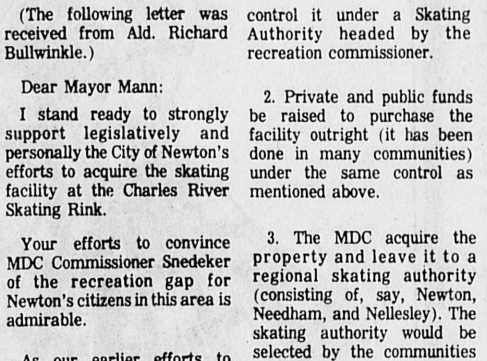

Diane Bednarz, Uxbridge; Rachel Bradford, Falmouth, Maine; Janet Marquis, West Springfield; Carol Messere,

Top student

Donna Geneva was judged the top student among the 12 graduates. At graduation ceremonies, Dr. John H. Meeker, chief pathologist and director of the school presented an award to here. She, in turn, presented Meeker with the graduating class, gift, a book for the school's library

Mayor submits new plan of departmental reorganization

Still another version of Mayor Theodore Mann's reorganization plan for some of the municipal operating departments has been submitted to the Board of Aldermen.

This time the reorganization encompasses only the Public Works Department, with recommendations for reorganization of the Recreation Department and the Building, Planning, and Purchasing Departments submitted for later approval by the Board.

The main purpose of the mayor's reorganization is to put within the new position of commissioner of public works the power of hiring and firing, which now lies within the three top positions in the Street, Water, and Engineering Departments.

The new proposal does not spell out the need for division heads for each of the divisions, as did the previous plan denied by the Board of Aldermen earlier this year.

Instead, the new proposal calls for such internal divisions and such staff for the divisions as the commissioner of public works shall determine.

In the plan is a definition of functions to be performed by the new department of public works, including all tree and ground maintenance. The position of trained arborist, landscape architect or forester is specifically demanded to head up the division.

Other functions called for are highway and sanitation maintenance, water and sewer maintenance, equipment and vehicle maintenance, and engineering.

This plan, as did the others, calls for the Recreation Department to deal only with program and let all construction and maintenance of recreation facilities be handled by the Department of Public Works.

The recommendation from the mayor for consolidation of someiof the functions of the Building Department, Purchas ng Department and Planning Department would create a Central Services Department responsible for the maintenance of City Hall and necessary services for its operation.

Within the Planning Department will be, in Mann's plan, a "building official," responsible for enforcing requirements of the state building code. If the plan is adopted by the Board, Mayor Mann in ends to appoint Victor Taglienti, present assistant building commissioner, to that post.

The entire Planning Department may become a part of a new department, Community Development. The idea was passed this month by the Board of Aldermen and awaits action by the state legislature and then specific details from the Board.

The Community Development Department would be comprised of the Housing Authority Redevelopm' the Authority, the Planning ent Board and the Planning Department.

The mayor's reorganization plan for the Public Works Department becomes effective 90 days after the date it was submitted to the Board of Aldermen if no action is taken by the Board before that date. The deadline is Nov. 15.

The Board cannot modify the plan; it must accept or reject the plan.

Dr. McGinty to show doctors in U.S. how to see inside a joint

Dr. John B. McGinty, chief of orthopedics at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, has been asked to chair three courses on arthroscopy and arthrography of the knee for the American Academy of Orthopedic Surgeons. The sessions will be held in Chicago in November, Los Angeles in March and Boston in June.

Dr. McGinty organized and chaired a similar program in Boston last spring, and it was the overwhelming response to and success of this course that prompted the request for repeat sessions across the country. A faculty of 10 experts from this country and Canada are lecturers for the day and a half sessions.

Arthroscopy uses an instrument about the size of a ball-point pen to see inside a joint. The diagnostic procedure often shows that major surgery is not necessary, while in other cases the accuracy of diagnosis can be a considerable advantage to the surgeon should surgery be required.

As well as allowing the surgeon to see inside the joint, most commonly the knee, the arthroscope can also be used to take a biopsy and to remove loose bodies.

While the procedure has been available for several years, it has only recently come into more general use.

Part of the difficulty is inherent in teaching the procedure. Earlier this summer Dr. McGinty, an associate clinical professor at Tufts University School of Medicine, gave a paper on "Closed Circuit TV in Arthroscopy" before the International Arthroscopy Association meeting in conjuction with the International Society of Orthopedic Surgery and Traumatology in Copenhagen.

With a camera mounted on the arthroscope, an instructor surgeon can follow the procedure as performed by the student surgeon and give guidance accordingly.

CHARLESTOWN

On the exact waterfront site where the British regulars beached their boats to storm the hastily-built Bunker Hill bastions of the ragtag Yankee militia, is the newly built Bunker Hill Pavillion. It features the presentation, "The Whites of Their Eyes," a multimedia dramatic reenactment of the Battle of Bunker Hill. The Pavillion is situated adjacent to the U.S.S. Constitution. This Bicentennial attraction, along with the historic "Old Ironside" and Bunker Hill, make for a highly exciting visit to Charlestown.

WEST SPRINGFIELD

The Eastern State Horse Show will feature the rugged versatile Morgan horse during its September 17 through 21 show on Exposition Grounds in West Springfield. Indigeneous to New England, the breed goes back to colonial days. The original Massachusetts bred equine provided the Union with its best cavalry mounts. Until the coming of the automobile, the Morgan was the most popular harness horse in America. They were also used to handle cattle on ranches.

WORCESTER

This large Central Massachusetts city is proud of its many tourist attractions. They include the following: The John Woodman Higgins Armory Museum, an internationally renowned collection of 3,000 years of vital craftsmanship from primitive Stone Age weapons to modern iron and steel developments. It features the finest collection of medieval armour in the country. The Worcester Art Museum is considered one of the finest small art museums in the Country. Its permanent collection includes Egyptian, Oriental, Classical, Medieval, Renaissance and modern works of art. The Worcester Center is a unique world of shops and boutiques, two major department stores and a variety of restaurants. The Galleria, like its famous prototype in Milan, Italy, provides a magnificent air-conditioned 2-story shopping street, two city blocks long.

BEVERLY

On September 6, the city will feature the commemoration of the 200th Anniversary of the sailing of the schooner Hannah — making Beverly the birthplace of the U.S. Navy and George Washington's New England Fleet. The ceremonies will start at 10 a.m. at Independence Park and Glover's Wharf. Hannah Park at Hospital Point will be open to the public.

NEW BEDFORD

A big salty slice of seafaring New England awaits you in the Whaling Museum. It's greatest attraction is the square-rigged Whaler Lagoda. This accurate, half-scale replica welcomes thousands of visitors on her decks, sturdy and picturesque, like the whale hunters who manned the world's greatest whaling fleets. It also features many figureheads, carvings and other objects pertinent to whaling. The Whaling Museum is open daily year round.

Newton Metco program—elementary, junior, and senior high schools charged to outside students attending Newton schools.

The reason Newton asked for $225 less than the state allows is that most of the Metco students attend elementary schools, which are less expensive to operate than secondary schools. The tuition rates for 1975-76 are estimated as follows: $1,315 for elementary, $1,842 for junior high, and $1,956 for high school.

This year there will be 279 elementary students, 28 junior high students, and 43 senior high students.

In January the School Committee voted to ask for the lower reimbursement figure because it was a closer representation of the real costs for this yer, and in future years when most of the Metco students would be in secondary schools, Newton will receive reimbursements based on the higher costs for the secondary schools. If the average of the three tuition rates is used when most students are in grades 7-12, Newton would not be getting what it would be entitled to.

Superintendent Fink noted that school committees in the state have problems budgeting for the Metco program because the state decides on the Metco budget so late.

This year the Metco budget is $5.4 million, up $1 million from last year, but still not enough to reimburse communities that want to join the program this fall.

Fink said, "If the state wants to encourage the voluntary busing of students from the cities, it must provide a formula (for funding) that will not place a burden on communities" participating in the program.

With the uncertainty of the state economy, he said, "Now the problem is, can any community in the state even consider further expansion (of a program)? . . . It becomes impossible to plan for it in a budget."

School. She also served on the PTA Council and the Creative Arts Council.

Mrs. Davidow is a member of the board of the Oak Hill Improvement Association. She is also serving her second term as vice-chairperson of the Ward 8 Democratic Committee.

Mrs. Davidow has held a number of positions in service organizations, including the position of co-chairman of the United Boston Section of the National Council of Jewish Women and President of its evening group. She also served as vice-president of the Beth Israel Women's Auxiliary as well as its representative to the American Hospital Association. In addition, Mrs. Davidow was president of the Phi Delta Epsilon Medical Wives Organization.

She is a former member of the Legislative Advisory Committee to the Massachusetts Department of Education and presently serves on the steering committee of the Friends of Jewish Community Housing for the Elderly. She has worked as a volunteer for the Salvation Army and for the Girl's Detention Home of the Youth Service Board. Mrs. Davidow is a Friend of the Newton Free Library.

Tax hike—

bursement for Metco falls short, Small commented that Supt. of Schools Aaron Fink had said last Nov. 19 that there will be no additional Metco children accepted if there is not full funding from the state.

Much of the surplus — $1.5 million came from "turnbacks" from the various city departments, unspent funds in the previous budget.

The mayor's chief administrative officer, James Salter, explained that this year will be the last time such large amounts are turned back, since the form of the 1975-76 and future budgets will prevent the double-budgeting that used to account for overappropriation and subsequent unspent funds.

Small expects the FinCom to spend a good part of September wrestling with the city's finances, but hopes that the Board of Aldermen will take its vote in time for tax bills to be sent out by Oct. 1 so that the city will not have to do any short-term borrowing.

Budge—

the past, reorganization plans for these departments have been turned down, Budge feels that the plan recently filed by the administration should be studied and seriously considered by the Board of Alderman.

Budge is particularly concerned with the need for better public transportation within the city and the necessity for a study to be made to determine the overall needs in the city library system. He is opposed to the closing of elementary neighborhood schools where there is an adverse impact on the area served by the school and he would encourage the School Committee to study the feasibility of school closings at the junior high school level in view of our declining enrollment b[illegible] if substantial savings can be achieved.

Budge feels that from his past and present experience with local community groups, he can evaluate the various factors involved in the many issues facing the city, and as an alderman, he would vote in a manner consistent with the best interests of the persons most immediately affected but also with consideration for the overall benefits to the city as a whole.

Grand jury set for Hoffa disappearance

DETROIT (UPI) — A federal grand jury will begin an investigation next week into the disappearance of former Teamsters union czar James Hoffa in what federal officials say may be a last-ditch effort to solve the month-old mystery.

Among the first of 70 witnesses to be called is Charles "Chuckie" O'Brien, a onetime Hoffa bodyguard and self-described foster son of the 62-year-old union leeader, sources disclosed Tuesday.

O'Brien has been a central figure in the mystery since Hoffa dropped from sight July 30. FBI agents have questioned O'Brien twice about his whereabouts just before and after Hoffa disappeared.

Hoffa's family once challenged O'Brien to take a lie detector test because he "knows something." O'Brien refused.

One federal source described the grand jury investigation as a last-ditch attempt to learn how and why Hoffa vanished.

Robert Ozer, head of the government's Organized Crime Strike Force office in Detroit, said the grand jury was expected to sit for several weeks.

Ozer said of O'Brien, "This man ... has raised many more questions than he's answered in his sessions with the FBI."

Among others the grand jury is expected to summon is Anthony "Tony Jacks" Giacalone, a reputed Mafia kingpin and one of three men Hoffa told his family he was meeting for lunch at the suburban Bloomfield Township restaurant the day he disappeared. Giacalone has denied such a meeting was planned.

Federal sources said other expected witnesses include Joseph Bane, president of Teamsters Local 614 in Pontiac, Mich., the local closest to Hoffa's summer home, and Louis Linteau and Cynthia Green, Hoffa friends and owners of an airport limousine service.

Bane was one of the first persons the Hoffa family called the day Hoffa vanished. Linteau, under the influence of a drug which induces lack of inhibition, told a psychiatrist Aug. 1 he knew Hoffa was to meet Giacalone that day.

U.S. Attorney Ralph Guy said the grand jury will begin taking testimony Tuesday, not to return indictments but to provide investigators with "additional leads."

HAIR RAISING

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Malpractice suits are not only a problem for physicians. Now they threaten to get into the hair of barbers and beauticians.

So, a major insurance company here is offering a special policy covering almost all hair styling services. The new policy protects barbers and beauticians from malpractice claims arising from hair styling, shampooing, cutting and trimming, hair removal, tinting, coloring and bleaching, manicures and pedicures.

The Fireman's Fund American Insurance Company policy also covers work done during hair stylists' house calls, wigs that are damaged while in the insured's custody and liability protection against customers' slips and falls.

Striking wildcatters fight for right-to-strike concessions

CHARLESTON, W.Va. (UPI) — A walkout by 40,000 Appalachian coal miners is beginning to put a financial squeeze on some families but has not stopped the wildcat strikers' fight for "right to strike" concessions in their contracts.

Industry officials estimate the strike, which began Aug. 11, has cut 2.2 million tons from the nation's weekly production of 11 million to 12 million tons.

It also has cost the miners $11.9 million in salaries.

"They're saying that by Wednesday the whole nation will be out," said Alvin Clay, 23, of Bechley, W.Va. "I guess that's what's going to happen.

"It's pretty rough, especially on people with larger families. Here it is school time and clothes to buy for the kids. Some will be able to eat out of their gardens, but that doesn't pay the bills."

The walkout began in Logan County, W. Va., in protest at the firing of a United Mine Workers official. It spread with the jailing of another officer.

But as coal operators sought injunctions to end the walkout, the protest hardened and grew over a demand by strikers that a "right to strike" clause be inserted in the 1974 union contract, which runs until December, 1977.

The UMW leadership said legally it could not reopen contract talks. The Bituminous Coal Operators Association's president, Joseph Brenna, also said his group had no intention to do so.

The strike, conducted in defiance of court orders and the UMW leadership, spread from West Virginia to Ohio, Virginia, Kentucky and Alabama, with rippling effects on related industries.

The Chessie System railroad announced widespread layoffs because of a drop in coal car loadings.

A federal judge's fining Wednesday of four more striking miners $500 each for defying his back-to-work order had no apparent effect on the walkout.

Another rally of dissidents was planned today in Boone County, one of the state's largest coal-producing areas.

A UMW spokesman in Washington, who refused to be identified, indicated members were "fed up with the use of courts in labor disputes.

"They are tired of being hauled before judges every time there is a labor dispute," he said. "The courts are being used as a club over the miners' heads and the men are fed up with it. When they say 'right to strike,' it means not having the courts on their back."

In Washington, a spokesman for the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service said it was unlikely the government would intervene because "the matter is already before the courts."

GOP campaign head says nix on Nixon

BOSTON (UPI) — The chairman of the Republican National Committee's Organizational Task Force says even though "Watergate is behind us," it wouldn't be wise to let Richar Nixon back into the GOP limelight.

"We welcome help from anyone, but I would rather not see him involved in the next campaign and I would definitely not welcome his help," Richard Rosenbaum said Tuesday.

Rosenbaum, who also chairs New York's state GOP and the Northeast States' Republican Chairmen's Association, flatly predicted the Ford-Rockefeller ticket would be nominated and elected next year.

"In fact, any ticket other than Ford-Rockefeller will have a great deal of difficulty winning," he insisted.

He denounced talk of dumping Vice President Nelson Rockefeller from the 1976 party ticket, and minimized the threat of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan's expected presidential candidacy.

"While this doesn't presuppose the President will get the nomination," he told reporters, "I would predict Ford will be the nominee, and Rockefeller his choice for vice president."

The eight-member National Task Force, which Rosenbaum chairs, was appointed by GOP National Chairman Mary Louise Smith to draw plans to strengthen the party and improve links between the national and state committees.

Rosenbaum, here to begin cranking up the Northeastern state's GOP machines for the upcoming presidential campaign, said he felt no need for a Committee to Re-elect the President in 1976, unless Reagan becomes a primary threat.

"If that situation would occur, I suppose he'll (Ford) will have to set up something," said Rosembaum.

He called the possibility of John Connally getting the vice presidential nod "far fetched," and hinted former GOP National Chairman George Bush, now U.S. Ambassador to China, would be the only possible substitute for Rockefeller.

Men: show your true colors

What's your favorite color?

Red? Watch it! Psychologists have found that men who like bright reds and oranges tend to be vibrant and rather impulsive. These people display an interest in the outside world and often times are extraverted and highly emotional.

Such was the information gleaned at a recent Men's Fashion Association Fall '75 preview when we chatted with blonde, blue-eyed George Drucker, spokesman for Jaymar-Ruby, the nation's largest manufacturer of men's quality slacks and sportswear.

"Greens and blues represent coolness," smiled George who admitted a fondness for blues, "studies have shown that men who like cool colors have a more detached attitude towards life. They are apt to be introspective, deliberate and more attracted to their own inner existence than to outside distractions.

"Would you believe," he asked, "that when a person looks at the color red it has certain effects on his nervous system, and that it can cause the muscles to tense? Bright colors actually make the heart beat a little faster!" In a lighter vein he adds, "The man in the grey flannel suit has discovered the perfect color for any business situation . . . this is an emotionless color, so, if you don't want the other person to know what you're really like, wear gray.

"One of the leisure suits in our fall line is a gray flannel and it's designed for office hours. Detailing for these suits will include such features as back pleats, yokes, stitching and pocket treatments. The outfits will also be shown as separates and trios, with coordinating slacks, sweaters, turtlenecks and shirts.

According to Burton B. Ruby, president of Jaymar-Ruby, the trends for men's clothing this coming season are very subtle. The interplay of colors, yarn textures and detail work in leisure suits and slacks are the feature concepts to look for. The European influence in silhouettes will continue to be prevalent.

Important fabrics for fall include corduroy, gabardines, flannels, velvets and texturized woven polyesters. Wool-polyester and wool-nylon blends will give the leisure suit a respectable and sophisticated appearance. Another major factor in fall fabrications is the use of brushed sueded or sanded effects which will give clothing a polished, glazed look.

"Most men who want a basic wardrobe will settle for the earth tones," said Drucker, "with rusts, browns and beiges as their core colors. It's very easy to accessorize these natural colors which seem to flatter all complexions. The younger man will probably show an interest in the new cadet blues and a very new yellowed green along with bottle green, whereas all the grays and pewter colors will compliment tweeds and heathered effects. Watch for navy blue as well as black being important fall through winter."

Patterns will continue to be small. Little checks such as in tattersall and houndstooth patterns continue to be standbys along with coverts, steep twills, barleycorns and other tiny patterns. Any slight fabric effect, whether rib, twill or cord will help a fabric stand out without it being overbearing.

A new family of more subdued tweeds, as well as shetlands and cheviots, will make their bow in U.S. fashion this fall and will be equally at home in the city as in the country.

Balancing the wearing of tweeds for business will be a new sophisticated "town look" found in a host of very important stripes, interesting solid shades, self-patterns and dressy dark shades that whisper elegance.

In sport shirts there will be a tremendous variety of printed patterns on both woven and knitted fabrics. Just name the idea, the theme or the color and you're apt to find several versions of it in the new prints.

Blonde, slim-hipped George Drucker patted his beltline and added, "We have one style that has tremendous appeal for the middle-aged man, it's the elastic pattened waistband inside our gentleman's jean. This is the perfect jean for Saturdays and Sundays at home. All in all," he added, "the key word for fall '75 men's fashions is 'quiet'. About 60 per cent of all the fabrics used for the coming season will be solid, heather or fancy-plain."

If you're curious about your own reaction to colors, the following is a rule of thumb regarding personality and the colors of the spectrum:

Red — impulsive and emotional.
Orange — convivial and warm.
Yellow — alert and intelligent.
Green — tranquil and free from anxiety.
Blue — sedate, able to control emotions.
Violet — indicative of artistic talents.

Question: Back in one of the January papers, there was a recipe for Vegetable Clam Chowder. I made it once and really enjoyed it. Somehow, though, I've lost the recipe. I'd like a copy of that recipe if possible. Thank you for your help. I've really enjoyed many of the recipes that are printed in your column. uR Mrs. Warren Kulberg, Needham Answer: Sorry to take so long in answering your request, here is your chowder recipe — enjoy!

VEGETABLE CLAM CHOWDER

1 large potato, peeled and diced in ½ inch cubes
1 onion, chopped
2 stalks celery, finely chopped
2 carrots, finely chopped
¼ cup finely minced parsley
1 bay leaf
⅛ tsp. EACH whole basil and pepper
1 can condensed chicken broth
1 cup water
1 teaspoon salt
1 can (1 lb.) tomatoes, pureed
2 tablespoons EACH butter and flour
2 cans (10 oz. ea.) whole baby clams

Combine potatoes, onion, celery, carrots, chicken broth, water, salt and tomatoes. Cover and boil . . . simmer for 10 minutes. In small pan heat butter; blend in flour, stirring and cooking for 1 minute. Gradually stir in ½ cup liquid from vegetables. Stir this sauce into soup and add clams and liquid. Bring to a boil and serve piping hot.

Question: For the first time in our lives, my husband and I have succeeded in planting a fairly large garden and our harvest is beyond our wildest dreams. We put in several kinds of lettuce, including the iceberg variety, and I am looking for some interesting recipes. Thank you.
M.M. and H.M., Canton

Answer: Lucky you! Here are two good iceberg lettuce recipes for your pleasure:

SOUR CREAM DIP IN LETTUCE BOWL

1 head iceberg lettuce
1 cup dairy sour cream
½ cup real mayonnaise
4 hard-cooked eggs, diced
¼ cup finely chopped scallions or green onions
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon dry mustard
¼ teaspoon Tabasco, optional
2 tablespoons chili sauce
Assorted crackers, potato and corn chips

Core, rinse and thoroughly drain lettuce; chill in disposable plastic bag or plastic crisper. Combine ingredients, except crackers and chips, in bowl. Chill 24 hours or longer (dip thickens on standing). At serving time, hollow out lettuce head to fit bowl of dip and place on serving tray. Surround with assorted crackers and chips. Makes 2 cups dip.

BLUE CHEESE-STUFFED LETTUCE WEDGES

1 large head iceberg lettuce
1 pkg. (8 oz.) cream cheese, at room temperature
4 oz. blue cheese
2 to 3 tablespoons light cream
Crackers
Pimiento strips

Core and rinse lettuce, drain thoroughly; refrigerate in disposable plastic bag or plastic crisper. Blend together cream cheese, blue cheese and cream. Cut lettuce in half and remove center section. Pack each half with cheese mixture; wrap in transparent film and chill well. To serve cut into 6 or 8 wedges and garnish with pimiento strips. Serve with crisp, warm crackers. Serves 6-8.

Question: What I'm looking for is not at all fancy, but is delicious and easy to make . . . I know, because I had the recipe and lost or misplaced it and would appreciate finding it again. It's a tomato mold made with flavored gelatin and the mold sets right in the tomato can. Very pretty served on lettuce. Can you help me? Thank you very much.
Mrs. C.W., W. Roxbury

Answer: It's an economical, easy-to-make side salad that will enhance the simplest meal.

BUDGET TOMATO-RELISH MOLD

1 can (16 oz.) stewed tomatoes
1 pkg. (3 oz.) lemon or strawberry flavored gelatin
½ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon vinegar

Pour tomatoes into saucepan, saving can to use as mold. Bring tomatoes to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer for 2 minutes. Add gelatin, salt, and vinegar; stir until gelatin is dissolved. Pour into can. Chill until firm — about 4 hours. To unmold, dip can in warm water and puncture bottom of can. Makes about 2 cups or 6 servings.

We welcome letters from readers who wish to share their favorite recipes. Our thanks to Mrs. B.B.K., Walpole for her recipe:

EGGPLANT STUFFED WITH LAMB

3 small to medium eggplants
1½ pounds ground lamb
¼ lb. (1 stick) butter
1 large onion chopped
½ cup pine nuts
Dash of cinnamon, allspice and nutmeg
Salt and pepper to taste
1 can (10½ oz.) tomato puree
½ cup water

Cut eggplant in quarters lengthwise. Saute the cut sides in butter until tender (about 10 minutes) over low heat. Line them up in a baking pan. Split each down the center, sprinkle with salt and fill with stuffing, heaping it up on top. Stuffing: Saute onion and lamb in butter, adding more butter if needed. Remove from skillet and brown the pine nuts lightly in the butter. Combine pine nuts with meat mixture and season with the spices, salt and pepper. Stuff eggplant. Mix puree with water and pour over stuffed eggplants. Bake 30 minutes at 350 degrees. (note: if you cannot find pine nuts, sliced almonds are a good substitute.)

Across the kitchen counter

Rosh Hashana, the Jewish New Year, begins at Sundown Friday night, September 5th, bringing with it, as is the age-old custom, wishes for a year filled with good health, sweetness and success.

The holiday marks the beginning of a ten-day period of profound religious observance. For the homemaker it is a time of preparing traditional specialties for family and friends; however, it's no longer necessary to spend long hours in preparation of these familiar dishes.

There is an outstanding cookbook on the market, THE KOSHER GOURMET COOKBOOK written by Mildred Miller and Bascha Snyder. The authors grew up as girlhood friends and now reside in a Boston suburb. They put great effort into this collection of gourmet recipes which originated in their kitchens and passed with flying colors before being committed to print.

Bascha Snyder, (l.), and Mildred Miller, (r.), authors of the new Kosher Gourmet Cookbook.

With the exception of pork and shellfish, anyone looking for a guide to good kosher cooking and party planning will find tempting menus and recipes for all occasions including brunch, luncheon, cocktail party, formal dinner as well as buffet and late supper. "Preparing a lovely dinner should be a pleasant experience," said Bascha, "for the hostess as well as her guests." Mildred adds that all recipes are direct, simple and easy-to-follow—timely modern dishes with traditional overtones.

Honey, fruits and nuts will be used in much of the cooking for the New Year. Gefulte fish, delicately spiced cooked fish balls, have long been a first course served at the dinner meal during the High Holidays.

The following are recipes from THE KOSHER GOURMET COOKBOOK:

GEFULTE FISH

Have fish man grind: 5 pounds of fish fillets—equal amounts of white fish and pike, and a small amount of carp or buffle carp.

In a large kettle, combine: heads, bones, and trimmings of fish.
3 onions, sliced
1 celery stalk, sliced
2 large carrots, sliced water to cover
salt and pepper
Bring to boil.
Combine in blender:
1 onion and 4 eggs
Add mixture to:
ground fish
2 tablespoons matzo meal salt, white pepper
¼ cup water

Shape fish mixture into balls and drop into simmering fish broth. Simmer, covered, for 2 hours. When cool, remove fish balls to platter and garnish with sliced cooked carrots. Strain broth and chill. Serve fish with jellied fish broth and fresh ground horseradish. Yield: 15 to 20 fish balls.

CHICKEN IN GRAPES AND ORANGES

Heat in skillet:
½ cup margarine
Brown on both sides:
2 broilers, cut in quarters
Return chicken to skillet and add:
1½ cups orange juice
2 tablespoons slivered orange peel
2 teaspoons onion, minced
¼ teaspoon ginger
¼ teaspoon Tabasco sauce

Simmer until chicken is tender, 30 minutes. Arrange chicken on heated platter. To thicken sauce in skillet, add: 4 teaspoons cornstarch, blended with a little cold water.

Cook, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add:
2 oranges, sectioned and peeled
2 cups seedless grapes
½ cup toasted, slivered almonds

Pour over chicken, and carefully and attractively arrange the orange sections and grapes around it. Serves 6-8.

BAKLAVA

Bottom Crust
In a bowl, cream:
1 cup margarine
½ cup sugar
Beat in:
1 egg
2 tablespoons cognac
Stir in:
1 teaspoon grated lemon rind
1 teaspoon orange rind
2½ cups cake flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt

Press dough over bottom and ½ inch up sides of 14x10x2½-inch baking pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes or until lightly brown.

FILLING

In bowl, beat for 10 minutes:
8 egg yolks
½ cup sugar
Mix together and stir in:
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
10 oz. almonds, finely chopped
½ pound walnuts, finely chopped
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon almond extract
2 teaspoons cognac
In bowl, beat until stiff, not dry:
8 egg whites
Fold into egg yolk mixture:
one-third cup melted margarine
Beaten whites
Pour into baked bottom crust.

TOPPING

The topping consists of 8 layers of phyllo pastry, each layer brushed with melted margarine, using two-thirds cup margarine. Cut through layers of phyllo topping with sharp knife to make diamond-shaped serving pieces. Bake at 350 degrees, 50 minutes until set and lightly golden. While cake is hot, spoon over it the cooled syrup and let stand for 24 hours. May be kept at room temperature for several days.

SYRUP

In saucepan, combine:
3 cups sugar
one-third cup honey
1½ cups water
2 slivers lemon rind

Bring to boil, stirring until sugar dissolves. Boil 2 minutes. Stir in 3 tablespoons lemon juice and let cool to room temperature. Yield: 24 pieces.

American hospital in Paris to be rebuilt

PARIS (UPI) — The American Hospital of Paris, a 65-year-old landmark that has treated ailing celebrities, millionaires and poor students alike, is about to be torn down and rebuilt.

In April the hospital's administration launched a $16 million fund-raising program in France and the United States for its reconstruction.

The board of directors wants the hospital to keep its image as one of the best and most modern in Europe as well as one of the most chic.

The hospital already has obtained $5 million from the U.S. government and $1.2 million from U.S. corporations and businessmen in France who want an English-speaking hospital offering U.S. medical techniques.

The 140-bed, red-brick hospital is to be razed in 1976 wing by wing and replaced by a new, 160-bed building.

"The hospital is out of date," one board member said. It's not laid out the way a hospital should be these days. Only one out of six private rooms in the main wing has a private bath. We have no parking facilities."

It is the only hospital in Europe chartered by an act of the U.S. Congress (in 1913) and accredited by the American Joint Commission on Hospital Accreditation.

The patient list has read at times like the Hotel Ritz register: Jacqueline Onassis, the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Maurice Chevalier, Pablo Picasso, Bob Hope, various Arab princes, plus platoons of film stars and millionaires who have driven under the arched entrance on tree-lined Avenue Victor Hugo in the lush suburb of Neuilly.

A bed costs from $70 to $120 a day, half of what it would cost if hospital bed prices were not controlled by the government, directors said. The magazine L'Express says having a baby at the American hospital is very "in," and you have to reserve a bed seven months in advance.

Nearly 500 French doctors are affiliated with the hospital, and nurses of a dozen nationalities speak both French and English.

The out-patient clinic treats those with more modest incomes. The other day, a U.S. traveling student with his ankle in a cast sat next to a pregnant American girl who lives in Paris and a Japanese tourist couple.

Sixty-five per cent of the patients are French, even though they get only 30 per cent of their hospital expenses refunded by government medical care instead of the 100 per cent rate at French hospitals.

Twenty per cent of the patients are American, 10 percent Japanese, and 5 per cent other nationalities.

The hospital has a policy of never turning away an American in need of medical help, including tourists who have run out of money or World War I veterans still living in France but without medical insurance.

Many a grateful foreign patient or relative donates money. Christina Onassis gave the hospital a portion of the Onassis tanker company. Her father, Aristotle, died in the hospital in February.

The American Hospital was built in 1910 on the site of Louis XV's country home by members of the Morgan banking family of the United States who were living in Paris. They deemed hospital facilities in Paris then as woefully inadequate. The original building now is a nurses' home.

By now the original reason for establishing the hospital has passed. French medicine is rated by U.S. medical experts in Paris as the finest in Europe.

The administration hopes the new buillding will offer broader functions, including housing facilities for 150 U.S. medical students studying in France and an auditorium for lectures from visiting American doctors.

The new top Marine doesn't want much change

WASHINGTON (UPI) — On Gen. Louis Hugh Wilson's desk there is a nameplate that gives his name, his rank, and one word that is not needed: "Commanding."

There is no question about who's running the Marine Corps. Wilson, 55, is 75 inches and 190 pounds of U.S. Marine.

An interview in his office found Wilson the epitome of the Southern gentleman. He is open and honest. The Mississippiaccented voice is quiet and forceful. His light blue eyes — almost the same color as the Medal of Honor ribbon on his chest — look straight at you.

The Corps was good to Wilson and now that he's the commanding general, he doesn't want to change things much.

Keeping the Spartan tradition may be Wilson's hardest job as commandant. The Army, Navy and Air Force have let hair creep toward the collar, let the sideburns lengthen. Beer in the barracks. Rap sessions aboard ship. They say it is necessary to recruit youths with changing social values.

"I'm not changing the haircut requirements, the grooming standards, the strict physical training requirements," Wilson said. "We haven't changed the standards we've maintained for decades, nor do I think we should. There'll be no inclination to change while I'm commandant."

Wilson is raising quality requirements. For next year, he wants 75 per cent of the Marine recruits to be high school graduates. The rest must score very high — 90 per cent or better — on qualification tests. Last year, 59 per cent of the Marines who volunteered had high school diplomas.

"With that standard of quality, we'll be able to eliminate those who are unwilling to adapt to the discipline and requirements of military life," he said.

Today's leatherneck, Wilson said, "is able to have a life style far better than his predecessors." The pay is better. New enlisted quarters are "delightful."

Wilson acknowledges that recruiting men for highly technical jobs in such areas as aviation, radar, electronics and missiles that today's wars require is a problem, but believes standards will make the difference.

"I think the young Marine of today is better educated, a better professional than he's ever been before," he said.

Rotate classes to fight boredom

NEW PHILADELHPIA, Ohio (UPI) — Going back to school may prove exciting for the 263 students in grades nine through 12 at Tuscarawas Central Catholic High School this fall.

Beginning the first day of classes — Sept. 3 — class periods will be rotated on a six-day basis.

The idea is to keep the classes (and teachers) from getting bored, and also to provide a better education.

According to Principal Father David Kunkler, the rotation will work this way:

Monday of the first week classes will run periods one through eight.

Tuesday classes will be periods eight, one through seven.

Wednesday classes will be periods seven, eight, one through six.

Thursday classes will be periods six, seven, eight, one through five.

Friday classes will be periods five, six, seven, eight, one through four.

Monday of the second week classes will run periods four, five, six, seven, eight, one through three.

Tuesday of the second week will recycle to the top (one through eight).

The class rotation was Kunkler's idea, after he experienced a similar set-up while teaching at Cardinal Hayes High School in South Bronx a couple of years ago.

"I taught one year in New York and they had it," he said. "I also learned abut it at Columbia, and it was new then. It was my idea to do it here."

"There will be some variety to education so the kids don't have the last period of the day all the time," he said. "The worst periods are the last of the day and the one right before lunch."

Reaction to the new schedule is varied, said Kunkler, starting his third year at the school.

"The kids think they'll get lost," he said. "It took the students in New York about two days to get used to it and the teachers about one week."

Kunkler said the 25 teachers here voted for it.

"They all wanted it," he said "They wanted to do their best and didn't want to face the same kids the last period of the day.

"They get as bored as the kids. "This way it takes away some of the boredom."

"You've got to teach according to the children's body as well as the mind." he said. "You've got to catch then when they're alert. You can't make them a slave to the system."

Kunkler says he foresees no problems, but admits the rotation isn't really designed for a large school.

"The big reason why some schools don't go in for it is that you have to have full-time teachers — no part-time teachers who come in at different times," he said. "We have 25 people on our faculty and have them all full time."

He also sees a better education system coming from this plan.

"When the schedule rotates, we can offer more courses by opening up more periods," he said. "That way the children get a better education, they have more to choose from, and courses are geared more to their potential than to ours."

LBJ exhibit opens

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Lyndon B. Johnson once summed it up: "The job of the President is to set priorities for the nation."

His remarks, part of the manuscript of his memoirs, "The Vantage Point," are included in a special bicentennial exhibit opened to the public today as part of the observance honoring the birthdate of the late president.

Today also was a state holiday in honor of Johnson, who was born 67 years ago. Gov. Dolph Briscoe urged Texans to pause to honor Johnson's memory.

"Each of us will remember Lyndon Johnson in a different way," Briscoe said.

"But all of us will remember him as a giant of a man who dreamed big, who fought hard and who left a huge imprint on the nation he loved.

"We are a richer people for having had him among us."

Lady Bird Johnson, who planned to spend the day at her ranch 50 miles west of Austin, guided reporters Tuesday on a preview of the bicentennial exhibit at the LBJ Library.

Blackstone on Madison Avenue

WASHINGTON (UPI) — It could happen here. You sit down to read the paper and there on page three is an eye-catching ad by the law firm of Gaspar, Melchoir, Balthasar and Smith.

The block heading says "50 PER CENT OFF." Below that, in smaller type, "Doorbuster Divorce Bargains — This Week Only." Followed by:

"Unhappily married? Take advantage of our introductory offer. For seven glorious days — that divorce you've been longing for can be yours — for only half what you would normally pay in attorney fees.

"Why be miserable any longer? Top Alimony Guaranteed! Plus child custody, liberal visiting rights, favorable property settlements! Retain one of our expert divorce lawyers TODAY!"

Maybe we won't see this in our lifetime, but it's coming.

The prospect of advertising by lawyers was raised at the recent National Conference of Bar Presidents in Montreal. Delegates were told that many of the restrictions preventing lawyers from publicizing their charges and services will go "down the drain" as a result of a new Supreme Court ruling.

(The court held it was a violation of antitrust laws for bar associations to set minimum fee schedules for attorneys.)

In the beginning, perhaps, learned counsel will show a measure of restrain in plugging his practice. You likely won't see many attorneys on the sidewalk with sandwich boards imprinted with "Today's Special — Probates and Restraining Orders — Two for the Price of one."

But if I know anything about lawyers, whose profession, after all, supplies the bulk of the political candidates in this country, a certain amount of flamboyant advertising is inevitable.

In what may become a typical commercial, we see a typical woebegone young housewife being comforted in the kitchen by a typically nosy neighbor.

"What's the matter, Lobelia? Mouthwash not working? Here, try a swig of Sweet Tonsil, the lemon fresh mouthwash with the built-in garlic suppressors. It leaves your breath as..."

"It isn't my bad breath that's bugging me, Mossy Belle. It's my whiplash case. The judge disallowed our motion for a directed verdict with 50 million triple damages and..."

"Sounds like you need another lawyer, honey. Have you tried Eversue, Smallprint, Browbeater and Sirenchaser, the economy law firm with the new formula neck pain litigation?"

"Eversue, Smallprint, Browbeater and Sirenchase, eh? Do they have instant pettifogging power that extracts huge wads from out-of-court settlements?"

"They bleed 'em whiter than white, honey. And with up to 15 per cent less rakeoff on the contingency fee."

"That sounds like the law firm for me. Thanks, Mossy Belle. From now on I'm retaining Eversue, Smallprint, Browbeater and Sirenchaser for all of my lawsuits."

Council for Children decries budget cuts

The Newton-Wellesley-Weston Council for Children, a citizen advocacy group of the State Office for Children, has held the second of a series of informal meetings with local legislators. Present were State Reps. Lois Pines, Peter Harrington, and Richard McGrath of Newton; Bruce Zeiser of Wellesley; Edward Dickson of Weston; and State Sen. Jack Backman of Newton-Brookline.

The functioning of the council, concerns about the Human Services budget, welfare cuts and program curtailment, and Title XX guidelines were discussed.

The council and legislators focused on the current cuts in human services. One of the local agencies most affected is the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Multi-Service Center, the only agency providing services for adolescent runaways and those needing foster care placement in our area. The entire contribution of the council to the three programs in jeopardy amounts to $10,900. The 100 youngsters who would have been served by these programs are those exhibiting potential or actual delinquent behavior, runaways from abusive or inadequate families, or those in need of temporary relief from a crisis situation.

The amount of funding contrasts sharply with the $15,000 cost of imprisonment for one individual per year, as pointed out by Sen. Backman.

Another program in jeopardy is infant tracking. This program, budgeted for $5400 to serve approximately 1000 children, was to be undertaken by the Human Relations Service of Wellesley in collaboration with the Newton-Wellesley Hospital and other community professionals. The program is designed to identify high-risk infants and their families (e.g. those with brain damage, physical defects or family emotional problems.). Early identification, intervention and services, at home and in the community, are far less costly than institutionalization (averaging $8,000 to 12,000 per year for one child).

An additional threatened program is the family day care service of the Educational Development Center, designed to serve children up to 5 years of age. Without this resource, which includes a sliding-fee scale, the only alternative for many low-income and single-parent families is to go on welfare at a far greater cost to the state.

Along with the above is the family life education program of Family Counseling Service, Region West, designed to help low-income families achieve skills in dealing with family-crisis situations that without intervention lead to dissolution, child abuse and delinquency.

Rick Williams, co-chairperson of the council, emphasized that even before the present cuts a 10 percent reduction in program money had been imposed on the council funding, which affected most council programs. Delinquency-prevention funds from the Division of Youth Services were eliminated totally in May, 1975. Subsequently, almost all of the adolescent programs of the Newton Community Service Center were eliminated.

Beyond these specific programs, council members feel there is a very real threat to all children's services, locally and across the state. The additional 20 percent cuts proposed by the House Ways and Means Committee could obliterate current preventive programs in other state agencies (e.g., court clinics, community clinical nursery schools, maternal and child health programs, lead-paint-poisoning prevention, etc.)

"As social problems are multiplying due to inflation and unemployment, the state is crippling the ability of agencies to meet pressing human needs. This will result in future expenses far more costly to the taxpayer," decried council member Rohna Shoul.

The Council for Children unanimously endorses an additional tax program to counter any further cuts in Human Services, expecially to sustain children's services in a fisfally responsible manner. The council further feels that our local legislators who, by and large, have been supportive of Human Services must receive support for their position from concerned citizens. All citizens are urged to immediately contact their local legislators via phone or mail. For additional information call the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Council for Children at 965-9810.

Temple Shalom offers 5 years of Hebrew class

Spoken and written Hebrew is the focus of Temple Shalom's Hebrew School Department.

Temple Shalom of Newton's Hebrew school meets on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons during the school year. The early session meets 2-3:30 p.m.; the late session 3:40-5:10 p.m.

Five years of Hebrew language education are currently offered. After familiarity with the Hebrew alphabet is achieved, emphasis is placed on Hebrew stories and liturgy.

Classes are conducted in Hebrew, whenever possible, and students are encouraged to increase their Hebrew vocabulary and verbal expression.

Preparation for Bar and Bat Mitzvah takes place in addition to the Hebrew program, although attendance in the Hebrew school is required for incumbant b'nai mitzvot. Further information can be obtained from the Temple Shalom of Newton Religious School Office, 175 Temple St., Newton or by telephoning 332-9550.

Brookline Hospital to honor Dr. Baker

Dr. Henry Baker, of North Gate Park, West Newton, who achieved national prominence as president of the American College of Gastroenterology, will be feted by the trustees of Brookline Hospital on Wednesday, Sept. 3, when they dedicate the hospital's intensive care-cardiac care unit in his honor.

Dr. Baker, who is chief-of-staff at Brookline Hospital and chief of the department of Medicine, received another honor recently when the American College created a permanent leadership bearing his name.

A graduate of Harvard Medical School, Dr. Baker served as clinical professor of medicine at Tufts Medical School, as physician-in-chief of the First and Third Medical Service at Boston City Hospital and as chief-of-staff at Jewish Memorial Hospital, where he is an honorary vice-president of the Board of Directors and honorary president of the medical staff.

The trustees of Brookline Hospital voted to commemorate Dr. Baker "in recognition of the time, energy and expertise he invested in the planning and development of the intensive care-cardiac care unit."

Certified by the American Board of Internal Medicine, Dr. Baker is also a Fellow of the American College of Physicians.

Gibbs offers eight-week skills course

For college graduates who are looking for a good entry-level job, Katharine Gibbs School this fall is offering an eight-week program, "Entree."

It is expressly for college graduates who want jobs utilizing their background knowledge - and whose goal is not to become professional secretaries. "Entree" graduates receive Gibbs placement assistance and are readily eligible for good entry-level jobs where they will be in a position to be reocgnized for their potential.

Starting Sept. 17 "Entree" will be offered at Katharine Gibbs in Boston; it will be offered again starting in January and in April.

In addition to concentrating on the skills of Stenoscript shorthand and typing, students will learn how to prepare effective resumes and practice interviewing techniques. They discuss employment plans individually with Gibbs placement counselors and have group sessions with employers and "Entree" graduates.

Community Schools created summer fun

All who took advantage of Newton Community Schools this summer gained some worthwhile, inspiring experiences.

From July 1 through August 22, five Community Schools presented programs offering a broad range of activities. They were geared primarily to youngsters of elementary school age, and accented arts and crafts, special interests, leading many to express new talents or discover fascinating hobbies.

The programs involved a total of 45 adults and 330 children.

Programs were held daily at Boyd Park near Lincoln-Eliot School, and at the Hamilton School Playground in Lower Falls. An average of 20 boys and girls attended each of these, five mornings a week. Jean Paoletti, assisted by Anna Lucchetti, directed the activities at Boyd, highlighted by a park clean-up.

Mornings were organized jointly by Community Schools and the Recreation Department.

Madeline Soloway, of Newton Highlands, a student at the Massachusetts College of Art, assisted by Margaret Chaisson of Auburndale, capably led the group at Hamilton in carrying out many creative projects.

At Auburndale Playground and the Burr and Williams schools, approximately 135 youngsters enjoyed a series of morning programs, coordinated by Carol Ann Shea, guided by several instructors.

Included were nature study, rhythms, story hour, and arts and crafts. A special event was the Sculpture Workshop conducted by Martha Akagi of Waban. Results produced a menagerie of real and imaginary animals, wild faces, and futuristic styrofoam buildings!

Recreation Department leaders and their young participants joined this Community Schools venture.

At Emerson School in Upper Falls about 135 youngsters were able to choose from eight afternoon programs scheduled throughout July. Groups were large and small; 30 boys and girls played gym hockey twice weekly.

Six kids explored methods and techniques of photography. Constructions using recycled materials, and Origami sessions resulted in unusual exhibits at the Upper Falls Library.

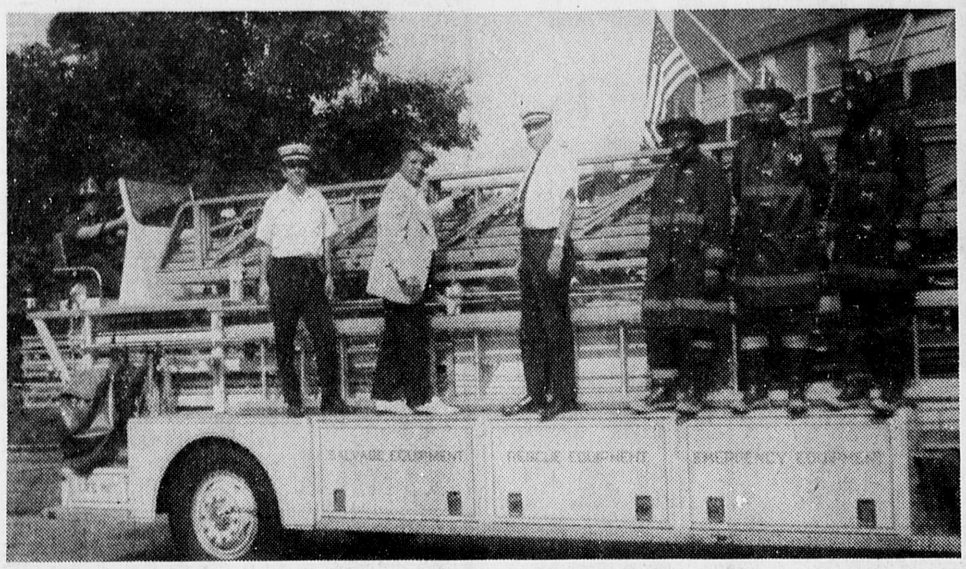

Adults were invited to join the children making terrariums or mastering basic macrame, thus taking home functional reminders as well as pleasant memories of some unusual summer afternoon past-times.

Many consultants contributed to the success of Emerson's Family Summertime. Coordinator Louise Gerchberg comments that the keynote was "enjoyment; people did come, and they did have a good time!" She adds that Upper Falls was fortunate in being able to sponsor a Community Schools Summer Series, and she is pleased that residents from adjacent communities participated when opportunities arose.

An Arts Drop-In Program for mothers and tots was held two mornings a week at Angier Playground in Waban. Organized by Jan Heinrich and directed by Ann Harris, it proved to be extremely successful. The group averaged 30 participants each time, often more. Held outdoors whenever possible, the lively scene itself was a colorful subject for any serious artist.

One other program gave adults and young adults a chance to learn and practice the guitar. Group lessons for 10-12 persons were held weekly at the Auburndale Library.

Seventeen Community Schools will present a broad variety of programs this fall. Watch for further announcements. For complete details and to receive mailings, call 244-4700, ext. 248, the Community Schools Office at City Hall.

New truck

The new 100-foot-ladder fire truck for the Newton Fire Department was put into service at the Elliot Street fire station in June. Painted lime yellow in accordance with national fire safety standards, the truck was ordered in July, 1973, for $94,435. At today's prices the truck would cost $50,000 more. On the truck from left are Firefighter Kenneth C. Nielsen, tiller, Lt. Joseph S. Daniele, Mayor Theodore Mann, Fire Chief Frederick A. Perkins, and Firefighters John D. Nicolazzo, Paul S. Barry, Jr., and Joseph C. Wasak.

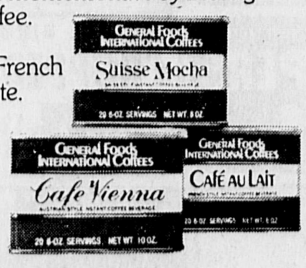

"When I can find time to relax, this flavorful coffee makes it a more rewarding experience."

Carol Lawrence

"Being a wife, a mother and an entertainer doesn't allow me too much time for myself. So I make the most of every free moment I have by treating myself to an especially satisfying and delicious cup of coffee. One of General Foods International Coffees.

There's Café au Lait, smooth and light with a deep French roast flavor. Or Suisse Mocha, with a subtle chocolate taste. And Cafe Vienna, a fragrant, full-bodied coffee with a touch of cinnamon flavor.

All of these coffees can be made in a hurry, but they're too satisfying to drink in a hurry. So I just sit back and relax."

Now, it costs less to discover how rewarding General Foods International Coffees can be.

NAA Lions open season on Sunday against Maryland

The Newton Athletic Association Lions Pop Warner football team will open its 1975 season Sunday by hosting the Andover Apaches of Linthicum, Maryland. Kickoff will be at 1 p.m. at the Newton Highlands Playground.

A contingent of 28 parents, 30 players and 10 cheerleaders will be making the trip from Maryland. The Linthicum players and cheerleaders will be housed by theN.A.A. Lion team and cheerleaders.

The Lions defeated Andover Apaches 8-0 in Linthicum last year. However, both teams have lost their veterans and this game can be considered a toss-up. The Li ns' practices have been hampered severely by a lack of players due to vacation schedules.

The final decision on starting assignments will not be reached until Saturday. However, Peter Alexander is expected to get the starting nod at center. Bob Mosca and Scott Freeman will hold down the guard positions. Frank Oglesby and Mark Sullivan will anchor the tackle slots and the end positions will be shared by Kevin Quinn, Mark Waters, Chris McManus, Bob Wilcox and Cleah Zolotow. The backfield positions are also uncertain. Rick Shone and Chuck Nally should be the halfbacks with Greg Cooper and Bill Penzo sharing the fullback duties.

The most interesting situation to date is the quarterback position. Steve Kasowsky has been impressive to date, bit is in competition with Chuck Nally, last year's "B" team quarterback, and Noel Foley who started on the Lions last year as end. All three are expected to see action at that position. Larry Chin, Carl Pasquarosa and Jeff Bovarnick are all expected to see service at halfback.

Players joining the team this week who may see limited service are Peter MacAvinn, Mark Hayden, Robbie Steinberg, Paul Curhan and Scott Buffington. The Lion offense for this game will be very basic because of the limited practice sessions.

The defensive team is also behind schedule, but may be slightly ahead of the offense. The only starting positions known are Kasowsky and Nally at ends, Foley and Shone at linebackers, Sullivan and Penzo at tackle, and Cooper at safety. The other starting defensive positions will be determined by practice results.

N.A.A. Pee Wee League Starts

The Newton Athletic Association Pee Wee League will officially start at 5:30 p.m. Tuesday, September 2, at their respective fields. Any boy weighing 50 pounds or more and is eight years old is eligible. The following teams will meet at the following fields:

Highland Huskies — Newton Highlands Playground
Newton Centre Jets — Newton Centre Playground
Waban Warriors — Lincoln Park, Waban
Oak Hill Raiders — Oak Hill School

International League action . . .

All peaches and cream for Totem Pole, St. Bernards

By BUDDY BERGER
Sports Correspondent

It was all peaches and cream for Totem Pole and St. Bernards as they became the two teams to watch in the annual Newton twi-International League championship series by knocking off Post 440 and Boys Club, respectfully, in two games in playoff action last week. The championship games get underway Monday, August 25.

Totem Pole, last year's champions, got started in flying fashion by beating Post 440 on Monday, the 18th, 6-2. Totem Pole had a disadvantage that they nobly took on when there was a scheduling conflict. So instead of playing on their home field, Auburndale Playground, they started off at Cabot Park. But, obviously, it meant no damage to the present champs.

Totem Pole started off the scoring in the third inning when Mark Matheson slammed a ball that took a bad hop over the centerfielder's head and went for a home run. This brought in another run ahead of him and made the score 2-0 Totem POle. They added three runs in the fourth, and coasted the rest of the way.

Besides Matheson, the star was pitcher Tom Carey. He had a double and triple, and on the pitching side, fired a three-hitter, striking out nine.

Totem Pole won their series on Tuesday, by belting the Post 440 team out of the play-offs with a 9-3 verdict. Again, Totem Pole started off the scoring in the first when Mark Matheson singled, stole second, and strolled home on a base hit by Brian Kinsella. Two more runs were scored in the third when Jim McHale lined a base hit to left to drive home both Matheson and Kinsella, who had reached on a single and walk, and who were moved over by a base hit by Tom Haggerstrom.

Post 440 finally got on the board in the fourth when Lee Waxman and Chris Flarety produced r.b.i. singles, but Totem Pole came roaring right back in their share of the inning when Matheson again came through with a two run double to right-center.

Mike Leconti, the ace of the staff, kept his record unblemished by winning his ninth straight, without a defeat. Even though he did not strikeout anyone, he scattered seven hits and made it very difficult on Post 440 hitters. The star of this series, without a doubt, would have to be Matheson. He stroked 5 hits in 7 trips, including a home run and double, and drove home six runs. Another standout for this team would have to be Tom Carey, who won the first game and also added a 3-6 hitting performance. As the championship series begins, this team would have to be picked as the favorite to win it all.

St. Bernards

St. Bernards had a lot more trouble doing in stubborn Boys Club, as they beat them by one run in each game.

In game no. 1, St. Bernards beat them 10-9. At the end of three innings, it looked as though it might of been a runaway, with St. Bernards out in front 5-0. But a combination of Boys Club hitting, and St. Bernards walks and errors, brought them right back into the thick of things. They scored five runs in the top of the fourth when Gary Frechette came through with a bases loaded triple, and then scored on an error. Then back-to-back doubles by John Leone and Sean Foley tied up the score. But this was not to be the end. A single by Bill Uberti, and another one by Frechette made it first and third in the fifth. John Leone then came through with a fluke double to drive home both runs. Sean Foley then singled, and these proved to be very big in the big four run rally that made it 9-6 in favor of Boys Club.

By this time, St. Bernards was getting worried, because they were down by three big runs, and with the length of the game already, it was getting dark. So they went to work. With one out, Bob Donahue lined a single, Tony Santiagatti walked, and Brian Bernard reached on an error. This set the stage for leadoff man Bobby LeBlanc, who already had a run scoring single to his credit on the evening. He stepped in against reliever Tom Shulman, and ripped a shot to right center that got into the gap between the right and center fielders. By the time anyone could retrieve it, LeBlanc had his tree run triple, and St. Bernards had their first victory.

The second game again was nip and tuck between these two teams. Bob Donahue started off the St. Bernards scoring in the second when he singled, took second on a sacrifice' and scored on a triple by Greg Kasabian to right. He drove home Monday's hero, Bob LeBlanc, in the third after he had singled, and moved to second on a walk.

But Boys Club rallied to tie the score in the bottom half of the inning when Jim Corsey tripled home John Lennard, who had reached on a fielder's choice, after Noel Foley had walked. After a walk to Uberti, Gary Frechette ripped a single to left to drive home Corsi. But it was Bob Donahue who again was the factor when to St. Bernards took the lead for good in the fifth. After LeBlanc singled and stole second, Nick Butera looped a Texas Leaguer into center, and he stole second, to put runners on second and third. Steve Vona then grounded a single to left to score LeBlanc, and he got into the California Angel act by stealing second himself. Donahue then lined a single to drive in the final run.

Tony Santignati fired a two hitter in this one, striking out eight and walking five. The star of this series would have to be a tie, with the award going to Bob LeBlanc and Bob Donahue. Each one was instrumental in the wins for St. Bernards. LeBlanc went 4-7 and hit the winning triple in the first game, and Donahue had a perfect 4-4, driving in the winning run in the final game. All that's left now is the final series, which, as I mentioned before, began Monday. And as I also mentioned before, it looks like Totem Pole should walk home with all the marbles. But there are such things as upsets, and without them, sports wouldn't be so much fun to follow. In any case, best of luck to the fine teams in the series.

Allison Slack of Homer Street, Newton Centre, defeated Joanne for first place in the top girls' slot, but her Yale team only placed second in the girls' class 2 competition, but she was on Joanne's winning team in the Ivy League for her larger trophy. SPORTS COMMENTARY

How about a common draft to even the International League?

By DAVID BERGER

(The following is an article by David Berger which includes some suggestions to strengthen the International League in Newton. The Graphic welcomes other responses and ideas on this issue, both pro and con.)

The International League had a major problem this year. Nothing in the way of a serious injury to a player or a team being forced out of the league. But they had something that could be just as serious in the long run. The International League is dragging itself into a deep hole and they should be stopped before it is too late.

Their big problem is that they are creating too big a gap between the best teams and the worst teams, and very rarely will a good team one year go bad the next and it is also very rare to see a bad team rebound and have a good "next year." This must be changed.

It is not good for the league, the coaches, the players and most of all the fans to know which team is going to win each year. One of the main reasons people enjoy sports in general and baseball in particular is because there is almost always a chance for an upset. This is not so in the International League today, and, in the next few paragraphs I will begin to examine some of the faults of the league, and how it can be improved.

For the past two years the Oak Hill Cubs have won a grand total of two ballgames. For the past two years Totem Pole has finished in the top three teams, each time winning over 20 games. The list goes on and on, as the International League is now completely split, the good teams and the bad teams; the bad teams, for the past five years or so, have never won more than five games apiece. The good teams have never won fewer than fifteen.This must not go on.

To put a stop to this I have two solutions, which I feel would remedy the situation within the next couple of years.

The first thing I would do would be to hire a commissioner or president of the league who would have two main jobs: To hire and-or fire managers, and find sponsors for each team.

The way many of the teams are run now I feel it would definitely benefit the league, the teams and the individual players to have a change in managers. It would help the league because new managers might be better managers which would make the league more balanced. It would help the individual teams because they would at least have a chance for improvement, which is more than they have now. And it would help the players who would have a better chance of getting a manager they like, respect and would try their best for instead of one thay they could loaf around with, without ever having to give the game their all. And, of course, it would help the managers themselves who would realize they would have to buckle down, make the players hustle, and win a few ballgames if he wanted to return. And while some would say we might run out of managers, I'm sure there are plenty of young people who would love a chance at the glory and fun that goes with managing an International League team. This idea would also add a professional image to the league, thereby making it more interesting (and hopefully successful).

My second idea would be to hold a draft, much like major league baseball does now, with the team with the worst record getting first choice, the next-to-last team second choice, all the way to the top team. This idea too would have a dual purpose: The minor one would be to make the league seem more official and proper. But the major purpose would be to equal out the quality of play in the league, thereby giving all the teams and players the chance to perform to their highest capabilities. As the league stands now, the teams are so stacked, a good team can get by a poor one only giving a fifty percent effort. But a draft would enable the poor teams to get some front line ballplayers.

The way the league is now all the best ballplayers go out for four or five teams while the rest of the clubs have to struggle to put more players on the field. And the draft is a proven idea in baseball. One only has to look at the World Champion Oakland A's to see that. Oakland picked up Sal Bando, Reggie Jackson, Claudell Washington and Vida Blue via the draft route. The draft has also worked in other sports such as baseball and football where it always plays

A reader replies:

(The following letter was submitted unsigned to the Graphic Sports Department. It is a rebuttal to a commentary which appeared in our last edition which compared the athletic programs of Newton and Waltham. The Graphic welcomes all replies to its Sports Commentary).

To The Editor:

I must admit that Mr. Berger's comparison of Newton's sports activities as opposed to Waltham's does indeed indicate that Waltham's main objective in providing activities for its male youth is to produce the "super athlete" where as Newton offers a much more diversified program and in the Recreation Department's new outlook on programs—to take the emphasis off of sports. Of course, Waltham is famous for having projected things that when looked into just are not true. The Recreation Department in Waltham has a brochure that would knock your eye out, but when you "ask the leaders" they just give you a blank look, and reply "does it really say that?"

I had to laugh at his comments on the women's softball team that went to Utah as Waltham will not recognize this team — it merely lets them use the Warren Field. Waltham does not support or organize this team. Again, they merely use a field and Mr. Berger is just giving a false impression — which sounds as though Mr. Berger interviewed the Waltham Department's Tom Taylor.

But, to get down to the point of it all — I wish Mr. Berger would run a survey letting us have a comparison of Women's activities. Newton's program is second to none. I play softball in the summer and volleyball in the winter and I take all the kids and my husband along to share the fun.

It is unfortunate that a Newton Newspaper, would make the City of Newton look so terribly bad. Diversification is the key to a well rounded youth — male or female — not one that plays 19 years of baseball and then when he reached the age of 40 — must sit down and do nothing. I feel that Newton, especially with the Life Course — etc., and more so — the implementation of excellent swimming facilities and courses have given residents the means to prepare for the "after 40" sports; i.e., jogging, swimming and tennis. My hat is off to Newton and as far as a lot of Newton Residents — Waltham still takes second place in programming, facilities, available space.

I am disappointed in the Editor of the Graphic who would allow a member of the staff to print half-facts and then have the gaul to turn around and flower a City such as Waltham who hasn't touched second base.

I am sure that you will not use this letter for re-print, but I would hope that the Editor can see some points made here and I am sure that if I was angry enough to write this, I am sure you will get many more.

SOCCER TALK

PAUL ELDRIDGE

First off, I would like to thank Jimmy Jaymes and Glen Cerny for taking over the past two weeks. You did a great job, gentlemen. Thanks again.

Some good news. Casey Frankiewicz, the well-liked General Manager of the Minutemen, is down the Cape recuperating from his unfortunate accident. Everyone in the world of sports wishes him well.

It was a different kind of vacation this year, no soccer camp. This year we went on a road trip with the Minutemen.

The fellows on the Minutemen are no different than the players on any other pro team when they travel. They have the card players, the ones who just sit quietly deep in their own thoughts. Then there are the others who read or do crossword puzzles and then tere are a few who are afraid to fly.

Shortly after they arrive at Logan, Joe Jelinek went behind a vacant flight insurance counter and brought out the cards. Joe, along with Jan "Pumpka" Michniewski, started a game going with Jose Sora and Jorge Calado. While Ade Coker and Alan Wooler were the kibitzers, Coker joined in on the return trip. But the original four kept on playing even while they were boarding the plane.

Some of the English players do not like to fly, even on a "747". And, Billy Wilkinson had second thoughts about boarding the Air New England flight to New York.

Billy's friend, Steve Melledew, tried to cheer him up by asking one of the airline personnel where they got the parachutes. He was told that they were passed out on the way to the plane. Steve's comment to this was, "Make sure that I get a blue one this time. The white ones tear too easily."

The flight down was a bit rough due to turbulence. When we arrived in the "Big Apple," it started to drizzle and when game time came, it was raining. And the field at Downing Stadium was muddy, and slippery.

It was a thrill when the team bus pulled up to the stadium to see a bunch of Boston fans standing in the rain waiting for their Minutemen. And, they had a cheer for everyone who got off the bus.

I was put to work during the game by helping the radio crew keep the statistics, while my wife, Betsy, sat with Minutemen owner, John Sterge and club secretary, Marie Savery.

You would get quite a good idea of how much this team means to the front office if you were at the game. The Minutemen missed a chance to wrap up the divisonal title when they lost 1-0 in overtime. They should have won, having two goals called back for offsides.

The game was over, and there standing on the top of Downey Stadium was John Sterge and Casey Frankiewicz just staring at the empty field. And, Marie Savery was sitting in the owner's box still not believing that her boys had lost.

The flight home was quiet and a lot less bumpy.

SOCCER SHORTS

The Minutemen were to receive the Northern Division Championship Cup at the quarterfinal playoff game with Miami. It was not presented to them even though a league official was there. What happened to the presentation, Commissioner Woosnam?

My own impression of the officiating of that playoff game was that the officials were not in the game. After all, when Billy Wilkinson is deliberately kicked in the head when he is on the ground (he took four stitches) and then the same one who kicked Billy turns around and kicks Ade Coker and the referee does nothing. Then he was either in over his head or he didn't care what went on.

Someone once said that the North American Soccer League should bring over some English referees to teach the American refs.

Denis, 25-0, who had floored Smith twice in the earlier rounds, landed a right hand to stagger the challenger at 1:40 of the fourth, causing referee Jack McCarron to stop the fight.

Denis will fight Puero Rican heavyweight champion Joe Roman Sept. 30 at the Providence Civic Center.

major roles. One of the main reasons our Newton Little League teams usually alternate at the top spot is because of the draft. It is about time the International League got with it and decided to make its league more even by starting a draft.

In closing I will just say that it is painfully obvious that something must be done to even the league out. One only has to take a look at the final standings to know that. But just criticizing will not help! I have made two suggestions which, I hope, will help. If you have any suggestions, I am sure the league would appreciate your aid. Just send them to me, care of this paper and together I am sure, we can fix this dilemma, and make the league more entertaining and exciting for the players, fans and everyone else included.

Living art at Walpole Mall

Glass blowing by Donald Coleman is only part of the "living art" exhibit Sept. 2 thru 6 at the Walpole Mall, Route 1 and Coney street, Walpole. More than 20 artists will display the works and workings of their particular crafts at a special "living art" exhibit at the Mall. "Crafts '75", which features everything from glass blowing to metal sculpture, offers a rare glimpse into the creative process of the working craftsperson.

Compulsory fall motor vehicle inspection begins September 1

Owners and operators of all motor vehicles and trailers registered in Massachusetts are reminded that the compulsory Fail Inspection begins on September 1 and ends October 15.

Official inspection stations (4,000) at various locations throughout the state have been checked by Registry officers and are ready to perform the required inspection. The fee for inspection alone of a motor vehicle is $2.00. The fee for inspection alone of a trailer is 50 cents.

Initial requirements: a) you must have your registration certificate with you and the vehicle identification number on it must match the one on the vehicle itself. If it does not, go to your insurance company for a correction. b) The registration number on the certificate must match the number on your plates. If they do not, go to a Registry of Motor Vehicles office for correction.

Items to be checked include: brakes, stop lights, lights, horn, exhaust system, steering gear, windshield, windshield cleaners, number plates, rear windows, tires, fenders, bumpers, external sheet metal, reflectors, splash guards and chock blocks and pollution control systems or devices.

Vehicles passing inspection are marked with an official blue sticker printed in black; those not passing are marked with a rejection sticker.

Registrar Robert A. Panora advises drivers of rejected vehicles that they should go immediately to a garage of their choice and have the necessary repairs made and then return to the inspection station which issued the rejection sticker where the vehicle will be re-inspected at no additional charge.

Persons driving with a rejection sticker can be stopped by an enforcement officer for a further check on the safety of the car. Owners and-or operators can be prosecuted for operating with inadequate or defective equipment as well as for operating without a valid inspection sticker and the registration can be suspended.

After the close of the Spring inspection, 4,830 persons were booked for failure to have the proper inspection sticker.

Registry Supervisor of Vehicle Inspection, Charles V. Mulhern, advises that vehicles be checked and known repairs made before the official inspection is made in order to avoid a rejection sticker.

Early inspections are advisable if repair parts are required since the longer you wait, the more difficult the parts may be to obtain.

Be a Labor Day statistic - a live one - not a dead one

The Labor Day weekend automobile fatalities will exceed the 516 persons killed during the same period last year.

This forecast was made by the safety and research team of the Combined Insurance Company of America and based on the following:-

The Discover America Travel Organization, Washington, reports that highway volume this year is up 5.7 percent over 1974. For the same period of time, gasoline consumption has increased 4.3 per cent.

Statistics recently released by the Motor Vehicle Manufacturers Association, Detroit, indicate that in 1974, the average age of passenger cars in use was 5.7 years . . . up slightly from 1973. Auto makers have recently said one reason new car sales are down is because people are holding onto their cars longer. Combine researchers conclude that today's automobiles are even older.

FLY ONE OF THESE FLAGS ON YOUR HOME DURING BICENTENNIAL
OFFERED AT REDUCED PRICE AS A TRANSCRIPT NEWSPAPERS Bicentennial Public Service

50-star Old Glory
13-star Betsy Ross
$7.50 for either Complete Flag Kit
Please add $1.00 for postage and handling on mail orders.
The Transcript Newspapers offers at cost as a patriotic public service two magnificent home flag kits . . . either the 50-star Old Glory or our nation's traditional First Flag, the 13-star Betsy Ross — both 3 x 5 foot in size with double sewn stripes. Both kits are complete with a 6-foot baked-on gilt finish 2-piece steel pole and matching 5-inch wing spread Eagle top ornament — 2-way heavy rust resistant stamped steel bracket with screws — full color flag history brochure, mounting instructions — all carefully packed in a 2-piece storage carton Order either or both kits today — for yourself, for gifts.
Stop by the Transcript Newspapers Office, 420 Washington St., Dedham, Mass. or mail in the coupon to get one or both of these fine flag kits.
"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1776 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex, village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.
To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day, if you will . . . especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1976.

To launch "Bicentennial on Wheels, mobile exhibit

The MTA, in conjunction with the Massachusetts Bicentennial Commission and the Office of the Secretary of the Commonwealth, is sponsoring a year-long tour of the Bicentennial-on-wheels bringing to various schools in the Commonwealth this historical traveling exhibit.

The 32 ft. vehicle contains artifacts dealing with the whaling industry, shipbuilding industry, contributions to American development by Black Americans, important dates in the history of education, and authentic documents from the State Archives, featuring a bill from Paul Revere for one of his famous rides, and material from other museums throughout the Commonwealth.

The vehicle will be launched on Wednesday, August 27, at 10 a.m. and will be on the road for a minimum of one school year. The touring schedule of the MTA Bicentennial-on Wheels will be released at a later date.

The launching will be highlighted by the breaking of a ceremonial container of "revolutionary tea". All of the above will participate in the launching.

Immediately following the ceremony, the vehicle will be open for inspection by reporters and photographers, as the participants view the exhibits.

In case of inclement weather an alternate date will be selected.

Thrift Store offers many bargains

"Now this is what I call getting your dollar's worth," one customer exclaimed, behind an enormous bundle of children's wear, men's trousers, dresses and sheets. Over the past few weeks hundreds of budget-minded shoppers have taken advantage of a fantastic new pricing program at the Boston Goodwill Goodwill Thrift Store, 95 Berkeley street. Clothing is being sold for 97 cents a pound and household linens for 59 cents a pound.

Apparel in assorted sizes, styles, and colors, covering everything from slacks, jeans, gym suits, shirts, dresses, underwear, skirts, socks, winter gear to bikinis, are 97 cents a pound. Linens at 59 cents a pound include towels, sheets, pillowcases, bedspreads, drapes, tablecloths, wash clothes. In easier terms this can mean a dress for 48 cents, two blouses for 72 cents, two towels or a colorful sheet for 59 cents, depending on individual material weight.

In addition, the Goodwill Thrift Store offers surprise hourly specials throughout the day. Shoppers can buy appliances for one-half price or less during the frequent hourly specials.

As store manager, Linda Anderson says, "there's something for everyone at the Goodwill Thrift Store." Recently, teenagers swamped the store for a Dungaree bonaza featuring thousands of blue jeans at 59 cents a pound. Contractors and builders find new bathroom fixtures such as tubs, sinks, and commodes. Thrifty mothers outfit a child from head to toe for under two dollars. Penny-wise shoppers visit the Bargain Basement for cheap U-Fix-It items and discounts on books that increase with the number purchased.

Since "buy the pound" began July 5, hundreds of new customers are shopping the Boston Goodwill Thrift Store dauly. Hours are 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday and 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturdays.

Morgan Memorial Goodwill Industries is a non-profit rehabilitation facility offering counseling, vocational evaluation, adjustment, training and placement to handicapped and disadvantage people. All store proceeds are paid in wages to the handicapped enrolled in rehabilitation programs.

Senior citizens plan trip to Bicentennial Pavilion

A trip to the Bicentennial Pavilion at the Prudential Center is a highlight of a new season of programs at the Newton Senior Drop-In Center, 41 Austin St., Newtonville.

The bus to Boston will leave the center at 10 a.m. Sunday, Sept. 28, and return at about 3:30 p.m.

The trip will include the bus, a tour of the Christian Science Church, the Prudential Center to see their museum, the "Where's Boston," a multi-image show with quadraphonic sound, and then up to the Prudential Skywalk, a glass enclosed observation deck 750 feet in the air.

We will be going to the Terrace Room at the Sheraton Boston Hotel where you can each order at you own expense your lunch. Reservations are limited to 40 persons so come in early to pay for your reservations. The cost is $3 plus your lunch.

Some weekly activities at the center are new and some are continued because of enthusiastic response. The programs are open to all Newton residents 60 years old and older.

On Monday, Sept. 8, at 9:30 a.m., a lawyer will be at the center to answer questions of legal matters; this is to advise only.

Tuesdays at 10 a.m. hospital work is done, consisting of rolling bandages and putting swabs in envelopes. Volunteers interested in their community are needed for this work.

Chess is taught on Tuesdays at 1,30 p.m. by Howard Gainsboro. Both men and women are learning to enjoy this game.

Bead jewelry is a very interesting craft taught by Grace Burley on Wednesday at 10 a.m. for both beginners and intermediate students.

Wednesday afternoons at 1:30 p.m. Eunice Handler will teach string art. This is a craft done with string and nails on a board and excellent for framing.

Bowling is a popular activity on Thursdays, led by Morris Birnbaum. Everyone meets at our center at 11:30 a.m. and goes in private cars to the Riverside Bowling Alleys together. There are special senior citizen prices.

On Thursdays, beginning on Sept. 11 at 1:30 p.m., Yoko Godai will teach the art of making paper crepe flowers. Our first class will be the serving and explanation of a ceremonial Japanese tea. Thereafter we will start each class with a tea ceremony. Come and join us, it will be very interesting to learn this gracious art.

Knitting and crocheting is taught by Connie Casella on Fridays at 10 a.m. Both beginners and advanced students are learning new stitches and making beautiful garments.

Also on Friday mornings Mary Evans helps with sewing problems.

Coffee, tea and cookies are served at the center all day for those who also just "drop-in". We are open Monday through Friday, 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The codirectors are Mildred Stetson and Betty Werman. All our hostesses are members of R.S.V.P., greeting everyone who comes in and informing them of all our programs.

Graphic rods: Tempest in industry

CHICAGO (UPI) — Fishermen interested in purchasing graphite fishing rods should be certain they know exactly what they are buying.

This warning came to light recently during talks with fishing rod manufacturers who are concerned about a possible influx of low-grade graphite rods on the market.

The concern is not without merit since many industry officials believe graphite fishing rods will capture 40 per cent of the market within five years.

However, the problem for the consumer soon may be resolved, according to Jack G. Roach, vice president of Skyline Industries, Fort Worth, Tex.

Graphite rod manufacturers have asked the American Fishing Tackle Manufacturers Association to settle the issue, Roach said.

Roach said his company was especially interested in seeing new guidelines recently pass an AFTMA committee because Skyline "produces rods that are 100 per cent graphite." The only step required before the guidelines can take effect is approval by AFTMA members, and that is expected in September, Roach said.

"The recommendations of this committee will be to call a graphite rod graphite, it must be 100 per cent graphite. Any rods that contain graphite and other materials will be called graphite-glass or whatever," he said.

"The symbol will be the AFTMA fish, with the percentage content in the center of the fish and then on the tail whether it is graphite or graphite-glass. If the rod contains more than 50 percent of another material, the other material will be listed first and graphite second. There must be 10 per cent graphite in a rod to even use the word graphite," Roach said.

What it means to consumers, he said, "is they will be protected from people putting a small amount of graphite in it and still calling it a graphite rod. The AFTMA thought this necessary because of the number of rods appearing on the market with small amounts of graphite in them."

However, although consumers will be protected by knowing the makeup of the rod, there still remains an unsettled controversy over the new carbon fiber rods.

Nobody agrees which manufacturing techniques are best.

Skyline, of course, believes 100 per cent graphite rods are the answer. Others believe a mixture of graphite and other materials are best.

Tom Airhart, technical director for Skyline, said, "There is no relationship in making a true graphite rod to making a fiberglass rod. The problems come in when people try to adapt graphite to glass rod manufacturing processes. Graphite is not a black glass.

"On this point there are so many opinions," said Asai, whose Japanese firm — under the name of Olympic Fishing Tackle Co. Ltd. — produces a wide assortment of fishing rods containing about 90 per cent graphite. "Due to the nature of the material, if you use 100 per cent carbon fiber it will become too much like a stick. There will be no action, really stiff.

"We can make 100 per cent carbon rods," he said, "but they will not have the right action. If you want good fly action, it is almost impossible (with 100 per cent rods)," he said.

Asai said several manufacturers have developed rods using mixtures of graphite with different materials, such as glass. But he feels Japanese Graphite is a completely different product. It doesn't have any characteristics of glass."

But Hiro Asai, executive vice president of O.L.M. International Corp., San Francisco, Calif., disagreed with Airhart. rods are superior to American rods because of different manufacturing processes used by the Japanese.

"We are using much thinner filament (carbon fiber) than American manufacturers," he said, "and get good action. American manufacturers had some breakage due to material which was too hard and shattered easily. So you have to mix something that will have flexibility."

The argument over proper graphite mixtures may never end because most firms producing such rods — whether 100 per cent graphite or only partial graphite — are able to put out workable products.

The angler, in selection of products from local sporting goods shops, will have the final word in the argument.

The Green Thumb

By GEORGE ABRAHAM

Save your Zuccinis: Most gardens produced more zucchini squash than could be eaten—now. Don't forget, you can freeze your squash, or can them in tomato sauce. Here's a good recipe for making something different—Zucchini fritters, sent to us by a reader: Combine 1½ cups of flour, 2 tsp. baking powder, ¾ tsp. salt, 1 cup milk and 1 egg. Mix until moist. Stir in 2 cups finely chopped zucchini. Drop by tablespoon into deep, hot grease (375 degs.) Fry until golden (3 to 4 min). Good alone or with cheese sauce. Some often use a combination of extra sharp cheddar, mozzarella and a little parmesan cheese.

Save your leaves: It'll soon be leaf raking time, and that means you should save your leaves for the compost pile. Can you get too many leaves in the garden? Yes, you can, that is, if you add more and more, without offsetting the nitrogen shortage by adding extra nutrients. Excess leaves mean that soil organisms are going to be busy breaking down the leaves, and in the process consume so much nitrogen that temporarily none is left for the plants, and leaves turn yellow—a hunger sign. The only way you can help this is by adding a balanced plant food, one high in nitrogen.

Contrary to popular belief, lime is NOT a fertilizer. Lime is good for the soil, but the main function is to change the soil reaction (make it sweeter or more sour).

If you've had a poor garden this summer (due to adding lots of leaves, sawdust, etc) add some balanced fertilizer on your garden and plow it under in fall or spring. If you do this, you'll have a good garden next summer—barring a plague of insects or a rash of plant diseases.

Green Thumb Clinic: "I have access to lots of cattails and want to preserve them for winter arrangements. Please tell me how."

Ans: Cat O Nine Tails (or cat tails) make a good item for dried arrangements, and will last for many years. Pick them "before they explode" and dip immediately in shellac. The shellac penetrates the absorbent tufts and holds them in place without marring the soft outward appearance. Dry by hanging them upside down in a garage for 8 days or so. Some people use hair spray on them to prevent the "silks" from becoming loose. Try a mixture of half shellac and half alcohol and drip dry the heads.

College recruiting for jobs slow to recover

AMHERST, Mass. — The recession may have ended but college recruiting has been slow to recover, according to Robert J. Morrissey, alumni placement director at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

UMass is one of 156 colleges and universities which participate in the College Placement Council's Salary Survey taken in January, March and July.

The latest survey shows a decline in job offers at the bachelor's degree level of 24 per cent, 18 per cent at the master's level and 37 per cent for P'

Despi[illegible]e drop in vloume, the average dollar values of offers in the engineering disciplines continued to move upward. Engineering increases ranged from 9 per cent to nearly 15 per cent. This gain pushed the chemical engineering average to $1,196 a month, the highest at the bachelor's level. The average for all bachelor's engineering disciplines was $1,113.

Increases in the non-engineering categories were modest. The average for accountants rose 6 per cent to $981 and the business average rose 5 per cent to $843. The smallest increases — all under 5 per cent — were in agricultural science, marketing and distribution, humanities, social sciences and mathematics.

Engineering positions made up 48 per cent of all offers reported at the bachelor's level.

Of the bachelor's total, 86 per cent of the offers went to men, 14 per cent to wome. Despite an emphasis on hiring more women, however, they too received fewer jobs than a year ago, down 13 per cent compared to 26 per cent fewer for men. Women majoring in accounting and most engineering disciplines recieved slightly higher salary offers than men.

At the master's degree level, 61 per cent of all job offers reported went to MBA candidates. The highest dollar value was for MBA candidates with a technical background, $1,324 a month.

Offers to women master's degree cnadidates were up 11 per cent, with 70 per cent of the offers being in the MBA categories compared to 57 per cent last year.

Increases in dollar averages at the doctoral level for both men and women were moderate, the largest increases coming in mathematics and mechanical engineering.

The Jaguar stands out from all other luxury cars. Its remarkable new warranty is one reason why.

Now Jaguar announces a warranty that is as outstanding as the car it covers. This new coverage has been carefully designed to make sure the 1975 Jaguar will be virtually free of any expense other than routine maintenance during the first 20,000 miles or 12 months, whichever comes first, provided only that it is properly maintained by the owner.

Jaguar's coverage protects more parts of the car than any luxury car we know of. And significantly it covers wear and tear as well as parts that may be defective. If parts like brakes, belts, windshield wipers, hoses or even lightbulbs wear out Jaguar will repair or replace them free. No other luxury car does this. The only exceptions are the tires (which come with their own manufacturer's warranty and filters and spark plugs when replaced at regular maintenance schedules.

Driving the Jaguar XJ has always been one of motoring's most pleasurable experiences. Car and Driver said it is not only the best sedan available anywhere in the world. Now this outstanding car has a warranty that is equally outstanding. See the Jaguar XJs soon.

Advance guard of Japanese radios

TOKYO (UPI) — Thirty years late, it occurs to me that I am a pioneer, worthy of a footnote in economic history books.

I claim that three weeks after World War II, I became the first American in the post-war era to buy a Japanese radio.

Millions of fellow Americans followed in my footsteps. Today Japanese transistor radios are strewn across the United States as thick as sagebrush in Nevada.

Even the Japan Electronics Manufacturers Association has lost count of how many million it peddled us.

My historic business transaction was made in early September, 1945, in a seaport called Otaru in Northern Japan. I didn't need the one-tube Japanese radio. I bought it for a war souvenier.

I came to Otaru as a sailor on a U.S. Navy transport, bringing soldiers from the Philippines for the occupation of Japan. While the soldiers were being unloaded, we country, and the shelves of Otaru's stores were almost bare.

Finally I saw a shop with Japanese phonograph records on display. I entered. There were three Japanese in the store, an old man, an old woman and a young girl. They looked at me as if I were an angel of death. The old people sailors were free to visit Otaru for half a day.

Otaru had never seen American sailors before. Its citizens acted like we were fire-breathing dragons. They scattered in fright before us as we walked into town.

It was pathetic. Far from swaggering conquerers, we transport sailors were barely out of our teens and hardly capable of growing beards.

The cyclone of war had sucked us off graduation platforms of high schools of Middle America and into the Navy. Sketchily trained as "electricians" and "machinists," we were thrust aboard our unwarlike ship.

We hauled soldiers, toilet paper and spam to backwashes like the Marshall and Caroline Islands. We never saw the Japanese. Like the sailors in the play "Mr. Roberts," we fought only our officers. I was one of the vessel's five radio repairman.

Everybody's idea that day was to buy souveniers. However, we found Japan a ruined pressed their backs to the wall in terror and could not move.

On one shelf were two tiny, second hand radios with wooden cases. They were about the size of American alarm clocks. I turned one on, twiddled the dial, and heard music. I put the radio on a counter, and laid my little wad of Japanese money beside it. The quaking girl picked up the equivalent of about $1.50.

Back on the ship I pried open the radio and gazed on an electronic miracle.

It was 1945, before the age of transistors. Most American radios at the time had six to eight vacuum tubes. Materials in the United States were cheap and plentiful. American radios were laced with jungles of wires. Resisters and condensers were stuck in with a lavish hand.

The Japanese radio was the brainchild of a very clever engineer in a land where things were scarce. There was only one vacuum tube. It regulated the power, detected the broadcast signal, and then built it up strong enough to be heard through a small speaker.

There were only two condensers and two or three resisters. No more than three inches of wire had been used to tie them into the circuit.

New review system begins to monitor medical care programs

BOSTON (UPI) — A new review system aimed at monitoring the quality and necessity of state and federally funded medical care programs has been quietly inaugurated in Massachusetts despite a nationwide controversey on the issue.

The state's first Professional Standards Review Organization began to monitor care in one acute care hospital last week and a statewide system is expected to be operational in the next few months.

Meanwhile, state Medicaid officials say they are "seriously considering" establishing a similar review operation both for chronic care hospitals and nursing homes.

Though similar programs monitoring the action of physicians have have generated controversey in other parts of the country, both state and federal officials report few if any complaints from Massachusetts doctors.

"We know all the physicians don't support it," said Edmund Steele of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare, "but we just havn't received the criticism that others have."

Melvin Scovell, Medicaid director for the state Public Welfare Department, also reported few complaints, though he did say complaints may be more common once the system is fully operational.

Last week, the Charles River PSRO began monitoring all Medicare and Medicaid admissions at the Leonard Morse Hospital in Natick. Dr. Lewis Pilcher, the director, said the same monitoring will begin shortly at seven other hospitals in the area, including those in Wellesley, Waltham, and Marlboro.

Pilcher said the Charles River unit is the first PSRO in Masssachusetts and possibly the entire East Coast to begin full scale monitoring.

Steele said three other PSRO's in the state are gearing up for monitoring and only one, covering central Massachusetts, is still in the preliminary stages.

The PSROs were mandated by a 1972 federal law. The units set up under the act are run by physicians themselves. The units monitor the length of time Medicare and Medicaid patients spend in the hospital and doctors must justify keeping a patient longer than the normal treatment period for the diagnosis.

Pilcher said the PSROs also monitor the quality of care and can recommend that physicians be suspended or eliminated from participation in the Medicaid and Medicare programs. Medicare is federally funded while the state pays 50 per cent of Medicaid costs.

According to Scovell, the state is now considering awarding a contract to the Commonwealth Institute of Medicine, an offshoot of the state medical society, to monitor the Medicaid admissions to chronic care hospitals.

Lee Krasner exhibit at Brandeis museum

A retrospective exhibition of colleges and works on paper by Lee Krasner will launch the 1975-76 season at Brandeis University's Rose Art Museum on Wednesday, Sept. 17. The show, which contains works from the years 1933-1974, will continue through Oct. 26.

The Rose Museum is open to the public Tuesday through Sunday, from 1 to 5 p.m. Admission is free.

Lee Krasner will be at the University in conjunction with the show's opening on Sept. 17 when she will discuss her work and contemporary art in general. Her apparance has been arranged under the auspices of the Martin Weiner Fund.

Ms. Krasner is best known for her large-scale canvases, characterized at times by quasi-geometric, biomorphic images and clear, bright, primary colors, and in other instances by a unique calligraphy of explosive, all-over scribbles.

Along with her husband, Jackson Pollock, and Hans Hofmann (under whom she studied), and artists like Rothko, Kline, Gorky and Motherwell, Lee Krasner belongs to the first generation of American artists who renounced the previous dependence on exclusively European standards and models and began to create a uniquely American art, characterized by a new tough-mindedness of imagery and paint application.

The exhibition at Brandeis was organized by Gene Baro for the Corcoran Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C. It has also been seen at the Pennsylvania State University Museum of Art.

Paintings and photos shown at Mutual Bank

The Newton Art Association announces an exhibition of oil paintings by Joseph Briand and photographs by Irene Downes at the Mutual Bank for Savings, 43 Lincoln St., Newton Highlands. They are the co-owners of Inspired Images, 50 Church St., Watertown.

They are also members of the Copley Society of Boston and the Watertown Art Association, where Briand recently won a first prize for his self-portrait and the Professional Photographers Association of New England, where Mrs. Downes won an award at the last competition.

The quality and originality of these paintings and photographs are winning recognition for Inspired Images as a new and promising alternative in portraiture.

These works consist of moody impressions of an old lobster trap, a derelict boat, and a magical footbridge. The portraits reflect captured moments from the innocence of childhood, the classical grace of marriage, to the depth of maturity.

The exhibit will run until Sept. 12.

Madhouse Company of London

By RANDY MUDARRI

Imagine this: You approach the Charles Playhouse Cabaret and notice a London bobby, replete with umbrella underneath "rain" spouting from an overhead pipe. He is merrily chatting with the theater patrons who are entering the cabaret.

You enter into a carnival atmosphere. On the right is a booth with a sign that reads "Happiness Machine." Inside the booth is an attractive young woman who will give you a Sunny Smile for 1 cent, a Cackle for 5 cents, a Madhouse Special (which I got and recommend) for 25 cents, and a Wild Irish Kiss for 50 cents.

You proceed to your table, passing the Wild Man from Borneo, very much alive in his cage, whose antics are hysterical. You begin watching the people entering the cabaret, for it is quite funny to watch their expressions when they are taken aback by what confronts them.

All this, and the show hasn't even begun yet. Get the picture?

From behind a wildly colored backdrop, the barker appears to begin the show, officially titled "The Madhouse Company of London in 'The Wild Stunt Show." He addresses the audience at all times as "sensation seekers," and couldn't be more accurate.

You will witness the Indian shirt trick, the Bearded Lady, the One-man Band, the Human Torch, the Human Bomb, the Human Cannonball, an escape artist, and just about any other freak or sideshow you would imagine in a circus.

But this is no ordinary wild stunt show as you may be accustomed to. Once you get inside, you realize that you're not in for an ordinary evening. The pre-show atmosphere and antics gradually condition the audience and prepare them for what is to come. One may be embarrassed at some of the goings-on at first, but by the time the stunts are getting more outrageous, every member of the audience is caught up in the spirit of things and loves every minute.

Sensation seekers, The Madhouse Company of London is sheer insanity. Perhaps the hardest single thing to do in theater is to get the audience caught up in the spirit and participate.

Not only did the Madhouse Company unabashedly succeed, but it even had eager volunteers from the audience for particular stunts (though almost all of the show is performed by the four-man cast).

It is difficult to single out one member of the cast over the others, because they all are splendid. Hamlet McWallbanger, Oscar Oswald, and Marcel Steiner carry most of the show and do more things on stage than one can describe.

Professor Tommy Shand has a solo spot in the proceedings, but plays background music the rest of the time. When Shand holds the spotlight, I can only think that it is what vaudeville must have been like. McWallbanger is pretty much the daredevil. Oswald is the barker and emcee most of the time, while Steiner is most of the freaks. Each is an excellent performer and holds the audience in his palm.

Throughout the evening one will overhear one member or another of the audience whispering to a friend, "I don't believe this!" You will not believe the surprise intermission. And I don't believe anyone in the audience had such a good time and laughed so much in quite a while.

I wholeheartedly recommend this show to anyone who has a sense of humor for you'll have a ball and will end up telling your friends not to miss it. Me? I'm going a second time.

Deservedly, the Madhouse Company of London's "Wild Stunt Show" has had its run extended once again, this time through Oct. 5. If you're up for a good time, trek on down to the Charles Playhouse Cabaret on Warrenton Street in downtown Boston.

Teachers protest lack of contract by walking out on annual speech

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Nearly 500teachers protested their lack of a contract for this fall by walking out of Superintendent Aaron Fink's annual speech to them Wednesday morning.

Newton Teachers Association President Joan Warner made a short statement protesting the impasse in negotiations in Newton North High School's auditrium just before 11 a.m.

After the walkout teachers returned to their schools and prepared for a normal start of school on Thursday.

The teachers met Wednesday at 8:30 a.m. at American Legion Post No. 440 to discuss demonstration8 plans with Massachusetts Teachers Association representative Don Murray.

At 4 p.m. the NTA representatives and the School Committee negotiating team met for five hours with state-appointed factfinder William Fallon, who will try to act as a mediator to resolve the differences in salary, job security, and about five other iems that keep the parties from reaching agreement.

The next meeting with Fallon is scheduled for Sept. 16.

Nearly 600 teachers at Post 440 heard Murray outline the alternatives of protesting that included picketing oitside the superintendent's office, reporting late to classes, and walking into negotiating sessions.

A strike was mentioned as one possible alternative but no serious talk of one has been heard.

NTA President Warner said a Crisis Commmittee has been organized with at least 40 teachers that could organize a meeting within two hours.

However, Hamilton School Principal Warner said Thursday there have been no plans made for future action by the teachers to demonstrate discontent.

She said, "It's going to be a quiet start" of school.

In her speech prior to the quiet and orderly walkout of teachers Wednesday morning, Ms. Warner said, "We have a tough year ahead.

"We are beginning the year without a contract. We have never been in this position before.

"We don't want to jeopardize the education of children in Newton, but we have an obligation to ourselves as educators, as citizens, and as family members to demonstrate our concern for a quick settlement of a contract.

"We want to stay in communication. We hope the School Committee is listening," she concluded, and then left the stage and led the teachers out the door.

MDC may acquire Charles River Rink

The operation of the Charles River Skating Center by a regional authority after purchase by the Metropolitan District Commission is under consideration by the MDC.

The rink complex, located on Wells Avenue in the Newton-at-128 industrial park, is now owned by the Mutual Bank for Savings after a mortgage foreclosure.

There has been considerable pressure for the city to acquire the facility for use by the public, the schools and the Newton Youth Hockey Association, since there is no other public rink in the city limits.

Cost has been estimated at slightly over $1 million.

Mayor Theodore Mann, State Sen. Jack Backman, and several aldermen have also advocated the acquisition of the rink by the MDC.

At a recent meeting between Mann and the new MDC commissioner, John Snedeker, the possibility of creating a regional authority to operate the rink after its purchase by the MDC was supported by Snedeker, who felt such a venture, if successful, might lead to regional operation of existing MDC rinks.

Mann, discussing the idea recently, mentioned the cooperation between Waltham and Newton in refuse disposal and a "water compact" with Wellesley as two examples of regional cooperation.

Assistant MDC Commissioner William Chisholm said Thursday that the matter is still under discussion within the MDC.

The mayor and Snedeker also talked about MDC plans for the Riverside recreation area on the Weston side of the river at Route 128 but accessible to Newton

Originally the MDC had planned to build a rink there, but now the plans seem to emphasize facilities for more passive recreation.

Mayor Mann asked Snedeker also to consider the possibility of building a pool into the Charles River at Ware's Cove, Auburndale, with the use of a plastic liner and a water-purification system to take care of a small area.

Hopes dim for reimbursement from SBAB for North High work

Chances are slimmer this week that Newton will receive $700,000 in reimbursement funds from the state School Buildings Assistance Bureau (SBAB).

Public Buildings Commissioner Gene Larson wrote a letter of protest to SBAB last week on the same day he received a letter saying the state would not consider reimbursing for some of the areas at Newton North High School.

The SBAB took no action on Newton's request for 40 percent funding of $1.7 million worth of work at the school when it met Aug. 26.

The city has already spent or approved $1.2 million for site work at the school for athletic fields and other work, $163,000 for the student mall, $173,750 for heating, ventilation and air conditioning; and $208,000 to enclose asbestos.

The state has rejected considering funding for the asbestos and heating, but Larson's department completed the needed forms for funding of the site work. The $1.2 million approved by the Board of Aldermen was on the condition that SBAB would pay 40 percent.

Elton Smith, an assistant administrator for SBAB, said that funding for the school has to stop somewhere.

"You can't continue adding to a project because it's designed wrong. At some point, someone has to say, 'This is the project,' " he said.

Smith said that Newton's request for funds will have to compete with all other reoquests for funds from towns for money available for new projects that SBAB has not already agreed to fund.

He said Gov. Michael Dukakis had only put about $1.5 million into that category, but would not comment on Newton's chances for funding.

Previously, the state attorney general's office had given an opinion to SBAB that it should reimburse for the site work.

Many in city eligible for rental assistance

Any family or elderly person in Newton is eligible for rental assistance payments if the income of the person or family does not exceed 80 percent of Newton's median income.

According to the Planning Department, the median income for Newton is $15,381, of which 80 percent is $12,305.

U.S. census figures show that 7647 families in Newton have an income less than $12,000 per year, a Planning Department spokesman said.

She could not determine how many of these families rent their living quarters.

David Harrity of the Boston office of the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development confirmed the suggestion that new HUD funding for leased housing makes many more families eligible for housing assistance .

Newton has about 150 units of housing leased from local landlords that is suitable for family housing.

HUD funding recently provided $324,324 for 120 additional units if they can be found.

But the Housing Authority would be swamped if everyone eligible for housing assistance applied for aid.

It is likely that one-half of those with an income of less than $12,000 rent their homes.

Rosh Hashanah begins at sunset

Tonight at sundown, Jewish people all over the world will begin the celebration of Rosh Hashanah the start of the Hebrew year, 5736. Families and community members will join in prayer in the synogogue and begin a ten day period during which they will examine reflectively their lives. The Shofar, or ram's horn, will be sounded to regenerate introspection into the person's moral or spiritual life. A positive holiday, Rosh Hashanah stresses the fact that individuals have control over their lives. The ten days end with Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

In the home Rosh Hashanah festivities are intertwined with tradition, prayer and delicious foods. A kiddush, or blessing, is said over the wine and challah. Apples and honey are on the table, as as with other sweets served during the meal, they symbolize the prayer for a "sweet" year.

Voter registration deadline

Alan Licarie, executive secretary of the Newton Election Commission, reminds all prospective voters that the final deadline for registration for the preliminary election is Sept. 10.

The Election Commission office is open from 8:30 a.m. through 5 p.m. on weekdays. It will remain open until 10 p.m. on Sept. 10.

The preliminary election will be held Sept. 30.

Newton city elections are nonspartisan. A prel. minary, oo or runof, is held when there are more than two candidates for a particular post. The top two vote getters in the preliminary will appear on the November ballot.

Preliminaries will be held for Ward 4 alderman-at-large, Ward alderman in Wards 7 and 8 and School Committee in Ward 3.

The races in Ward 4 and Ward 3 are citywide.

Candidates

Jason Sacks

Alderman-at-Large Jason Sacks, a five-term member of the Board of Aldermen from Ward 7, has announced his candidacy for reelection in Nevember.

During his 10 years on the Board, Sacks has had experience on the Public Works, Land Use, Finance, and Legislation and Rules Committees, and is presently chairman of the Kenrick Fund Committee.

Ald. Sacks strongly believes that Newton must retain the character it has enjoyed for so many years, that of the "Garden City."

However, in order to provide the services so eagerly sovht by its residents, he feels that a proper balance of tax revenues must be established between the residents of the city and its businesses. To promote this balance, Alderman Sacks has supported such projects as The Marriott, Newton at 128, The Gateway Center, and The Towers at Chestnut Hill. Projects such as these measurably relieve the

Nick Nardone

Nick Nardone is announcing his candidacy for alderman-at-large in Ward 4.

"I am a product of the Boston school system, but have been a taxpayer in the City of Newton for the past 26 years," he said.

Nardone, his wife, Mary, and their two children live at 39 Sharon Ave., West Newton.

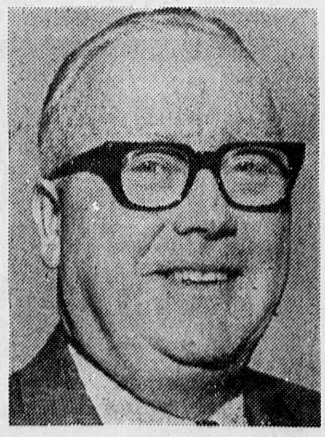

The candidate, over the years, has been active in scouting, Newton youth groups, St. Bernard's Holy Name Society, Greater Boston Holy Name Council, Post No. 48 American Legion, VFW, Newton Lodge of Elks and the Knights of Columbus.

He states the following as the issues confronting Newton:

"The City of Newton is a business, and like all businesses, should be able to operate as such. That is, the tax base will and should provide services.

"The City of Newton is obliged to provide schools for the children of Newton.

NARDONE—See Page 6

Robert Tennant

Ald. Robert Tennant today announced his candidacy for alderman-at-large from Ward three.

As a Newton alderman, Tennant cites his 12 years at City Hall as the experience needed to balance the issues in these controversial times.

Being the president and treasurer of the R.L. Tennant Insurance Agency at 1149 Washington St., West Newton, he is a man who is close to the problems of the city and state and available to his constituents.

Tennant has many years experience in the real estate and insurance business, pointing out that his background is particularly valuable in things like Urban Renewal and Real Estate Tax matters. As a father of seven children, Tennant is extremely interested in the advancement of the local and state school systems and as an alderman he has tried to exercise controls to get the most educational benefits for Newton's children, however at

Cynthia Creem

Cynthia Stone Creem has announced her candidacy for the vacated seat of Ward 8 alderman.

Her decision to run is predicated on the need for strong, responsible and non-partisan representation which she feels is necessary to solve the difficult problems which her constituents face, she said.

Mrs. Creem believes that decisive action must be taken in the following areas.

Real estate taxes

A fair reassessemtn of real estate property values must be coupled with effective lobbying at the state level for a sensible approach to city taxation.

Economy in government

A readdressing of Newton's priorities in spending is necessary to achieve a reasonable balance of services provided to Newton residents against the cost of such services. In this regard, the Board cannot abrogate its responsibility to work closely

Local community participation has included the co-presidency of the Williams School PTA with his wife Martha, and membership on the Citizens Advisory Committee on Declining Enrollment of the Newton School Committee. In addition the interests of the five Kier children have meant involvement in a variety of activities including Cub Scouts and Little League.

At the beginning of the second year of the law referred to as Chapter 766, there are still about a dozen Newton children being educated in private schools because of their learning disabilities.

Chapter 766 is a state law calling for the integration of chilrdren with learning disabilities into the regular school system.

According to Jesse Grimes, coordinator of the learning disability program for the Newton schools, 12 children were in private schools before the advent of Chapter 766.

The School Department had hoped by the opening of school this year to have a program that would integrate these 12 children, but, Grimes explained, there were budget problems and such a program requires a reorganization of some aspects of the schools.

The taxpayers are probably paying less, Grimes says, for sending the 12 children to private schools than they would have had to pay to put the children into the Newton school system.

There is this year a "mini-school," as Grimes calls it, for learning-disabled students at Newton North High School. The program will have one class in science, English, social studies, and math, with about eight students per class.

In the program, not all students will go to all classes; some will attend the regular classes in some courses.

The total number of students will be about 30.

If the "mini-school" works out, Grimes said, it will be tried in all secondary schools.

There are more than 1000 students in the Chapter 766 program in the Newton schools, Grimes said. Of these, 200 are more handicapped than the 12 whose parents have been successful in keeping them in private schools.

New church too close to street, Schiller says

Barbara Schiller, a candidate for alderman-at-large from Ward 2, has requested the City Solicitor's office to investigate the construction of a new church at 154 Lowell Ave.

Mrs. Schiller's complaint, directed at the Italian Pentecostal Chrisitan Church, charged that the location of the building puts it too close to the street. Mrs. Schiller noted that the zoning rules generaly exempt churches, but feels tht the rules should be violated only in cases of demonstrated need.

Mrs. Schiller feels that the church should be set back 30 feet from the curb, not 11 feet which she says the plans show.

The Italian Pentecostal Church is currently located at 19 Wellington St., Arlington, according to the building permits, Mrs. Schiller says.

Service note

Mareine St. Maj. Francis B. Daly of 138 Lincoln St., Newton Highlands completed two weeks of reserve training while assigned to the tactical exercise coordinator at Marine Corps Base Camp, Lejeune, North Carolina.

A memxer of Boston's 17th Staff Group, Sgt. Maj. Daly participated in operation "Phoenix Light," a three-day Marine Corps exercise which involved an amphibious based surface and heliborne assault originating in Norfolk, Va., and landing at Onslow Beach.

Spanish speaking residents study English through CETA

Two Spanish-speaking, South American-born residents of Newton received certificates of accomplishment in English last Wednesday at graduation ceremonies for a bilingual work-study program sponsored by Newton CETA.

The Newton students are 19-year-old Gladys Tarira, Newtonville, originally from Ecuador, and 60-year-old Elisie Antonini, West Newton, a native of Argentina.

According to CETA director Charles F. Miller, the program for Spanish-speaking persons tries to increase their job-readiness by increasing their English-speaking ability.

Classes were held at Waltham Vocational high School, where the graduation ceremonies also took place. Nineteen students, 17 of whom were from the city of Waltham, comprised the graduating class.

According to the 1970 census, Newton's Spanish-speaking population is 1,333, or 1.5 per cent of the total. The actual number at this time may be considerably larger, officials concede.

The bilingual Newtonians received their certificates from Mayor Theodore D. Mann, chairman of the area CETA program. Mann commended the "proud heirtage" of the Spanish-speaking graduates. He said, "Your English isn't perfect after these few short months. But you'll continue to improve on your own, because you are people of motivation."

Newton CETA director Miller pledged continuing backing to the graduates as they seek full-time jobs. During the 16-week program, students worked two days a week at entry-level jobs in English-speaking offices or worksites. Job placement was arranged by Newton CETA staff. Students received $48 a week for their work experience.

Three days a week were given over to intensive language study and drill with bilingual teachers, most of whom are of Hispanic origin.

West Newton's Elisio Antonini worked as a painter with the Waltham Housing Authority. Antonini, fluent in Spanish and Italian, calls his English "a little better" as a result of the course.

Newtonville's Gladys Tarira worked as a clerical assistant at the Newton CETA office at 90 Bridge St., Nonantum. Tarira reports that she plans to enter Brandeis University's transitional-year program this month. Her career goal is nursing. Concerning benefits from the language course, she said, "Before, I didn't know the grammar and now the pronunciation is better."

Newton CETA director Miller reported that a subsequent work-study program in English as a second language is expected to get under way in October for Spanish-speaking residents of the west suburban area.

Miller said that residents of Bedford, Brookline, Dover, Lexington, Lincoln, Needham, Newton, Waltham, Wellesley and Weston are eligible for the Newton CETA program if they also meet federal eligibility requirements designed to reach severely disadvantaged persons and families.

Miller listed the federally determined categories of eligibility as: Vietnam veterans, welfare recipients, handicapped persons, minority group members, persons over 45 or under 22, female heads of household, offenders and ex-offenders, technologically displaced individuals, high school drop-outs, former manpower trainees, and/or persons with limited English-speaking skills.

Children and drivers must cooperate to keep school season accident-free

Chief William F. Quinn reminds all motorists that school reopened this week and suggests caution in driving over school routes.

The chief also advised parents of younger children to take time to acquaint them with the safest routes to school and also the best use of corners and crosswalks to and from school or bus stops for those taking buses.

According to the chief, "It becomes apparent about this time that we relax over attitudes towards safety during the summer, and away from the reminders that our police personnel and school people provide ten months of the year."

Chief Quinn continued, "We see children and children with adults, usually parents, crossing busy streets away from crosswalks or signal lights, many times on curves when visibility is at a minimum, and when we do analyze pedestrian accidents we find these oversights are a contributing factor.

"Therefore it is the recommendation of this department that parents walk the necessary school routes with their younger children, and re-emphasize the importance of looking all ways before crossing any street, use of corners, signal lights, policing people to their older children.

Parents must also stress the rules of safety governing the riding of bicycles. Children should ride in the same direction as the flow of traffic, obey traffic signs and ride in single file.

Safe and sane conduct is expected from children who ride school buses. Getting a bus ride is a privilege that can be revoked.

Motorists

Only extreme caution and care on the part of motorists can prevent serius injuries and death to children going back to school.

Always have your car under complete control, which means the ability to stop in an instant. This type of vigilance is of utmost importance when driving along school routes and in the vicinity of school areas.

School buses are a familiar sight to all of us, but many drivers are still not familiar enough with the regulations that govern the handling of vehicles as they approach school buses.

When a school bus is stopped ith its red lights flashing, all vehicles approaching from either direction must also stop, unless proceeding in the opposite direction on a divided highway. They must remain standing until the flashing lights are turned off and the school bus starts on its way.

Motorists who ignore the law and pass stopped school buses are subject to stiff fines and loss of license.

Similar penalties and suspensions are also imposed on drivers who ignore speed limitation signs posted in the vicinity of schools.

"Lack of interest leads to accidents and we cannot afford to have one child hurt, especially when a little effort could create an attitude of safety. If any parent, particularly those new to the area, needs assistance on school routes, the office of Community Service and Safety will be available for assistance by calling 244-1212.

Schwamm running in Ward 1

Jeffrey Schwamm

Jeffrey Schwamm of 4 Rockland St., Newton Corner, has announced his candidacy for the Newton School Committee from Ward 1.

Schwamm is the drug and youth program coordinator for the Newton-Wellesley-Weston Community Mental Health and Retardation Center.

He cites his experience working with high school dropouts, evaluating human service programs for adolescents, and working with parents of children with special educational needs as some of the factors which have led him to seek the Ward 1 seat.

Schwamm's education includes a bachelor of arts degree from Brandeis University and a master's of social planning from Boston College School of Social Work.

Presently, he is working towards his Ph.D. at the Florence Heller School for Advanced Studies in Social Welfare, Brandeis University. His doctoral program concentrates on policy formulation' planning, and administration.

Among the issues in this campaign, Schwamm says, "I feel that the School Committee must insure that the city's educational resources are responsibly and efficiently managed. With fiscal realities in mind, we must endeavor it must address to maintain Newton's high educational standards' the issues of equity and educational quality, and it must be accountable for its decisions."

According to Schwamm, "Equity requires a fair distribution of all educational resources to each public school and to each student in Newton. Educational quality must begin with a valid working definition that the people of Newton are willing to support. As a member of the School Committee I would be responsive to the citizens of Newton and be responsible for insuring that the policies of the School Committee are carried out by the educators, ad-

Dr. Prince challenger in Ward 2

Dr. Edward V. Prince of 60 Harvard St., Newtonville has announced his candidacy for School Committee from Ward 2.

A resident of Newton since 1945, he is a graduate of Newton High School and the Massachusetts School of Chiropody. He is a veteran of the U.S. Army Medical Corps.

Dr. Prince has been a practicing podiatrist in Newton for the past 18 years. He is a member of the American Podiatry Association; Massachusetts Podiatry Association; Board of Directors Garden City Acitivity Center; member of the Newton Knights of Columbus Council No. 167 and Fourth Degree member in the David I. Walsh Assembly; American Legion Post No. 440; Newton Athletic Association, past member Board of Directors and Finance Committee; Our Lady, Help of Christians Church, Ushers Club and Past President.

Dr. Prince and his wife, Helen, have six children all attending Newton Schools: David and Stephen at Newton North High; Catherine and John at F.A.Day Junior High; Maura and Deidre at Cabot Elementary School.

"As a taxpayer I am concerned over the rapid increase in the Svhool Budget over the recent years, thus causing an overwhelming tax burden on all citizens, especiall the senior citizens who are on a fixed income," he said.

"As a parent I feel there is a need to get back to basics and to control the permissiveness in relation to education.

"Fiscal autonomy has for too long existed in a legal vacuum. Why? I believe it to be linked to financial accountability. We hold all other elected officials accountable, so why not the School Committee? Now is the time for the School Committee to assume its responsibility - not to avoid it. After all, the School Committee members are elected to set policy.

"As a Member of the School Committee, my principles and goals shall be to eliminate padded budgets, double budgeting and no explanation budgeting; set guidelines for behavior and enforcement of the rules; bring back the basics."

Dr. Edward Prince

LeConti candidate in Ward 3

Michael R. LeConti, 45 Cherry Pl., West Newton, has announced his candidacy for School Committee from Ward 3.

He is a graduate of Northeastern University with bachelor's and master's degrees in business administration. He has held positions in financial management for the past 20 years and is currently controller of Centola Company, Inc., a construction business in Watertown.

LeConti is a veteran of the Korean War and father of five children, all attending Newton schools. He is active in youth programs, having been president of Newton West Little League, treasurer of Newton Youth Hockey, and is presently a vice-president and director of the youth hockey organization.

He served as chairman of the Mayor's Transportation Advisory Committee, was a member of the Mayor's Advisory Committee on Revaluation, and is presently a member of the Franklin School Building Advisory Board and the Newton Youth Commission advisory board.

He is also a member of the American Legion Post 440, Knights of Columbus Council No. 155, and Sons of Italy Lodge Piave-Fiume No. 1036.

LeConti states his position on the following school issues:

1. SCHOOL BUDGET—He strongly supports fiscal autonomy as long as there is fiscal responsibility in the form of a reasonable tax burden that the parents and taxpayers can afford to live with. The current budget is more than we can afford and reductions can be made by starting at the top with administration. Cost savings and a more efficient school system can be achieved without affecting quality education by establishing priorities; cutting or combining functions, program, and reports where feasible;

Silton announces Ward 5 candidacy

Sumner Silton

Sumner R Silton of 76 Moffat Rd., Waban, has announced his candidacy for School Committee from Ward 5.

A graduate of Boston Latin School and Harvard College, he is a Korean veteran and a Commander in the United States Naval Reserve. He operates his own insurance business in Chestnut Hill, has been active in youth activities and coached "Pop Warner" football and "Little League" baseball. He has served as director and officer of the Waban Improvement Society.

Of his five sons, Michael and Jeffrey are recent graduates of Newton North High School and are currently attending the university of Mass. at Amherst; Richard, Peter and Jonathan attend Newton North High, Warren Jr. High and Angier Elementary School respectively. He cites "these five reasons" along with his taxpayer's concern for fiscal responsibility as exciting his school committee interest which he terms "personal, real and current."

Having been close to the Newton School scene at all levels the past 12 years, the last three of which he has been a regular attendee at School Committee meetings, he is uniquely conversant with school issues. He has been disappointed in the majority of School Committee members who while giving lip service to fiscal responsibility, continue to support and espouse costly policies which in no way respond to the best interests of the majority of the electorate and fail to add positive value to quality education but rather reflect and perpetuate the interests of the administration and their own particular social philosophy.

Silton has not hesitated to speak out against fiscal irresponsibility. Two years

Educational involvement

Our lives, sectioned off by so many chronological milestones, (such as birthdays, anniversaries and holidays), are now entering into yet another period of significant demarcation...the 1975-76 school year.

And although many people pick the first day of each January to put into action, or at least attempt to, resolutions that are deemed desirable behavior for the future, maybe we should consider the beginning of the school year as a better time to make these important decisions and goals. After all, September is that time of year when we once again start to settle down into normal routines after a period of summer vacations and disrupted schedules.

But a more important reason for setting objectives in September is the extreme importance of the next nine months in the lives of the people who will be attending our schools.

Do we know what programs are being taught in our schools? Are the classes best suited to prepare young people for such things as employment, adjustment to the realities of the world, and enjoyment of life in general?

Are our schools relevant and necessary? Maybe our schools are prepared to best aide the growth of young people, but we shoul not take it for granted that this is so.

If a person has a child in school, he should, and probably does have more interest than others in the educational process, but we all are affected and we all should involve ourselves with the schools. We all will be dealing with these people whose values the school system is at least partially molding.

During recent years we have seen and read about both alcohol and drugs mixing in with the already energetic, and occasionally mischievous, activities of youth.

The problem of alcohol and drug abuse exists among some youths in every city and town. We could throw up our hands and accept the situation as something that "just is" and can't be changed. And we could simply point to the school committees and accuse them of being responsible for any unpleasantness found in our schools. But how just would that be?

Then on the other hand we could take the pollyanna approach of observation and claim that everything will be all right in the end without any outside help for, or dialogue with, the teachers. Just let the school committee make all the "correct" decisions without any input from people of the community.

Well, dealing with the hard-core realities of our school systems, there are some areas that can stand some improvement, but over the years , knowledge on how to better educate our young people has been greatly expanded and applied.

But probably the most important key to improving the present situati on is "involvement." Involvement by young and old suggesting ideas for that institution which takes up so many hours a week of a young person's life. How can we better utilize our formal education time?

And because such a large part of a youth's approach to school begins at home, a better dialogue between parents and educators would contribute to a better overall approach to the learning process.

Education is all of us. How we approach the educational system and support its programs helps shape the future of our towns.

Not only Republicans knew of Watergate

Commentary by John D. Lofton, Jr.

WASHINGTON—If you think that we now know all that is worth knowing about Watergate, and that all the cover-up artists were Republicans, then you owe it to yourself to read Fred Thompson's book, "At That Point in Time: True Inside Story of the Senate Watergate Committee," which will be published this November by Quadrangle.

The startling conclusion reached by the GOP's chief counsel on the Watergate Committee and his aides, after hearing a lot of testimony from a wide variety of people, most of whom were under oath, is this:

"Several people, including some at the Democratic headquarters, had advance knowledge of the Watergate break-in on June 17, 1972. An obvious effort had been made to conceal the facts...."

But because they were unable to find a so-called "smoking gun" in anyone's hands, Thompson says, and because of the press of Watergate business, "we knew that we could not justify the expenditure of any more time, effort, and money on a matter that, even if our hunches turned out to be true, might add up to a finding of historical interest only. We realized that we had played out the string, and we let the matter drop, reluctantly, and with a gnawing feeling in our stomachs."

Nevertheless, even though they did not have proof beyond a reasonable doubt, since nearly all their information was from sworn testimony, a thoroughly documented report was prepared and a major effort made to include it in the Watergate Committee's final report.

But, as expected, Committee Chairman Sen. Sam Ervin agreed with the Democrat majority staff's opinion that the Republican report was "too speculative." It was never published.

Among the "amazing series of apparent coincidences" that Thompson writes out in a fascinating chapter titled "Unanswered Questions" is the strange friendship between convicted Watergate burglar Frank Sturgis and columnist Jack Anderson.

In a trip to Miami in July of 1973, one of Thompson's investigators, Howard Liebengood, was told by a member of the anti-Castro community who knew Sturgis well that Sturgis was in contact with Anderson about the upcoming break-in.

This person also swore that when Sturgis was out on bond, he drove him to a Miami hotel where Sturgis picked up a stack of $50 bills which he said had come from Anderson.

In an interview, Sturgis denied these things. Anderson, questioned under oath, denied giving Sturgis any money, but was "vague" when asked about information he had received "any time" from Sturgis about the Democratic party or the Democratic National Committee.

When queried about his just happening to bump into Sturgis at a Washington airport hours before the Watergate break-in, something Anderson had admitted in print himself, the columnist said he was there to catch a plane to Cleveland to make a speech. But Anderson could not remember where he spoke, and a check of that city's newspapers turned up no reports of his visit.

Thompson also tells how William Haddad, a friend of Democratic National Chairman Larry O'Brien and the editor of a New York community paper, wrote O'Brien almost three months before the break-in telling him about some "very disturbing" stories about GOP sophisticated surveillance techniques, stories that had been told him by a "counter-wiretapper" friend of his.

O'Brien testified that he instructed the DNC's director of communication, John Stewart, to follow up on the matter. Stewart did, and flew to New York, where he met with Haddad, Arthur Woolston-Smith, a private investigator who said he had heard reports in the intelligence community that Democratic headquarters in Washington was about to be bugged, and a friend of Haddad's.

Haddad, in a letter to Stewart following this meeting said that he believed these reports were "true and explosive," and told the GOP Watergate investigators that he had sent material on this subject to Jack Anderson twice, but had kept no copies of the information. Anderson acknowledged receipt of this material, but said he had since lost it.

Fred Thompson's book about Watergate is a valuable addition to the literature on the subject and provides some pieces to the puzzle that have heretofore been missing.

It is certainly understandable why he and his small staff, under the press of a deadline and working with the handicap of being the minority party at the mercy of the majority, really didn't have the time or the resources to connect all the dots and they would have liked to.

But one wonders: Where was the Special Watergate Prosecutor? Where was the press? After all, a cover-up is a cover-up, right?

Footnote: The noses of the folks who published Thompson's book are a little out of joint because a part of the deal was that before anybody else got galley proofs, Quadrangle's owners, The New York Times newspaper, would get them first to see if there was any news in it, which there definitely is.

So, two months ago, proofs of the book were given to the Times' national desk, and Sunday Times editor, Max Frankel. To date, the paper has ignored the book.

"HELLO DOCTOR.... HE'S BECOMING HIS OLD SELF AGAIN....."

U.S. monitors in the Mideast

Commentary by Marquis Childs

WASHINGTON — However lasting the gleam of peace in the Middle East with a new Israeli-Egyptian disengagement, it should serve at least to throw light on the deep-seated fears and antagonisms in the way of any long-term settlement. Both for Cairo and Jerusalem the risks in this first small step are considerable.

The government of Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin was shown in a recent poll to have the support of less than a majority for the concessions made to achieve a disengagement in the Sinai. Angry opposition in the parliament and in the streets threatens the future of the Rabin coalition.

Israeli negotiators who came to Washington to wrap up the details before Secretary of State Henry Kissinger ventured on his shuttle did not conceal their disappointment over the outcome. They believed that with so much concentration on the lines of Israeli withdrawal from the Gidi and Mitle passes and surrender of the Abu Rudeis oil fields they had failed to get enough in return from Egypt.

Understandable though this is, it seems to me to ignore the fundamental Arab position. That is the demand for return of all Arab lands occupied after the 1967 war. Should we pay a price, the Arabs ask, to get back what is rightfully ours?

And it is this demand that makes any further long-term peace look, in a word, impossible. For the Israelis, with their remarkable zeal and capacities, have been building on the occupied territories; kibbutz in the Golan Heights, large construction in East Jerusalem, a whole complex in Sharm El-Shek, the outlet to the Red Sea. Any government in Jerusalem that proposed to give these territories would be quickly repudiated.

But another cause of uncertainty is the state of the Israeli economy. Immigration into the country is at the lowest point in five years and immigration, at the rate of 3 per cent of the population a year, is essential to growth and stability. Emigration out of Israel was estimated in the last 12 months at 20,000, mostly the young.

Military economic aid from the United States becomes therefore of the first importance. The Rabin government puts the figure at $3 billion, or even $3.2 billion. This would include up to $350 million compensation for loss of the oil from the Abu Rudeis fields. The total would be divided between military and economic aid.

Kissinger has said Congress will balk at such a figure. He has sugested a possible $2 billion. This is unlikely to satisfy Jerusalem nor will it be acceptable to the staunch adherents of Israel in the Senate and the House.

As for Cairo, President Anwar Sadat cannot wait too long for some means to shore up his shaky economy and give his 30 million people some reason to believe their rising expectations will be met. A consortium of sorts is being put together by western nations with the United States assuming a leading role.

The Libyan fanatic, Muammar Qaddafi, is doing his best by one means and another to bring Sadat down. Syria's Preside nt Haf ez Assad will look with dark suspicion on the new disengagement agreement and Assad has a close tie with the Russians who have supplied him with quantities of advanced weapons.

For Assad, disengagement on the Golan Heights has first priority. This will be Kissinger's next undertaking and a more difficult one.

While, since the fall of Vietnam, Americans have more and more turned away from foreign involvement, active concern with the fate of Israel continues high on the list. That is ascribed in part at least to the Zionist lobby.

A recent article in The New York Times gave details on how Zionist activists, working through sympathetic members of Congress, had blown the news of the impending sale of Hawk missiles to Jordan. That put an end to the sale.

Jewish leaders resent the use of the word lobby. They say the concern expressed in opinion and in the halls of Congress is that of most Americans for a democratic state allied to the United States in the Middle East.

The Arabs have nothing like such concerted support although, since the rise of the oil-producing states and the role of oil, they have shown far more muscle. The menace of another oil embargo sends shivers through Western Europe and Japan.

The presence under the disengagement of Americans, presumably civilians and volunteers, monitoring the disputed passes suggests a hazard to be aired in the debate over the new agreement. The suspicious will feat this as the camel's nose under the tent; a parallel to the use of American logistic support troops in the first phase of the Vietnam involvement.

Schools are not the drawing card they used to be

APPROACH
by Brenda Tanger

We came in large numbers to Newton to send our children to its schools. So it may not be easy now to accept the fact that Newton schools are not the drawing card they used to be. As another school year begins, it seems that, in spite of constant support for the word "change," the Newton Educatin Establishment does not find it easy to accept its own changed status.

This is the first of two articles intended to consider why there is so much animosity among Newton citizens directed toward the schools. Is "cost" really the provocative word, or is it a fact that people are not necessarily convinced that the years of change, have really yielded better education?

Newton's schools were never cheap; they were, for quite a while, known as "superb" - and they were costly! Yet in the days when Newton was a conservative Republican stronghold, there was far less anger about school expenditures than there is in Newton's present more liberal milieu.

At one time people who had no children in the schools, thinking that the monetary values of their homes reflected the excellent system, absorbed the costs with minimal complaints. Now, while Newton is considered to have a "good" system, its equal is available in a substantial number of other suburban communities.

No suburban system is, of course, as academically demanding as in its traditional past, and there is great uniformity among schools in the new freedoms. Now one "good" system is apt to be a reasonable facsimile of another.

S.A.T. scores nationwide have dropped precipitiously in the past decade, and all rationalizations short of "less learning" have failed. Language skills and reasoning levels have also declined. People who pay high school taxes feel abused by these facts.

With learning in traditional disciplines minimized and with academic rule-making scorend as regimentation, a good heart beating the rap-session drums of social responsibility was often mistaken for the "educated person." However, the greater community began to equate this with a corruption of the intellect.

The mid-60's and early 70's were characterized by schools and educators with a tendency to accept social conscience as a substitute for intellectual development (instead of as a fine personal attribute). This changed the entire image of the institution of education. Sadly, in the process of change, "violence," which used to be a dictionary word, became a deed, particularly common in high schools.

Evanston (Illinois) Township High, like Newton, was always a "top" school. Recently, however, Evanstown High became the scene of fire, theft and vandalism. Its superintendent blamed the courts for the school's inability to punish and to retain discipline.

Perhaps the courts have been the villains, but the net results are the same. The old "top" schools are now lost in new generalizations. So now it is the taxpayers who are unhappy, and the students, for all the efforts to make them overjoyed with school, complain just as much as in the more demanding days.

Our neighbor, Brookline, was also customarily considered to have schools among the "best". Now the "best" have been homogenized in a very acceptable mediocrity–good schools, yes, but no longer necessarily the best. The idea of social action replacing intellectual drive has taken its toll.

For example, in 1972 Brookline High announced that English classes that year would not be tracked, that there was much to learn in English besides English, and that gifted students could learn from those without academic motivation. Certainly great numbers of taxpayers with other ideas had to be outraged by such a downgrading of the intellect.

In capitulation to fleeting educational fads, the schools started about a decade ago to yield to some abstract life-adjustment theory. Yet while students were being told to view competition with scorn, the Newton schools, the administration and the teachers were continuing to compete for the proliferating grants then available.

What they all did not realize was that a disenchantment with the schools was growing. Moreover, as the value of discipline--self-driven or imposed--diminishes, so do schools deteriorate physically: try walking down a Newton South corridor some mid-term day.

In the recent past schools tried to be all things to all students–to assume the roles of parent, confessor, philosopher. Teaches, sensitized to every student nod and sigh, responded by lessening demand. The idea spread, with Newton, in this area as in others, being a leader. Now most "good" suburban schools march to the same drummer.

The years of come-as-you-are and do-as-you-like education took their toll. Administrators and teachers (like parents) did not have the courage to challenge the demands of inexperienced students. Since students were thought to have been so wise, teachers (and parents) might just as well have folded their tents and silently stolen away.

For this, people do not happily pay high taxes.

Bravo!

To the Editor:

I must enter my dissent from the opinion of your drama critic, Randy Mudarri, who, it would seem, lacks proper perception when he describes Miss Leslie Golov in her performance in a scene from Neil Simon's "Plaza Suite," as "underplaying" and "lacking inflection."

Quite the contrary! I feel that Miss Golov succeeded in projecting an imaae of a modern American wife, troubled, anguished but with dignity unscathed, in a situation that goes far beyond the immediate, comical and trivial nonsense about a daughter who has locked herself in the hotel bathroom when she is supposed to get married.

Had Miss Golov elected the superficial course of mugging through, she would have undoubtedly gleaned an extra few laughs by farce, but at the cost of her subtle art, the art of conveying a woman with attributes described above in her relationship with her harried American husband, a relationship which the sensitive member of the audience can be encouraged to extrapolate on, thanks to the restraint with which young Miss Golov presents her.

Well done, Miss Golov!

Save the rink

(Editor's note: The following letter was sent to Mayor Theodore D. Mann with a copy to the Graphic). Dear Mayor Mann

I was sad to read in the Aug. 14 Newton Graphic of the financial problems of the Charles River Skating Center and the possibility that the building could cease being used as a rink.

As a new skater who just learned the sport this year, I hope some arrangement can be worked out. It is important for ice skating enthusiasts of this area that the rink continue to operate, whether as a privately owned rink or under public management.

Serving two diverse interests of ice skating (figure skating and ice hockey), the Charles River Skating Center is an outstanding facility for both children and adults to go to for exercise, entertainment and the development of physical skills at all levels.

A skating center equipped with three skating rinks is too valuable to the recreation of the community to be converted into just another industrial park building.

Budget by program

To the Editor:

In a letter to the editor in the Aug. 7 edition, School Committeeman Henry Delicata from Ward 1 indicated his being a "novice to the school administration's budgeting procedures" as well as his having "great difficulty interpreting and analyzing the budget."

As an alternative, Mr. Delicata supports a program of budget break out, school by school.

I have good news for Mr. Delicata. There is a school by school budget breakout, entitled "Budget by Program and Location." Its extensive information was prepared and available to School Committee members during the budget review process. It was also available at School Deprartment headquarters and City Hall.

I hope Mr. Delicata was not unduly handicapped in his ability to make vital, budgetary decisions without referring to this available information.

Favors office building for Norumbega land

To the Editor:

The following is an open letter to the Board of Aldermen on the use of land formerly known as Norumbega, parcels A, B, and C:

An office building has three primary benefits to the city of Newton and its community. First, it produces a substantial tax surplus for one of the few remaining developable sites in Newton. With the city's policy of taking land every time a developer proposes anything greater than a duplex home, this site becomes more important for the tax revenue. While this site lies dormant, the city loses over $100,000 worth of potential revenue per year.

Unless the board approves the new petition, it will probably be another year or two before some plan is finally approved at an additional loss of $200,000-$300,000 to the city for a total opportunity cost of approximately $400,000. On an ongoing basis, an office building will generate double revenue of an apartment project (43 units) — $120,000 vs. $60,000.

Secondly, the property has always been a commercial site which should be visually improved. It was zoned "business" until 1949, but continued to be used commercially until the park and bus terminal closed down. In fact, the neighborhood and general public continued using the site as a convenient parking spot and disposal area until the access was closed last fall. The people who argue "no zone change" are actually opposed to any development and would fight apartment usage just as vehemently. Since the site was always used commercially, the key issue is "Is this specific office building right for this site?" Architecturally, the building with extensive landscaping will enhance the gateway to the city from Rt. 128.

Do you want to keep the Perini Corp. and the community at odds and under continual pressure from more development proposals? Let's hope that the Board of Aldermen talks constructively on the new petition.

Study finds several factors in pain relief from acupuncture

Lennig W. Chang, an internist at Newton-Wellesley Hospital, is co-author of a report on a study of the effects of acupuncture on the pain associated with osteoarthritis.

The study was reported in the August issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

The study showed that while patients experienced improvement in chronic pain of osteoarthritis after acupuncture treatments in the traditional needle points, other patients given false acupuncture treatment in random points also obtained similar relief.

Only patients with a diagnosis of osteoarthritis participated in the study.

The aim of the study was to clarify the effect of acupuncture on pain associated with one chronic disease, namely osteoarthritis, and did not attempt to determine acupuncture's effect on the disease process itself.

Forty patients who suffer from osteoarthritis (resulting from the wear and tear of the aging process) were randomly assigned either to an experimental or a control group. The experimental group received acupuncture treatments at sites of the body corresponding to traditional Chinese acupuncture points.

In the control group, the needles were placed outside of, but adjacent to, classical acupuncture points. This was the "place bo" group. A placebo is a harmless substance or treatment given to subjects in experiments after which they might experience relief.

The study, conducted at New England Medical Center Hospital, found that both groups experienced reduction in pain after the treatments. Furthermore, there was no measurable difference in response between the two groups.

To evaluate the response to the acupuncture treatments, three variables were analyzed-tenderness, pain and joint mobility. All three variables were evaluated by a rheumatologist (Dr. Chang) and a psychiartrist, as well as being reported subjectively by the patients.

Dr. Chang and his co-authors attribute the study's results to a variety of theories, including the fact that the improvements might have occurred during the natural course of osteoarthritis. In other words, pain relief might have occurred regardless of the treatment.

Psychological factors that may have affected the patients include their desire and expectation of pain relief, the doctor's expectiation of therapeutic results, and widespread publicity about acupuncture's effectivness in relieving pain.

According to the study, the possibility also may exist that needle treatments, regardless of their placement at acupuncture sites, created a physiologic effect that altered the condution of pain impulses before they reached higher brain centers.

In any case, the physicians conclude that it is not only difficult to accurately assess a treatment procedure like acupuncture, but that the data point to the need for additional studies which may help explain this ancient Chinese treatment method and increase understanding of the pain phenomenon.

Silton announces candidacy

ago, when the school committee reversed its decision to cloase Newton Jr. College in the face of a packed audience of Newton Jr. College staff and students, he dared to speak out as a minority of one against the injustice of having Newton taxpayers subsidize students from neighboring towns in the face of a growing state college system and he warned against the vague hope of state takeover in light of the state's intensifying economic agonies.

When the School Committee decided to increase Newtons METCO enrollment in midyear he presented a petition by 1561 residents requesting a delay in the vote until the effect of property revaluation was known, the declining enrollment report received and to what extent the city would be reimbursed. Although dismayed at the School Committee's virtual disregard of a petition signed by so many citizens, he felt that at least some victory was won by Newton taxpayers when the school committee finally agreed to accept METCO state funds as does practically every other METCO participating community.

The recent school committee budget hearings presented another situation where Silton felt it necessary to raise his voice in the city-wide attack upon the School Committee's perfunctory approval of the administration budget. Although philosophically in favor of fiscal autonomy, he has constantly warned that it can only survive when accompanied by fiscal responsibility.

As a parent of five children currently enrolled at all levels of public education, he is certainly concerned with quality of education. As one who has made his own way in the private sector of the economy, he recognizes there is a point at which the burgeoning public sector can no longer be supported.

"Notwithstanding our history of largely effective and dedicated teachers, concerned parents and willingness to pay for good education, we must be certain that our quality of schooling reflects the price being paid," he said.

The School Committee should be sensitive to such facts as only one-third of the taxpayers having children in the public schools, declining enrollments with a concomitant doubling of educational staff and quadrupling of school expenditures in the last fifteen years, a lack of teaching the basics, and the unjust, real possibility of long-time Newton residents being taxed out of their homes. Fiscal vigilance is necssary to provide taxpayers with safeguards against an overpriced and possibly fiscally inefficient school system which accounts for approximately 50 per cent of their city tax rate.

With the prospect of strictly a local election in November, the people of Newton will have an ideal opportunity to examine the various candidates and decide on those candidates who will afford responsible and responsive representation. Only an interested and participating majority of the electorate can preclude financial disaster at the hands of self-serving minority interests.

ministrators, and other school personnel.

"Implementing Chapter 766, a law designed to reach out to children with physical, mental or emotional handicaps," says Schwamm, "is especially significant to me. It is my opinion, based upon recent experiences, that the regulations implementing the law have been administratively cumbersome and that the responsibility thrust upon local school systems goes beyond their financial capabilities. Modifications of the regulations presently under consideration would improve this situation."

Schwamm feels that his present employment with the Community Mental Health and Retardation Center and his continuing studies at Brandeis provide him the background to participate in seeing that this law is effectively carried out in Newton.

Concerning the frictions which have developed over the years between the School Committee and other elected officials, Schwamm says, "For me, the starting point in developing trust and cooperation among these groups begins with finding common objectives. Reducing vandalism, finding alternative uses for vacated buildings, and developing standard procedures for evaluating all programs and services funded with Newton taxes are some of the issues I would like to see worked on jointly by the city administration, School Committee and aldermen. I would like to participate in increasing the cooperation and effectiveness of these groups. Thereby, we can increase the confidence of the people of Newton in city government."

Schwamm is presently a member of the Newton Coalition for Children With Sepcial Needs, a member of the local Newton-Wellesley-Weston Council for Children, and ex-officio board member of the Multi-Service Center. He served on the Newton Youth Commission's advisory board for two years.

This past year he was involved in the alcohol program presented at both Newton high schools. Schwamm is an elected member of the alumni executive board of the Boston College School of Social Work.

He is a member of the American Public Health Association and National Gerontological Society, and has served as a lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

revising budget and accounting procedures; tightening purchasing policies; and replacing any inefficient personnel.

2. BASIC SKILLS—More emphasis should be placed on the basic skills of reading, writing, spelling, and fundamental math at the elementary school level. There are many students at the junior high and high school level who are having problems with the basic skills, and not all of them have learning disabilities. We should direct our monies and attention toward improving the students' basic skills.

3. DECLINING ENROLLMENT—Before any elementary school is closed, a master plan should be developed in which total citywide space needs are evaluated and projected for the next five years. We should determine the total cost savings, alternative uses of school buildings, and the social impact on the neighborhood children and parents.

4. METROPOLITAN EDUCATION—Participation in any program should be strictly on a voluntary basis with full reimbursement of tuition costs, including transportation. The city of Boston, not the state, should pay for these costs, since it is the responsibility of each city to educate their children. An alternative would be a voluntary exchange program with the metropolitan children similar to the American Field Service program we now have in our school system. Foreign and out-of-state students are exchanged with Newton students every school year.

with the School Committee to insure that it too is fiscally responsible.

Vacated buildings

City owned property that is vacated should be converted to alternate usage which is consistent with the need of the neighboring community. It is a waste of the taxpayers money to maintain abandoned property. Vacated premises can cause a deterioration of the surrounding neighborhood.

Transportation

Newton residents need adequate public transportation. It's lack is most apparent in Ward 8. Today public transportation is not only a social need but an economic necessity.

Recreation

Better facilities for recreation must be provided throughout the city, particularly on the South side. As an example, the city should help make it possible to keep the Charles River Skating Rink operating. Since Newton contributes significant amounts to the M.D.C., certainly the M.D.C. should be urged to operate the facility.

Mrs. Creem believes that the charactertistics of the city should be maintained, and requests for changes in zoning must be approached carefully. Social and economic impacts must be determined and the feelings of Newton residents living closest to such properties must be given very strong consideration.

She is confident that her real estate experience as a practicing attorney is an asset to understanding and making decisions on many of the issues that are considered by the Board of Aldermen. Another area which demands the attention of the Board is Newton's complex budgetary process. Her background in accounting and finance is invaluable in this regard, she feels.

Mrs. Creen and her husband Harvey reside at 15 Esty Farm Rd. with ther two children, Stacey and Gary. Both children attend the Newton public schools. Mrs. Creem earned both her bachelor of science degree in business administration and her doctor of jurisprudence at Boston University. She is now a practicing attorney.

For many years Mrs. Creem has been deeply involved in the Oak Hill Park Association as an officer and as its legal advisor. She is also corresponding secretary of the Memorial School P.T.A. Besides being a member of the Massachusetts Bar Association, she is active in various charitable organizations. She was recently elected to "Who's Who in Massachusetts." The Creems are members of Temple Beth Avodah.

believes in automony for the School Committee, but not at the cxpense of the citizens of Newton.

He is a Democrat by birth, neither liberal or conservative, but a practical man by choice.

He has three boys who attended the Newton School system. His oldest son is a junior at Boston College, his middle son is a freshman at Muhlenberg College, and his youngest son attends Weeks Junior High School.

He believes that all monies spent in Newton should be considered very carefully as to its effect on the Newton tax rate. He also believes that there is no unwritten law that says taxes have to go up each year, and if elected he will be very hard to conince that the tax rate cannot be held down.

He believes that certain individuals in Newton think that they speak for the citizens of Newton and have been imposing their will on them when in fact they do not represent the views of the majority. If elected, he will try to listen and react to the wishes of the citizens of Newton.

In my opinion, the School Department has loaded the taxpayer down beyond belief. Nowhere does it say that you need one teacher for each five to 10 students. I think the Newton school system should act responsibly. The taxpayer cannot take anymore. We've had it.

"In my walks around the city, I have talked to taxpayers who live near playgrounds. These poor people have to contend with abuse, obscenity, drinking and general disorder every night of the week. The real young children go home early in the evening, and the older ones turn up to take their places, not running out to of energy until 2 or 3 a.m.

"Now, we can get to ecology and bicycle paths8, and who is going to build them and where shall they be built?

'.Unless something is done, and quickly, we will have many people leaving Newton.

"I say let's restore common sense.

"Regarding the possibility of an art center in Newton, I feel it should not be sponsored by the City of Newton, but, rather, all expenses taken care of by private sources."

As a life long citizen of Newton, Tennant attended the Newton schools and earned his B.A. degree at Staley College. Tennant is also a veteran of the U.S. Air Force, having spent two and a half years in the Southwest Pacific during World War II.

Active in civic work, Tennant is a past Commander of the Burns Kerr American Legion No. 333 and Newton American Legion Post 48. He has served as a member of the mayor's advisory board under Mayors Lockwood, Gibbs, Basbas and presently under Mayor Mann.

Tennant has also served as treasurer of the Claflin School P.T.A. in Newtonville and as president of the Pierce School P.T.A. in West Newton. He has been advanced gifts chairman of the United Fund and director and vice chairman of the Newton Chapter of the American Red Cross. Tennant has been president and secretary of the Newton Kiwanis Club and presently serves as president of the Kiwanis Charitable Foundation, Inc. He was also recently honored with the Newton Kiwanis "Man of the Year" Award.

Tennant is also a member of the Newton Lodge of Elks, serving on the scholarship and United Nations Day committees.

For many years he has been involved in the Newton Central Little League, serving in the capacity of treasurer. Presently, Tennant is a member of the Civil Defense Board of the City, past president of the Newton-Needham Chamber of Commerce and vice president of the Newton Boys Club. He is also past president of the Insurance Agents Association of Newton and a member of the Ancient & Honorable Artillary Company. Recently, Ald. Tennant was cited by the United States Public Relations Service as a distinguished Massachusetts citizen and his name appears in the 1975 edition of "Who's Who in Massachusetts."

In his capacity at City Hall, Tennant has represented the citizens of Newton by having served on the Franchise & Licenses Committee, Street Traffic Committee, and is presently serving as a member of the City Planning and Public Works Committee, serving also for a number of years on the Finance Committee.

The alderman is married to the former Margaret A. McAfee of Newton. Mr. and Mrs. Tennant reside with their children at 189 Mt. Vernon St., West Newton.

Tennant stated that in his wish to be re-elected alderman-at-large, that there is a great challenge with the problems that already exist and the ones that will appear in the years to come. His concerns not only apply to holding the tax rate down but also to drugs, the elderly, crime, housing and the youth of the City of Newton. He feels that the City is at a crossroads and great caution should be exercised now and in the future to protect the interests of the citizens against spiraling inflation costs and high taxation.

The future holds many problems which will need the concentrated effort of every citizen. His statement also shows concern with the apathy of the voter and a strong need for the most qualified elected officials. Many long hours of dedicated work are being put forth by the Board and should be backed up by the strong interest needed by those that live in our City to keep it the proud City that it is now and will continue to be in the future.

homeowners' tax burden because they demand minimal services from the city compared to the tax revenues which they produce.

Sacks supported revaluation, feeling that a court order. which arose as a result of the Taxpayers' suit, left the city no choice. He hopes, however, that relief measures will be enacted by both the State Legislature and the Board of Aldermen to help those people to whom revaluation has caused a genuine hardship. For the same reason, Alderman Sacks is very pleased with the verdict that the court has given on the Taxpayers' suit regarding the School budget cut.

Long a supporter of the School Committee, and still an ardent believer in that committee's financial autonomy, Sacks feels that fiscal responsibility was lacking in this year's school budget. From his position on the Finance Committee, Sacks has continually sought to maintain the standard of excellence of Newton's schools by giving the School Committee and its administrators a free hand at educational managements.

Yet, he feels that the School Committee and especially the Board of Aldermen must be responsive to the two-thirds of the populations who do not have children in the public school. It was in this spirit that Sacks supported the $500.00 school budget cut.

Sacks feels that the important issues in the next election are:

Showing financial responsibility at all levels of government.

Making it possible for longtime Newton residents to remain in Newton without being financially squeezed out by the continually rising taxes.

Maintaining the attractive features of Newton the way they have always been.

Sacks feels that the knowledge and experience he has gained during his five terms on the Board make him an asset to the Board, while his continued enthusiasm and responsibility provide a service for his constituents.

Doctor of Philosophy in Medicinal Chemistry from the University of Minnesota.

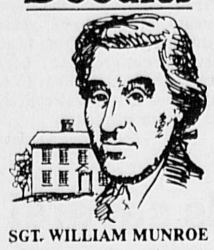

In Kier's opinion, the most important concern of residents in Ward 4 is the cost of government in Newton. The burden of local taxes has reached the point where some people must fact the possibility of not being able to live in the city. Local government must be aware of the consequences of every piece of legislation in terms of the cost to the taxpayer. Egery program considered must be justified in terms of the general value to all citizens. Each department of the city must give quality service to thr residents while operating in a cost-conscious manner.

Quality education is a desire of every parent in Ward 4. Kier feels that it is now always more dollars that make a good school system but imaginative use of funds which the taxpayer can afford. To create a climate where quality education coexists with careful management of tax dollars, the Board of Aldermen and the School Commmttee must cooperate.

Auburndale and Lower Falls are great residential areas of the city. Kier feels that a ward alderman must work to prrserve the quality of living through kareful zoning, preservation of recreational facilities and measures to insure pedestrian and vehicle safety.

Based upon his previous experience as a councilman, his background and his involvement in the neighborhood, Kier feels that his views are widely shared by residents of Auburndale and Lower Falls. As a rrsult, eh feels that he could serve Ward 4 as an effective alderman.

Heroic Sgt. Munroe is typical of the thousands of minutemen who assembled to protect life, liberty and property. These minutemen were forerunners of today's Massachusetts National Guard.

Pines' bill passes legislature assures quick adoption process

Representative Lois G. Pines' bill to quicken the independent adoption process won final approval from the Massachusetts Legislature last week, and was sent to Governor Dukakis for his signature.

This bill will speed up the process for independent adoptions by empowering the probate court to appoint a licensed charitable organization engaged in child-care and adoption services to prepare and file the investigative report which by statute the Department of Public Welfare must file before an adoption decree can be granted.

Rep. Pines said: "Under current law the Department of Public Welfare is given 30 days to conduct an investigation and file a report with the probate court. This report helps the court assess the desirability of the proposed adoption.

"If the department fails to submit its report within 30 days, under the proposed legislation, the court may upon motion of the petitioner, appoint any licensed charitable organization which is involved in child care and adoption to conduct the inquiry and make the necessary report. This report shall have the same force and effect as a report of the Department of Public Welfare.

"If the court finds that the department has made substantial progress but failed to complete its report in 30 days due to circumstances beyond its control, it shall grant the department an additional 30 days in which to complete the report."

"The department," said Rep. Pines, "has only a minimal staff which operates on a statewide basis to investigate the desirability of all proposed independent and private adoptions. As a consequence of a very heavy caseload and a limited staff the department is often unable to complete the investigation within 30 days. In fact, it is not at all uncommon for such an investigation to take as long as 12 to 14 months to complete.

"This legislation is designed to alleviate the harmful anxiety and tension which accompanies needless delay in the adoption process by expanding the competent manpower available to conduct the necessary investigation."

Attorney Paul D. Pearson of Wayland, legislative chairman of the Family Law Committee of the Boston Bar Association, who was actively involved in the passage of the legislation, said "Obviously the parents and child will be spared needless and often destructive delay. The Department of Public Welfare will experience a lightening of their burden which will allow them to competently kmmplete their investigations in a much shorter period of time.

"The independent organizations, which are licensed by the state to provide such services, will be able to maximize the utilization of their staff resources. Recently, some organizations were forced to lay off employees because of a lack of children available for independent adoption," Pearson said.

Co-sponsoring the legislation with Rep. Pines is Rep. Ann C. Gannet (R-Wayland).

Project Access '76 to make historic sites more accessible

Old North Church has begun a number of physical modifications to make the historic site more accessible to everyone.

The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Golledge, vicar, said the modifications are part of a long-range plan to make "Old North" as barrier-free as possible without destroying its architectural integrity.

This came about in part as the result of the project, ACCESS '76, a joint effort of the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society and United Community Planning Corporation.

A grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and funds from The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities helped to support the undertaking. Its purpose was to survey Greater Boston historical and cultural sites, particularly those on the Freedom Trail, and recommend ways to eliminate architectural barriers that would make the sites more accessible to the physically handicapped and aging. Old North Church was one of the 100 facilities visited in this effort in preparation for Boston's participation in the nation's bicentennial.

Among other historical sites making similar modifications are the Harrison Gray Otis House of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, and the U.S.S. Constitution and Bunker Hill Monument museums.

To Your Readers:

The responsibility for the safety of children returning to school belongs to motorists, students, parents, school patrol officers, school bus drivers and to safety officials.

It is only through a joint effort that everyone concerned can be made aware of the perils which highway traffic presents and the steps that must be taken to avoid accidents.

Motorists must observe the school bus law and come to a full stop when school bus lights are flashing!

Parents should accompany young children and teach the safest routes to school!

Students should cross at corners or within crosswalks and ride bicycles single file obeying the rules of the road!

Please---do your part to keep your community's children safe.

Thank you,

Newest place: "face to face"

It's a dream come true for women of all ages . . . a limitless amount of free cosmetics to try before buying.

This heavenly oasis is in Jordan Marsh's Boston store where Face To Face cosmetics invites (nay, urges) you to come be their guest.

" 'Try before you buy' is the motto," explains the president of the firm, young, handsome Steve Rapaport at the opening of Face To Face. "Cosmetics today have become very expensive and women have the right to know whether an item is good for them before making the purchase.

"We believe," he stated, "this is the most exciting cosmetic concept in the past 25 years. Our cosmetics are produced according to the highest standards of excellence, beautifully packaged, at a fraction of what they would cost from any other comparable cosmetic line. I predict that in years to come other companies will emulate our sales method. How many times has a woman gone to a cosmetic counter where she was high-pressured (and sometimes bullied) into buying ten, twenty, thirty dollars worth of cosmetics, some of which she never used, because she really didn't need them or they were the wrong colors for her and her wardrobe.

"Women no longer want to be hassled in this manner. Today's women are independent and know what they want and what looks best on them. We have excellent sales people to assist customers but not take on a dictatorial air."

Face To Face has a treatment line which stresses simplification, requiring only three minutes in the morning and three minutes in the evening. Six minutes every woman owes herself. First, determine your skin type.

Which of the four types of skin is yours?

1. Normal Skin: Healthy color and tone. Firm, smooth texture.
2. Dry Skin: Fine pore texture. Scattered flakiness and occasionally a dry, overall taut appearance with expression lines around the eyes and mouth.
3. Oily Skin: Shiny appearance over entire face. Flakiness throughout the T-zone resulting from excess oils that may have accumulated and dried on the surface of the skin. May have blemishes, blackheads, thick coarse-looking skin with enlarged pores.
4. Combination Skin: Slight oiliness on forehead, nose and chin areas; normal skin condition on the rest of the face.

Products in the 6 minute skin care line are: Deep Gleansing Lotion Bath for cleansing, Skin Freshener for toning and refining pore texture, Herbal Astringent to stimulate the skin, Moisture Lotion to supply lost moisture and give a dewey freshness and Fluffy Nighttime Beauty Treatment which replenishes precious oils and moisture lost throughout the day.

"Put it on, take it off," says Rapaport, and that's what we want women to do with our makeup. We want them before they buy so they are truly satisfied with the product she buys. I hope that women of all ages will take the time to try everything...I don't care if they spend five hours trying products on before making a purchase.

The "face to face" counter, street floor, Jordan Marsh in Boston

"We have 88 shades of lipstick, 48 shades of eye makeup just to name a few of our varied items. We have a miracle cover-stick which comes in 3 colors and this should be used by men as well as women to cover dark shadows under the eyes.

The busy Face to Face snow white counter, with its many jewel-toned colors recessed on the surface was surrounded by interested women and young girls, dipping into pots with disposable paper dabbers.

There were murmurs of appreciation not only for the invitation to "play makeup" but for the minimally-priced products. Basic prices are around $2.00 with the most expensive item $2.75. There is also a coupon bonus; for every 10 items purchased, the customer will receive the 11th free of charge.

Attractive Karen Richardson of Jordan Marsh's advertising staff, shared some professional information gleaned when she had studied and taught cosmetology.

"There are three basic skin tones–olive, sallow and fair skin. You can go in many directions when you choose makeup. For an olive complexion-use pink or other warm colors. With a sallow complexion you can go towards the bronze colors and away from shades with a yellow cast. Those with a pink or fair complexion can go towards the browns of the olive.

"When makeup hits your skin the makeup reacts and so the best thing to do is test one color on one cheek, another on the other cheek and one on your forehead. After a minute or so, the color that remains closest to your natural color is the one you should choose."

At the present time Jordan Marsh's Boston store is the leader in presenting this new approach to cosmetics. Soon their Peabody branch will also boast a similar counter – until then, no matter what your age, you're invited to "play makeup" at the Face To Face cosmetic counter at Jordan's and have fun!

Question: I am interested in a recipe for a carrot cake–one that has raisins in it, if possible. Thanks.

Mrs. S.U., Canton

Answer: High, moist and delicious, here it is:

RAISIN CARROT CAKE

1¼ cups unsifted all purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon
4 eggs, separated

Question: I've never had any luck with making my own marinated mushrooms and we love them especially served over crisp green lettuce. I'd really appreciate a super kind of recipe. Thanks very much.

T.N.W., Waban

Answer: Serve these marinated mushrooms as an appetizer or along with your salad–you'll find them to be quite good.

MARINATED MUSHROOMS

½ cup oil
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons white vinegar
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon tarragon leaves, crushed
⅛ teaspoon pepper
1 pound mushrooms, sliced
Crisp salad greens

In jar with tight fitting lid, combine oil, lemon juice, vinegar, salt, tarragon and pepper. Cover tightly and shake until well mixed. Pour over mushrooms in large bowl. Cover and chill for 1 hour or overnight. Stir occasionally. Serve over salad greens. Makes 6 servings.

Mrs. G. E., West Roxbury has sent in an old family recipe for yogurt soup. Our thanks for:

2 pounds plain yogurt;
1 egg
½ cup rice
½ cup mint leaves
2 tablespoons flour

Mix yogurt, egg and flour well with 2 quarts of water until smooth. Add the rice and put on medium heat. Stir continuously until the mixture thickens noticeably. Leave it to boil for 10 minutes or until the rice is soft. Turn off the heat and add the melted butter, mint leaves and salt and pepper to taste. Serves 6-8.

Question: When I didn't need it, it seemed that unusual fruit salads were always in print and now that I need a lovely recipe to serve 12, I can't find a fruit dessert that will be pretty and tasty. Can you help me?

Mrs. C. McL., Newton

3½ cups watermelon chunks
4 peaches, peeled, sliced

2½ cups seedless grapes

Place half the orange slices on bottom of salad bowl. Top with a layer of watermelon chunks. Repeat with strawberries and bananas. Place remaining orange slices around outer edge of bowl and fill center with grapes. Serve with Fresh Lemon Custard Sauce or Calypso Dressing. Serves 12.

¼ cup light rum
2 tablespoons light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon ground ginger
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon fresh squeezed lemon juice

Food and Fashion

by Ruth Lenson

Across the kitchen counter

Omar Khayyam may have thought "A loaf of bread, a jug of wine and thou" was sufficient for both body and soul, however, for better nutrition the "loaf of bread" should be matched up with sliced chicken, turkey, roast beef, tuna, cheese, salad greens . . . and we could go on and on.

Sandwich making remains a cullinary art participated in by children and adults as well–no other form of cooking allows for as much mixing-and-matching of ingredients. With school lunches in the offering, this is a good time to broaden the sandwich experience far behond the familiar peanut butter and jelly combination or languid slices of luncheon meat between soft white bread. Try the unusual--food layered between slices of old-world ryes, pumpernickels, raisin bread and the pouch-like pita bread.

If you're watching your families' weight, you can still feed them sandwiches, occasionally at least, by omitting the top slice of bread thereby saving about 70 calories. Serve the sandwich with a knife and fork.

Even the most mundane sandwich can be flavorably improved with a relish spread, such as the apple-grape combination which follows. Try it on a chicken, turkey or even ham and cheese sandwich. A new tuna sandwich idea is the Luau Tuna Salad Sandwich.

For the past 20 years, the National Sandwich Idea Contest (participants must be working professional chefs) has produced 20 winners. The Reuben sandwich still remains the most famous of all past prize winning entries. Following are the four top winners with Old China Town Pork Burger taking top honors.

APPLE GRAPE RELISH

1 cup grape preserves
¼ cup finely chopped apple
2 tablespoons whole berry cranberry sauce
¼ teaspoon grated orange peel

Used as a spread on ham-and-cheese or other cold cut sandwiches. Makes about 1¼ cups sauce.

¼ cup chopped toasted almonds
¼ cup minced celery

1 tablespoon lemon juice
Lettuce leaves
8 slices pumpernickel bread

In bowl, combine tuna, almonds, celery, onion, mayonnaise, preserves and lemon juice. Blend well. Serve on lettuce leaves on pumpernickel bread and garnish with green pepper rings. Makes 4 sandwiches.

Project Access '76 to make historic sites more accessible

Old North Church has begun a number of physical modifications to make the historic site more accessible to everyone.

The Rev. Dr. Robert W. Golledge, vicar, said the modifications are part of a long-range plan to make "Old North" as barrier-free as possible without destroying its architectural integrity.

This came about in part as the result of the project, ACCESS '76, a joint effort of the Massachusetts Easter Seal Society and United Community Planning Corporation.

A grant from the National Endowment for the Arts and funds from The Commonwealth of Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities helped to support the undertaking. Its purpose was to survey Greater Boston historical and cultural sites, particularly those on the Freedom Trail, and recommend ways to eliminate architectural barriers that would make the sites more accessible to the physically handicapped and aging. Old North Church was one of the 100 facilities visited in this effort in preparation for Boston's participation in the nation's bicentennial.

Among other historical sites making similar modifications are the Harrison Gray Otis House of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities, and the U.S.S. Constitution and Bunker Hill Monument museums.

A result of ACCESS '76 is the publication of A Blueprint for Action, which is being announced by William G. Saltonstall, advisory committee chairman. Included in the blueprint are cost estimates for accessibility features.

Saltonstall, who is a member of the Easter Seal Society Board of Directors and former director of the Peace Corps in Nigeria, said, "It is our hope that this blueprint will serve to stimulate action on the part of advocates, administrators, planners, legislators, law enforcers, the handicapped and elderly and other concerned citizens to insure the fundamental rights of every American to equal access to the use of public buildings."

Speaking of the purpose and philosophy behind ACCESS '76, Dr. Golledge said, "Our society will be bright or ugly...open or closed as we, the people, are bright or ugly, open or closed. What we want for our society will not come about just because we want it or because we organize a reasonable system of rules. What we achieve will depend on how much justice and love we bring with us into it.

"Our choices will determine whether this nation will be great, or whether it will work at all, to bring about a barrier-free society."

First Lady Betty Ford, in the report preface wrote, "One of the timeless issues during the bicentennial is the question of full participation in American life by all people. This is as important today as it was 200 years ago."

"As the months advance," wrote Senator Edward W. Brooke, "it is my hope that cooperation, energy and resourcefulness will meld to make ACCESS '76 study results and recommendations a reality."

Report recommendations include that all accessible historical and cultural sites utilize the International Wheelchair symbol of accessibility in all guidebooks and advertising pertaining to the site.

In those instances where physical modifications are impossible because of architectural or historical significance of the facility, alternative methods of viewing a site should be provided. This could be audio-visual presentations located either on the ground floor of the site or at another more accessible facility.

An audio-visual presentation of some kind is among the considerations of the Society for the Preservation of New England Antiquities for use at the Harrison Gray Otis House so that it can open its doors to welcome many more visitors than in the past.

ACCESS '76 further recommended that the structure and methodology developed in the project can and should be applied to other facilities and systems which impinge upon the freedom and independence of the physically handicapped and mobility impaired. Three systems include education, employment, housing, recreation and transportation.

The SPNEA has a two-phase physical modification plan slated to begin in mid-November at its headquarters and museum at the Harrison Gray Otis House.

Old Ironside, oldest ship in the United States Navy, is accessible only by ramps that rise and fall with the tide. Its U.S.S. Constitution Museum, designed by Alexander Parris in 1932, however, is being remodelled for total accessibility to everyone when it is opened later this year.

Bunker Hill Monument meantime has built a road up to its museum which also is undergoing physical change.

The blueprint, Saltonstall said, was achieved with the cooperation of organizations and individuals planning for the bicentennial celebration relative to the needs of the physically handicapped and those attempting to implement the regulations of the Massachusetts Architectural Barriers Board.

The Easter Seal Society is a statewide voluntary healt agency which has been a leader in the elimination of architectural barriers and in the provision of rehabilitation services to the physically handicapped.

United Community Planning Corporation is the non-profit citizen-led human services planning and research organization for the 67 cities and towns in the Massachusetts Bay area.

New fall lecture program begins

Every museum-goer has a favorite work of art or gallery that he considers a must on a Museum of Fine Arts' itinerary. It could be the Egyptian mummies, the ship models, the Impressionist collection, or a favorite watercolor.

The MFA's eight curators will share their valuable expertise and experience as they focus on their own favorite works of art in a unique, new fall lecture program -- Curators' Critique, Wednesdays, September 3 through October 29.

Visitors will meet in the Huntington Avenue lobby at 11 a.m. From there, the curator will lead the group to a gallery where a favorite work of art is on view. Curators' Critique will offer a look at the collections through the eyes of the experts, and give museum-goers a taste of the curators' enthusiasm, understanding, and love of the collections.

All are welcome to these personalized looks at the treasures of the Museum of Fine Arts. The schedule for Curators' Critique is:

Sept. 3 - Francisco Goya by Eleanor A. Sayre, curator, Prints and Drawings

Sept. 10 - Selections from Revere's Boston by Jonathan Fairbanks, curator, American Decorative Arts and Sculpture.

Sept. 17 - The Lehman Collection of Textiles by Larry Salmon, curator, Textiles.

Oct. 1 - Art, Crime, and Sex in Antiquity by Cornelius Vermeule, curator, Classical Art.

Oct. 8 - Buddhist Stone Sculpture by Jan Fontein, curator, Asiatic Art.

Oct. 15 - Reflections on the Egyptian by Dows Dunham, curator emeritus, Egyptian and Near Eastern Art.

Oct. 22 - Selections from the Medieval Collection by Robert C. Moeller, curator, European Decorative Arts and Sculpture.

Ten schools rotate teaching first -year instruments to students

Some Newton elementary school students will not be learning to play a musical instrument this fall, the school administration announced this week.

John C. Harper, assistant coordinator of the arts for music, expalined a program in which five schools will have an expanded beginning instrumental program this fall, and five others will have the program next fall.

Harper explained that more students than ever wanted to learn to play an instrument last year, but there is no money to expand the staff.

Every student who has started an instrument will continue to get band and orchestra, special performance activities, and private instrumental lessons contracted privately with the students.

The Beginning Instrumental Lessons Alternation Program will involve six schools taught by Karen Wormwood and four of the schools taught by Gary Fox.

Beginning instrumental lessons will not be taught this school year in Claflin, Hyde, Peirce, Ward and Williams, but will be available to those schools in 1976-77. Students in Burr, Davis, Hamilton, Horce Mann, and Oak Hill will be offered beginning instrumental lessons this fall but not in 1976-77.

Other schools will continue with their regular programs, where the vocal and classroom music teacher also teaches beginning instrumental lessons. No vocal music programs will be effected by the alternation plan.

INSTRUMENTS SHOWN

Newton elementary students, who are now in line for musical instrument study, and their parents have the opportunity to hear and see the various instruments in action. The Music Department faculty will illustrate the wide selection of instruments available for student study. They will give five community demonstrations at area junior high schools. These are designed to acquaint the students and parents with the Instrumental Program offered to the young student. The demonstrations will begin at 7:30 p.m. according to the following schedule:

Tuesday, September 16, at Day Junior High, for Carr, Franklin and Horace Mann, and Wednesday, Sept. 17 at Bigelow Jr. High for Cabot, Lincoln-Eliot, Underwood. Monday, Sept. 22 at Meadowbrook Junior High for Countryside, Emerson, Memorial, Oak Hill and Spaulding.

Tuesday, Sept. 23 at Warren Junior High for Angier, Burr, Davis and Hamilton.

Wednesday, Sept. 24 at Weeks Junior High for Beethoven, Bowen and Mason-Rice.

The five schools omitted from the above list will be effected by the Beginning Instrumental Lessons Alternation Program this school year.

Personal music study is important to the total development of the child. It is a rewarding experience that can provide innumerable experiences in and out of the schools' music programs. The Newton schools provide at least one year of class instrumental lessons. Students are then encouraged to take private lessons. Instrumentalists begin participation in school orchestra and bands very soon after individual instruction has started. String instruction can be started at the third grade level. All instruments can be started from the fourth grade on. Brass and woodwinds might be started in the third grade if recommended by the music specialist.

Music teachers, where time permits, are expanding instrumental offerings from the usual four instruments (clarinet, flute, violin, trumpet) to include such as tuba, cello, string bass, trombone, saxophone, and others, Newton students of all ages and their parents are encouraged to attend any one of the community demonstrations. If unable to attend, please contact your school's music faculty member to discuss your child's place in instrumental music.

Budget cuts affect heat repairs at Wrentham State School

State Rep. David J. Mofenson, House chairman of the Committee on Human Services and the Elderly, has again objected to the "penny-wise, pound-foolish" aspects of some of the Dukakis administration's budget proposals.

Making an inspection tour of the Wrentham State School for Retarded Children and Adults last week, Mofenson expressed "deep concern" for the implications of the proposed budget cuts on the quality of care and living conditions in state schools and hospitals for the retarded.

"The school has recently been ordered to cut back in its heating by 20 per cent," Mofenson said, "and at the same time its request for funds to make the heating system more efficient have been denied. Like many older state institutions, it has high ceilings and is subject to drafts. What the school wants is money to lower the ceilings and construct better insulation. But if it can't get that, it at least wants minimal plumbing regulators to permit the staff to control the heat in different areas, using it only where it is needed."

"Like many state institutions the school goes from being uncomfortably overheated to being uncomfortably underheated. Unless there are short-term plans to tear the school down, over the long run the $15,000 investment in repairs will end up saving the state substantial money," he said.

Mofenson explained that the movement toward deinstitutionalization has focused on the moderately mentally retarded. Those left behind are the more serious retarded. "While we must eliminate budgetary waste, we must not abandon our commitment to educative and therapeutic programs for the mentally retarded."

He also noted that about 25 of the retarded living at the school are from Newton.

Mofenson made the inspection with State Sen. Jack H. Backman, Senate chairman of the Committee on Human Services and the Elderly, and six other members of the House of Representatives.

Preschool program at Chestnut Hill

This fall Chestnut Hill school and the Boston College School of Education will develop a cooperative preschool program for youngsters aged 2½-5. Aside from the educational advantage the program will present area residents the opportunity of having an after program for as many afternoons (1-4:30 p.m.) as they desire.

In working cooperatively the two schools believe that they can provide a learning environment which will foster the creativity and independence of young children. Use of the creative arts, a variety of play experiences, and extensive implementation of outdoor facilities and experiences will help to focus upon development of the self-concept and competency of young children. The aim of the program reflects current research trends in early education in this country and abroad.

United Way needs $17 million for its 170 service agencies

The 1975 United Way of Massachusetts Bay campaign for $17 million kicks off this Sunday, Sept. 7, under the leadership of Thomas J. Galligan, Jr., president of Boston Edison Company.

Over 50,000 volunteers—business executives, bankers, lawyers, ministers, statesmen, educators, labor leaders, male and female, young and old, representing all racial and ethnic origins—have joined Chairman Galligan in an all-out effort to reach the 1975 goal.

Over 170 United Way agencies deliver health, family, child care and youth services to more than one million people living or working in the 66 cities and towns comprising the Massachusetts Bay community.

As the largest humanitarian effort in New England, the United Way provides the most efficient and economical way to help the greatest number of Mass. Bay residents. About one of every three benefits either directly or indirectly through the work of United Way agencies.

This year's high unemployment in the Mass. Bay area has placed an even greater burden on these agencies as they provide additional services to solve personal and family problems brought on by the economy.

Campaign Chairman Galligan noted that the 1975 goal is $1, 450,000 beyond last year's attainment.

"While this is a sizable increase in difficult economic times," he said, "it is designed to help close the $6 million gap between what the United Way is now raising and our real community needs, as evidenced by agency requests.

"Working people and companies throughout the area should all consider making full 'Fair Share' contributions to the United Way. A payroll deduction plan makes it simpler and easier to contribute 'Fair Share' amounts. Also, we must convince those corporations which support the United Way to increase their corporate gifts in order to sustain vital community services," Galligan siad.

"We have a long way to go to achieve our ultimate objective, but this community can and must, raise the funds needed to provide the important human services which have for so long been the hallmark of the United Way."

The 1975 United Way campaign runs for Sept. 7 through Nov. 20.

Labovitz saves man's life while in England

Professor George Labovitz of Auburndale was a hero-for-a-day in Ascot, England, two months ago when he used mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to save the life of a man who was pulled from a hotel pool.

Labovitz, a professor at Boston University's School of Management, was conducting an ITT management seminar at the Berystede Hotel 20 miles west of London on July 9.

When he came downstairs for breakfast, Labovitz said "Good morning" to a passer-by, who responded, "No it's not. A man drown ed in the pool."

When Labovitz went outside, he saw Dennis Marples, 67, laying on the pavement after being pulled from the pool by two hotel employees.

Labovitz said, "No one knew what to do. They were rubbing his stomach."

When he breathed into Marples, first cousin of the former Transport Minister Ernie Marples, he vomited water and bile.

To prevent him from drowning, Lebovitz turned him over on stomach and used the back pressure-arm lift method of artificial respiration for about 10 minutes before an ambulance arrived.

Marples was breathing on his own by the time the ambulance arrived, and regained consciousness in the hospital.

Labovitz learned the lifesaving techniques at the Boston YMCA in 1958 before he became a waterfront director of a now-defunct camp in Maine.

Recalling the experience of using the technique so long after he learned it, Labovitz said, "The damn thing works. It was really amazing to breath for him."

Labovitz had to leave Ascot the day after his feat and did not see or hear from Marples, but the hotel sent him a nice letter, he said.

Kreindel heads courts research project

Attorney Burton Kreindel of Newton, head of MITRE Corp's. Justice Systems Group, was recently named project director of a $110,000 research study under a grant from the National Institute of Law Enforcement and Criminal Justice of the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, U.S. Department of Justice.

The grant, a part of the National Evaluation Program, will focus on developing an insight into what is presently known about the costs and effectiveness of court information system projects. Such programs are being developed by many courts in an attempt to improve court administration and management through improvement in the effectiveness of court operations.

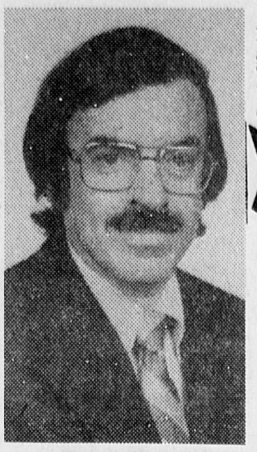

Steps in the program include reduction of backlog and delay; better treatment of witnesses, victims and defendants; and more efficient use of available human and physical resources.

The research project will provide a state-of-the-art description of court information systems to policy makers, operational and administrative court personnel, and other decision makers affected by court information system developments.

In addition, the research will identify for Congress, LEAA and other funding sources the extent of past and current projects as well as providing an assessment of the types and amount of evaluation of such projects that has been implemented.

Kreindel is responsible for the direction of MITRE's projects in the fields of judicial administration, court information systems, law enforcement and comprehensive justice system planning. He was science and technology consultant to the Massachusetts Governor's Committee on Law Enforcement and is currently responsible for projects involving justice system information and communication systems and computer support to court operations.

He is MITRE project leader for the Massachusetts Superior Court Case Management System implementation project covering the management of criminal cases through the statewide Superior Court system.

Burton Kreindel

An active member of the Massachusetts Bar, Kreindel is a member of the Law and Technology Committee of the Boston Bar Association, a contributing author to numerous reports of management studies in court operation"-, and a consultant to the Chief Justice of the Superior COurt.

Dukakis appoints Smith to architectural board

Gov. Michael Dukakis has appointed Douglas C. Smith of Newtonville to the Board of Registration of Architects.

The governor said Smith was appointed "only after an exhaustive search for someone who would hold the public interest above the interests of the profession he or she belongs to."

Smith was selected to fill a slot on the Board of Registration of Architects which is reserved for registered architects. He has broad experience in professional and public service and has won acclaim both inside the outside the profession.

The state's 27 boards of registration license and maintain standards in virtually every existing profession. Each board consists of several members of the regulated profession itself and at least one "public member," who according to legislative intent is supposed to represent the consumer interest.

Under Lola Dickerman, Secretary of Consumer Affairs, and Evvajean Mintz, director of the Division of Registration the Dukakis administration is attempting to make the boards "the tough and effective public watchdogs they were intended to be," the Governor said.

"We can further the public interest by ensuring that occupational members of the boards share a deep commitment to the consumer and to maintaining excellence in their professions, as the three persons I've appointed today do. There's no reason why these goals must come at the expense of their own professions," Dukakis added.

Smith, who holds a B.S. in architecture from the Univ. of Pennsylvania, is associated with the firm Douglas Cole Smith, AIA.

He has been a director of the Boston Society of Architects since 1960 and served on the Board of Registration in Architecture from 1967 and 1971 and as its chairman in 1970. He is a past member of both the State Building Code Commission and the National Council of Architectural Registration Boards.

Walkout

Taking a cue from NTA President Joan Warner, Newton teachers Wednesday ended a standing ovation after her speech by silently marching out of the North High School auditorium. Ms. Warner was the third of four speakers to address teachers in traditional opening day ceremonies before the start of the school year. Mayor Theodore D. Mann and School Committee Chairwoman Eleanor Rosenblum preceded her. Supt. of Schools Aaron Fink was the remaining speaker. (Williams photo) left, in protest, but some returned to be among the 150 persons that heard the superintendent.

Ben Levy, second vice president of the NTA, said one of the main points of contentio. n is that the School Committee offered to abide by last year's contract, but without granting the annual step increases.

School Committee negotiating team member Alvin Mandell said Wednesday that the step increases granted each year are a factor of the perc8ent raise in the salary scale of the contract, so could not be given until the new contract is signed.

Superintendent's speech

Superintendent of Schools Aaron Fink read his speech from a prepared text, following opening remarks by Mayor Theodore D Mann and School Committee Chairwoman Eleanor Rosenblum.

The superintendent's speech compared Newton's problems in education to those on the national and state level, which include declining enrollment, dealing with inflated costs, equalizing educational opportunity for all students, and determining a role in assisting in the achievement of racial equality.

He said, "In the midst of this decline (in enrollment by 2,000 students in five years), we have greatly expanded our programs of early childhood educaton and our services to children with special needs."

He said Newton provides for special-needs children even beyond the mandates of Chapter 766, but criticized the state's "absolute failure to provide funds to meet those mandates."

He noted that currently about 65 percent of Newton families do not have children in the schools, and that percentage may rise to 75 or 80 in the near future with current population trends.

"How can we preserve those qualities that have made this a good school system in light of a rapidly declining enrollment and an increased resistance to rising school expenditures?"

This main question, and the problem of fulfilling needs of mandated programs while providing quality education for all children, can be solved by foresight, planning, and goodwill, he said.

"Planning must go beyond the reduction of staff and the consolidation of school districts," he said, and welcomed teachers and the community to discuss these problems with him.

T he superintendent said that throughout his six years in Newton, he has seen the annual teacher turnover drop from nearly 300 to about 100. With this reduction, more time will be spent retraining older teachers and reviewing those with tenure.

The superintendent concurred with earlier remarks by Mrs. Rosenblum, who stated the quality of the teaching in the classroom depends on the teachers.

Mrs. Rosenblum also reviewed the events of the summer affecting teachers, which included the controversy and court case over the School Committee budget and the state's problems with Metco funding which did not affect Newton.

Mayor Mann greeted the teachers and assured them that the school buildings were ready for the opening of school, but said what is more important is that the people inside the schools are ready.

Noting that Newton is a prototype for school systems in the nation, he congratulated the School Committee and the superintendent for showing courage in accepting the responsibility that goes with that role, and hoped the teachers would do the same.

City pickup of glass and cans starts Oct. 1

A full-fledged recycling program will be in effect by Oct. 1, a spokesman for Mayor Theodore Mann said this week.

A contract with Recor, a recycling firm of Salem, is being prepared now. Recor will pick up glass and cans from the Rumford Avenue landfill site, where city trucks will dump the weekly curbside collections.

James Salter, the mayor's chief administrative officer, said that two city trucks will make collections on regular trash collection days.

Glass must be separated in separate barrels, one for clear uncolored glass and one for all colored glass.

Cans may be put into both barrels.

Nunzio Piselli, acting Public Works commissioner, asks all residents who participate in the program to rinse out bottles and cans before putting them into the barrels.

Barrels should be marked either by having "Glass" painted on the outside or by having a white stripe painted around the outside for clear glass and a red stripe for colored glass. Glass should not be put into bags or cartons.

The purpose of the marking is to prevent collection crews from having to look into each barrel to find out whether the contents are trash or glass and cans.

The monthly collection of newspapers for recycling will continue.

The Street Department will issue further information on the recycling program before Oct. 1.

In the gay '90s, the red-light district in the gold camp of Cripple Creek, Colo., extended from Third Street along Myers Avenue past 'parlour' houses and lavish places of entertainment and drinking to what was known as "Poverty Gulch."

The Colorado State Penitentiary at Canon City, operating on a $10 million budget and housing approximately 1,264 men and 76 women prisoners, in past years attracted as many as 50,000 to 60,000 tourists. Public tours were discontinued in 1973.

Hospital workers decide to attend nursing school

Kathy Childers of Newton has been a nurse's aide at Newton-Wellesly Hospital for the past two years and would like to become a registered nurse.

"I've always known I wanted to be an R.N., but I'm the kind of person who doesn't like to jump into things," Kathy said.

While an aide at the Cohasset Knoll Extended Care Facility, a nursing home, Miss Childers got to know a freshman at the School of Nursing who highly recommended it. So she came to work at Newton-Wellesley and "checked into the school and liked what it had to offer."

She is now one of six of the 83 freshmen at the hospital's School of Nursing that already work at the hospital. Working with the patients has often helped determine their career ambitions more than their educational background.

Joe English, 27, of Waltham, a nurse's aide since last August, admitted it was difficult to answer why he wants to be a nurse, but said, "All the signs have pointed that way for me for the last year, mainly because I get along well with people."

An aide on the 11 p.m. to 7 a.m. shift, English is positive about one thing: working at the hospital solidified his goals. And he adds, "I think I learned more working nights than I might have on days—people have more time to explain things to you and you have the opportunity to grasp more." Joe hopes eventually to work in an emergency or surgical unit, explaining, "I've floated to the emergency unit a couple of times and I like the atmosphere there."

Another of the seven men in the freshman class, Keith Chipman of Waltham, has been the mailroom supervisor since June, 1974. A graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, he holds a bachelor's degree in education with specialization in counseling.

"When I first got out of school, my plans were to work at Newton-Wellesley a year and earn money for graduate school. But working in a hospital has changed all that. I love working with people and I see nursing school as a continuation of my undergraduate counseling work," Chipman says.

Hoping eventually to be a psychiatric nurse with a B.S. in nursing, he said his career choice may not have ranged far afield after all. "I wanted to be a doctor when I was in high school but then switched to counseling in college."

A Newton-Wellesley Hospital employee who attributes her entrance into nursing school to a desire to improve herself is Denise Petrone of Framingham. An LPN for the past two years, Miss Petrone trained at Youville Hospital in Cambridge.

"I wanted to be an LPN first to feel my way through, to make sure I wanted to be a nurse," she said. "And now I'm beginning to feel restless as an LPN—I want to be able to do more."

Miss Petrone, who would like to work in a coronary care unit someday, came to Newton-Wellesley from Youville because she wanted to do acute care nursing in the medical-surgery areas.

She attended Framingham State for a year after graduating from high school but found her interest in elementary education waning while nursing grew in its appeal.

Recipe contest

Ideas for serving tomatoes topped the list of entries in the August recipe contest sponsored by the New England Vegetable Growers Association and the Massachusetts Department of Food & Agriculture.

The contest showed that Bay Staters are also catching on to the epicurean notion that cucumbers may be cooked with excellent results.

One of the most popular vegetable combinations was green beans with tomatoes and a main dish combining the compatible twosome with lamb or beef chuck won a $50.00 prize for Mrs. Joanne Petrowski of Topsfield.

Native sweet corn placed second in a delectable "corn puff" entered by Mrs. E.R. Jenny of West Springfield. An excellent side dish for meat or poultry, the pudding-like puff is also fine for brunch with a dash of maple syrup and sausages or ham.

Environmental teaching program offered

An 11-week program in environmental education will be offered by the Environmental Education Center of the Elbanobscot Foundation in Sudbury starting Sept. 24.

The function of the program is to train environmentally concerned citizens to develop and teach environmental education material for a variety of community uses.

The couse will include basic ecology, the philosphy of environmental education, outdoor teaching skills, using school and community resources, conducting meaningful field trips, educational games and crafts, interpreting nature for various age levels and curriculum enrichment through environmental education. A manual of helpful material will be provided.

No prior education is required, and individual needs are catered to as far as possible.

There will be two series, on Wednesdays from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. and the other from 2 to 4 p.m. Both are open to all, but the afternoon series will be directed specifically to teachers.

For further information please call Arlene Nichols or Corvis Catsouphes at Elbanobscot Foundation, Sudbury, 1-443-9931.

Conservators present films on river ecology

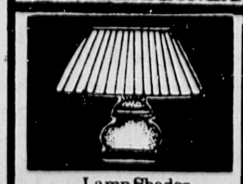

The Newton Conservators, Inc., will present two films on flooding rivers Wednesday, Sept. 10, from 7:45 to 10 p.m. at the Film-Lecture Hall of Newton North High School.

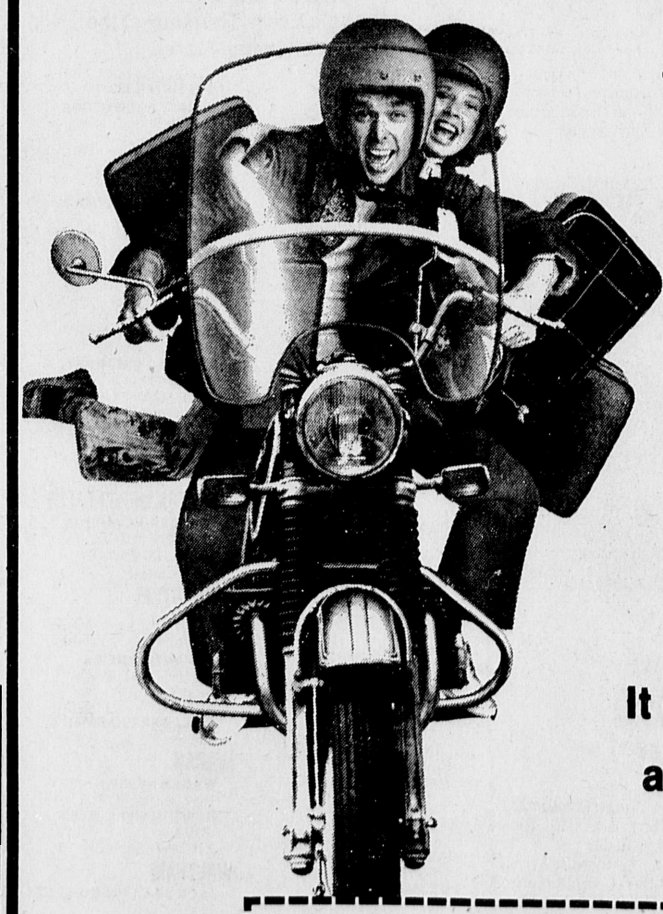

"The Flooding River, A Study in Riverine Ecology" is an intensive scientific documentation of the spring flooding cycle of the Connecticut River in relation to its flora, fauna, and geology. The conclusion is that rivers from their headwaters to the sea are self-sustaining and dynamic ecosystems which owe their existence to the natural phenomenon of flooding.

"Planning for Floods" shows a recent flood of the Mississippi River and the June, 1972, flash flood at Rapid City, S.D. This film dramatically demonstrates the tragedies that can result from total reliance on dams, channelization, levees, and other structural measures for protection.

These films reflect the ongoing interest of the Newton Conservators in guiding development away from flood-prone areas.

Gymnastic Academy to open in Norwood and Newton

The Gymnastic Academy of Boston has expanded from one facility in Westwood to two larger facilities in Norwood and Newton. These fully equipped gymnastic centers are owned and operated by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Ferraro of Westwood who have been instruction aspiring gymnasts for the past three years. Before moving to Boston three years ago Mrs. Ferraro was the assistant coach of the Cleveland, Ohio team that won the 1972 National Tumbling Championships.

The Gymnastic Academy of Boston, an AAU sanctioned club, has over five hundred students, boys and girls in age groups from 3 to 21 years enrolled in their school. Several young people have already won high honors in state and regional competition. Last year in their first year of competition the team qualified for the state championships with one girl winning the state championship, placing second in the regionals and third in Junior Olympic.

The new facility will feature a floor exercise area, cable bars, beams, horse and trampoline. The staff of eight expert adult instructors will give quality instruction to small groups of children at one time.

Pointing to the recent rise in gymnastic popularity as the main reason why larger and additional facilities were needed, Mrs. Ferraro said, "There is no doubt that the graceful and exceptional abilities Kathy Rigby and Olga Korbut demonstrated on national television have triggered the rapid increase in gymnastics, but there is more to it than that. Many, many boys and girls have obvious gymnastic ability but there has been little opportunity for them to have this talent developed with professional help. Our academy is going to make this opportunity available to them."

Mrs. Ferraro explained classes will be arranged for beginners through advanced girls and boys. A class will never contain more than six pupils so that each receives a great deal of individual attention.

The new Norwood facility is in Plimpton Park, 160 Lenox avenue, behind the Star Market Shopping Center on Nahatan street. Classes will begin in Norwood on Thursday, September 4th and an open house will be held on Wednesday, September 3rd.

The new Newton-Needham facility is at 160 Charlemont street, Newton just ½ mile off the Highland avenue exit of Rt. 128. Classes will begin on September 9th.

For further information call 326-7056 or 326-2552.

MINUTEMAN'S MUSKET

The standard weapon of 1775 was a 5 foo:, 14 pound, muzzle-loading smooth-bore flintlock. While minutemen used whatever they had, many carried the British "Brown Bess", taken or brought from redcoats, or left over from the French and Indian War. Highly inaccurate, this musket might hit a target at 80 yards — seldom at 100 yards. For national defense, today's minutemen — the Massachusetts National Guard – are equipped with rifles accurate at 500 yards, fast-firing and light.

"The shot heard 'round the world" was fired April 19th, 1776 as the "Embattled Farmers" defended their beloved country against the British Red Coats at Concord and Lexington. Many of us can say at least part of Longfellow's "Ride of Paul Revere" telling the story of that gallant horseman — who was "ready to ride and spread the alarm to every middlesex, village and farm" the night of April 18th. As we look back over 200 years of history, let all of us dedicate ourselves to the task of solving our great country's problems and continuing its growth and development as the world's greatest success story.

To show our resolve and our firm belief in America, let's all fly the flag — every day, if you will especially during our 200th Birthday — but certainly on every national holiday during this tremendously important event. Transcript Newspapers, as part of its Bicentennial Celebration, will make these fine quality home flag kits available as a patriotic and historical public service right through 1976.

A suspect bank robber suspect who shot and wounded a city policeman is holding hostages in the Standard Sandwich and Coffee Shop in downtown Albany. Police armed with rifles and shotguns are keeping the restaurant covered. (UPI)

Gunman releases hostages in N.Y.

ALBANY, N.Y. (UPI) — A bank robbery suspect who held police at bay for more than 17 hours today released his nine remaining hostages unharmed and surrendered.

The surrender ended a tense drama that began Wednesday afternoon when a man entered the City and County Savings bank in downtown Albany, clubbed bank guard Donald Wark, 58, and ran off with an undetermined amount of cash.

In escaping the bank he fired at least two shots, wounding a policeman. He ducked into another bank building, and finally holed up in the Standard Sandwich & Coffee Shop, 300 yards from the state Capitol, seizing 10 hostages, three of them children.

The gunman then barricaded all entrances, and later released one hostage, a women suffering from high blood pressure. 5 had ringed the cafeteria. Sharpshooters armed with high powered rifles equipped with telescopic sights and wearing green flak vests were stationed on rooftops.

State and local police, along with FBI agents, cordoned off the area for the long vigil.

Dozens of officers tried to keep hundreds of curious spectators behind police lines.

$2.8m initialed for busing security

BOSTON (UPI) — The Massachusetts Senate Ways and Means Committee has approved a revised interim budget in an effort to avert the default of millions of dollars worth of state backed bonds.

In addition, the Senate Wednesday initially approved an emergency $2.8 million budget to pay national guardsmen, state and area police for special duties during Boston school desegregation that begins Monday.

The special bill was approved by a three vote margin after more than an hour of debate in which opponents charged the costs of policing desegregation should be borne by the federal government.

The revised interim budget bill, which was expected to be debated today, would set up a procedure for state agencies to exceed their fiscal 1975 spending levels with the approval of the administration secretary and House and Senate Ways and Means committees.

The bill was sought by the Dukakis administration after it discovered the current interim budget prevents the Department of Community Affairs from paying principal and interest due Sept. 15 on bonds and notes.

Default on the bonds, which were used to finance public housing projects across the state, could seriously jeopardize the state's credit rating.

In addition, the procedure provided for in the bill could be used to grant additional funding for an expanded Metco program. Some 500 students may be barred from participating this year if the state does not increase its commitment.

The police overtime budget was adopted on a 21-18 vote and shortly afterwards the Senate adopted a resolution calling on the U.S. Justice Department to pick up all the police costs of school desegregation. The resolution, however, has no force.

The special bill was reported out of the Senate Ways and Means Committee unexpectedly following a hastily called meeting between state Public Safety Secretary Charles Barry and legislative leaders.

Senate Ways and Means Chairman James A. Kelly, D-Oxford, said Barry told legislators he needed assurances the guardsmen and the police would be paid for their desegregation duties.

Barry's request apparently stemmed from threats of a strike by police who will be involved in desegregation. Boston teachers already have authorized a strike to begin two weeks after the school year starts if a new contract agreement is not reached.

Hoses stretch from Pennsylvania to Trenton, but only provide a trickle

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — Hoses stretching from Pennsylvania provided only a trickle of water to thirsty residents today, forcing them for the fourth day to develop ways of coping with a water shortage caused by a malfunctioning valve.

The hose line, tank trucks and bottled water have supplied only about eight million gallons of water daily. The 250,000 residents of Trenton and four affected suburbs normally use about 35 million gallons.

City officials say the malfunction may not be repaired until Friday, so residents have been left to their ingenuity:

— Frozen dinners have solved many of the problems of cooking without water.

— The state Transportation Department suggested its employes plan their schedules to accommodate a shuttle bus set up to take them to lavatory facilities.

— Dozens of trucks from the Civil Defense and National Guard, bringing water from as far away Philadelphia, have been sent to curbsides around the city to provide enough water for sponge baths and toilets.

— At the state Supreme Court, 200 female secretaries threatened to leave work rather than use portable toilets. They were given the day off.

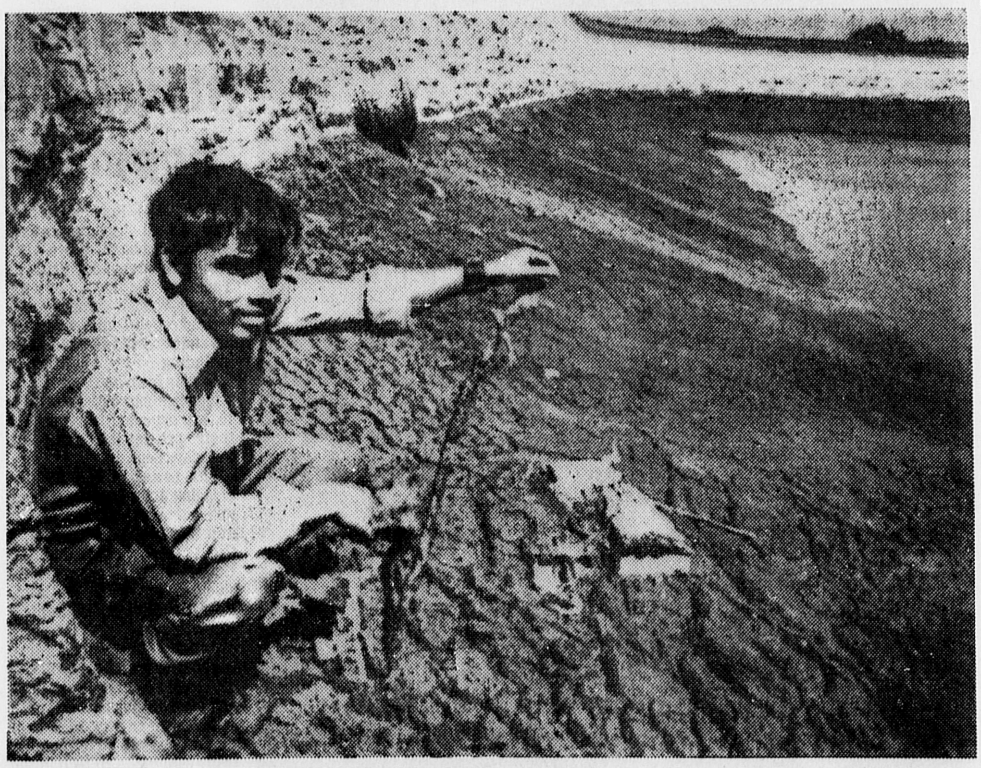

— Lilian Britschge said her family takes sponge baths. The toilet is flushed once each morning and evening after each of the seven family members have used the bathroom. Her family also has cut out clothes laundering and use of water for cooking.

— Berkshire Mountain Water Inc. of Connecticut helped out by sendng the city 4,000 gallons of bottled water and 1,000 cases of soft drinks.

City officials said the homes most affected were in West Trenton and suburban Ewing Township, both of which sit on ground apparently too high to receive the little water left in pipelines.

Hoses were linked across Delaware River bridges from Morrisville, Pa., and hoses have also been set up to draw water from suburbs which have their own water supplies.

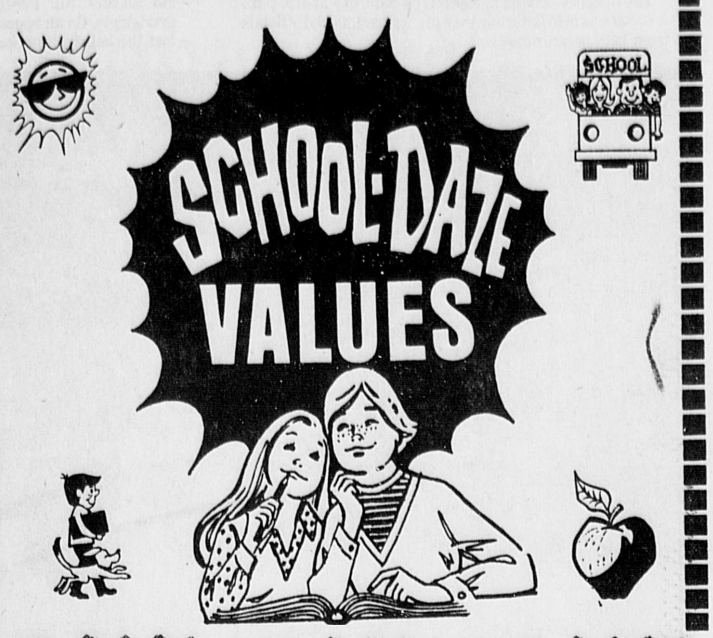

The problem began Sunday when a valve malfunction in the city's water filtration plant damaged the culvert to the city resevoir.

Dried up

A worker at Trenton, J.J.'s main reservoir inspects the mud and debris at the reservoir's bottom yesterday after the city's water supply was almost depleted by a faulty pumping station valve. Many residents were forced to boil drinking water which was piped into the city's water system by fire hoses. (UPI)

N.A.A. Lions open season with 20-6 victory

The Newton Athletic Association Lions Pop Warner Football team beat the Andover Apaches of Linthicum, Maryland by a score of 20-6 Sunday at Newton Highlands Playground.

The Apaches arrived in Newton on Saturday at 4:30 p.m. A social was held Saturday evening for parents and officials from both organizations.

The Lions took the short opening kickoff and ran it back to their own 45. With halfbacks Rick Shone and Chuck Nally carrying the pigskin the Lions advanced the ball to the visitors 38 where they faced a fourth and two. Twelve year old fullback Bill Penzo got the call and picked it up grudgingly. On an apparantly successful sweep Rick Shone lost the ball fighting for extra yardage.

The Apaches scored on their first possession. Left Halfback Tyron Spykes raced 65 yards around right end for a 6-0 lead. The conversion rush attempt failed.

The Lions countered on the ensuing drive. Halfbacks Shone and Nally busted up the middle for repeated gains. However, on a 4th and 6 at the Andover 38, quarterback Noel Foley hit right halfback Chuck Nally with a 14 yard strike down to the 24. The Lions then scored in three plays, the last being a 7 yard run by Rick Shone over right tackle. The conversion rush attempt failed, but the score was tied 6-6. The Lions defense stiffened following the kickoff and received possession of the ball at their own 35.

When the Lion drive stalled at midfield, Rich Shone toed a 40 yard punt that rolled dead at the 10. On first down, linebacker Rick Shone shot through and nailed the ball carrier for a 5 yard loss. On second down, the Marylanders attempted to pass, but the Lions pass rush deflected it and left cornerman Kevin Quinn intercepted at the 15 and ran it back to the seven.

Newton Scores

On first down fullback Greg Cooper slashed over left guard for a 7 yard T.D. run. Right half Chuck Nally rushed the points and the Lions led 13-6 (1 point for pass or rush and 2 for a kick in Pop Warner) at half.

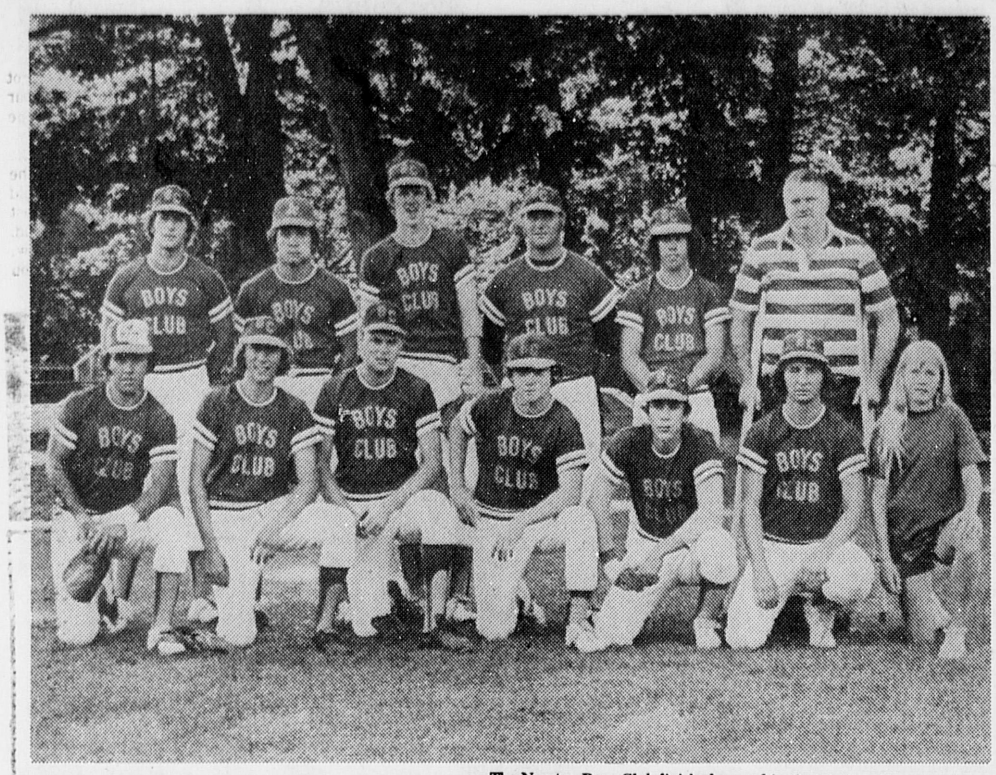

The Lions culminated the scoring when right halfback Chuck Nally drove over left tackle for the score. Quarterback Noel Foley hit left end Mark Waters for the conversion and the final count of 20-6.

Playing well in the offensive line for the Lions were center Peter Alexander, guards Bob Mosca and Scott Freeman; tackles Frank Oglesby and Mark Sullivan and ends Mark Waters, Kevin Quinn and Bob Wilcox. Shone and Nally ran well at halfback as did Cooper and Penzo at fullback. Steve Kasowsky and Noel Foley both played well at quarterback.

Kasowsky also played well at defensive end. Penzo, Alexander, Sullivan and Oglesby played well in the interior line as did linebacker Rick Shone and Noel Foley.

T he Andover Apaches departed Newton Highlands Playground at 9:00 a.m. Monday morning. The Lions housed the Apaches in their homes and entertained them for the weekend.

This Saturday the Lions will host the Framingham Tigers at Newton Highlands Playgrounds starting at 2:15 p.m.

Boys Club runners-up

Mets eye national league title as Seaver sets record

The New York Mets popped bottles of champagne early Monday night — perhaps a forecast of the future.

There were many reasons for them to celebrate: Tom Seaver had won his 20th game and established a major league record of eight consecutive 200-strikeout seasons. And the team had moved to within four games of the first-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

Nobody said so, outright, but the feeling in the clubhouse was that the Mets were holding a "practice party" for an anticpated celebration for winning the National League's Eastern Division title.

The odds still favor the Pirates, of course, but odds don't mean anything to Mets. They are thinking of the "miracle finishes" of 1969 and 1973 — and they believe their rivals are, too.

Seaver, who had an 11-11 record last season, raised his 1975 mark to 20-7, achieved his fourth 20-victory season and increased his strikeout total to 204 when he beat the Pittsburgh Pirates 3-0. Seaver previously shared the major league record of striking out 200 batters in seven consecutive seasons with Hall of Famers Rube Waddell and Walter Johnson.

"It's a long season and each victory is part of the season," said Seaver in attempting to explain his feelings for both himself and the team after the important victory. "I don't try to evaluate what I've done so far. I will when the whole season is over. It was a very emotional game for me because of the 20th win, the strikeout record and the fact we were playing the Pirates.

Totem Pole Braves capture International League crown

By BUDDY BERGER
Sports Correspondent

It was all smooth going for the Totem Pole Braves in the International League finals last week as they beat St. Bernard's in two straight games to capture for the second year in a row the championship of the Newton-Twi International league.

In the first game, Totem Pole batsmen were silenced to just two hits, but were the receivers of eight walks to get by a stubborn St. Bernard's team, 1-0. Tom Carey, a star performer all this year with his team, fired a two-hitter himself, with only one hit getting out of the infield. But the main factor in his pitching was the control that he owned. He didn't give a charity ride to a single soul, and St. Bernard's was forced to do it on its own, which the team just couldn't do.

Totem Pole got the only run they would need on the night when Nick Butera, the St. Bernard's pitcher, suffered a streak of wildness, and walked four men, the last being Carey, to drive in the only run.

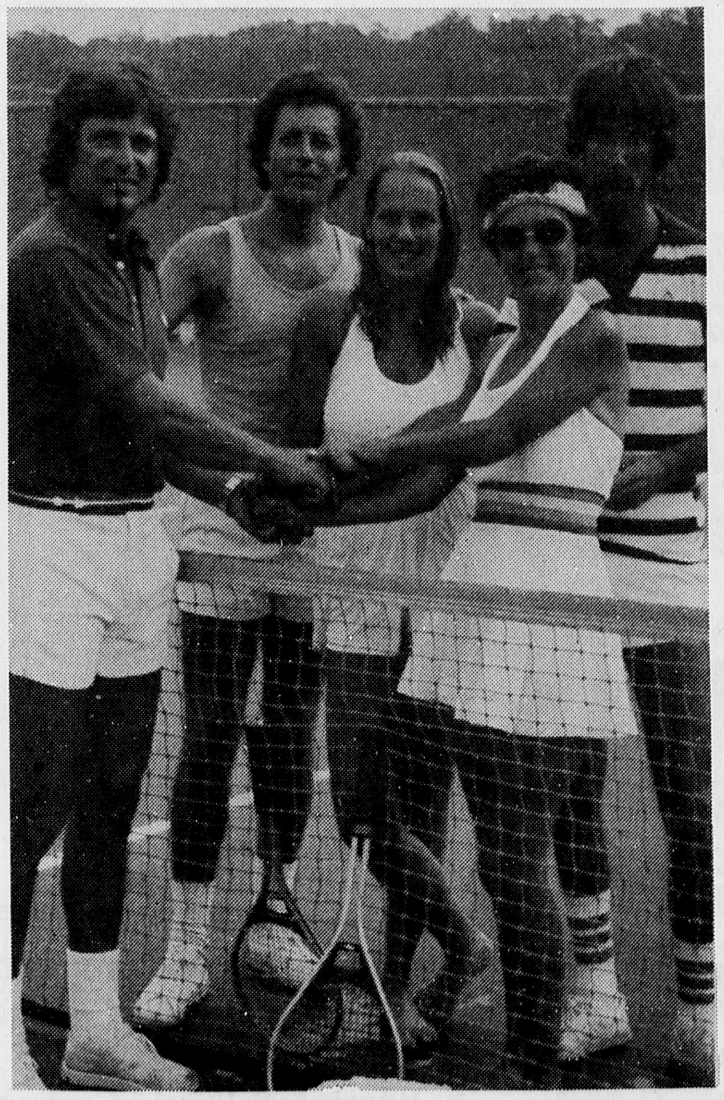

Carey Shines

Carey fanned six in the game and, as said before, did not issue a walk. The only solid hit off him came in the fifth, when Bob Donahue stroked a hard line drive to centerfield. The other hits in the game were all infield jobs, with TOm Hagerstrom and Jim McHale getting them for Totem Pole, and Greg Kasabian notching it for St. Bernard's.

The clincher came on Tuesday when TOtem Pole won it in a cakewalk, 11-1. The two stars in this game were pitcher Mike LeConti, who won his tenth straight ball game of the year, without a defeat and Mark Matheson. Matheson, who had ripped up post 440 pitching in the semi-finals, was held hitless in the first game of the championships. But he came out of his "slump" in the second game with three of the nine hits collected by Totem Pole. Tommy Link also had three hits, while catcher Steve Vona pounded out two hits in a losing cause

Totem Pole ended up the year on a 23-2 record, with a 23-game unbeaten streak. They were led by their two top pitchers, Mike LeConti, with a 10-0 record, and Tom Carey, with a 8-1-1 record.

St. Bernard's gave a valiant effort in losing, but as said at the beginning of the series, Totem Pole was just too overpowering when it needed to be. All St. Bernard's can do now is say what all "also-rans" say, "wait till next year". Congratulations to the championship Totem Pole team.

The team is led by co-captains John Lupien, a back and wide receiver, son of Mr. and Mrs. John F. Lupien, 2 Gibbs Street, Natick; and Ken Howatt, tight end and defensive end, son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Howatt, 36 Rathbun Road, Natick.

Under the three-a-day workout system, players will drill from 8 to 10, 10:30 to 12:30 and 2 to 4 six days a week until school opens on Sept. 16. Two of the sessions will be for outdoor drills with the third held in the gymnasium and used for weight training and instruction.

On Wednesday, Rivers held a combined practice with Belmont Hill at Belmont and Saturday, Sept. 13 at 10 a.m., the team will travel to Buckingham, Browne & Nichols for a controlled scrimmage. The only pre-season home game will be Friday, Sept. 19, 3 p.m. against Noble and Greenough.

Rivers opens its regular season on Saturday, Sept. 27 at 2 p.m. at home versus Moses Brown School of Providence, R.I.

Many reasons for Sox success

By DAVID BERGER
Sports Correspondent

Many reasons have been given for the emergence of the Boston Red Sox as the team to beat in the American League's Eastern Division, such reasons as the comeback of Rick Wise, the managerial genius of Darrell Johnson, and the emergence of Fred Lynn and Jim Rice as professional hitters. All these reasons are most certainly true.

But there have been two more very important reasons why the Red Sox lay atop the American League East. One has been the new coaching staff, which by its confidence in the players has won about ten to fifteen games. The second reason is the bench strength of the Red Sox. It is said that in order to win a pennant, a team must have 25 players playing a key role, not just eight starters and four pitchers. It is a long, usually injury-filled season and a pennant contending team always needs a lot of depth to win during the dog days of July and August. In the next fe paragraphs I will give you an in depth look at both the Red Sox bench and the new coaches.

There has been a turn-over in the Red Sox base coaches, going from first to third, Don Leinhardt and Eddie Popowski to John Pesky and Don Zimmer. Leinhardt and Popowski, while being two of the nicest people in baseball, probably cost the Red Sox about ten ballgames because they were conservative. One game in particular stands out in my mind, the second-to-last Detroit game in 1972. In the first inning against Mickey Lolich the Sox had a chance to jump ahead. All they had to do was win this game and they would clinch the pennant. But when Popowski held up Carl Yastrzemski from attempting to score, Luis Aparicio proceeded to run into Yaz at third, and our promising pennant hopes went flying down the drain when the Tigers tagged out Aparicio. It was a most disappointing way to end a season, losing the flag because of luck and being overly conservative.

Our coaches this year realize that many of the Red Sox are quite fleet of foot, especially the younger players such as Fred Lynn, Jim Rice, Cecil Cooper, Rick Miller and Juan Beniquez. Both Pesky and Zimmer feel that it is best to let the other team make a perfect play, and give the Red Sox players a chance at getting that key extra base, than holding the runner back and waiting for the "big hit." This has been one of the most important strategical moves by Manager Johnson and his coaches.

Coache's Backgrounds Listed

After all this discussion on the ideas of the coaching staff, I'm sure you would like a little background information on them. John Pesky was a shortstop-third baseman who was a star for many years for the Ted Williams, Bobby Doerr Red Sox. He was a key man in the 1946 pennant winning team. After he retired as a player he managed the Red Sox and for the past few seasons was a color man on Channel 4's TV coverage of the Red Sox.

Don Zimmer is the third base coach, and an excellent one at that. Before coming to the Red Sox, Zimmer gained his most fame as a player for the old Brooklyn Dodgers. He was a gutty little player who almost got himself killed in the minor leagues because of his guts. He got hit in the head by a pitched ball and because of that he now is the owner of a steel plate in his head. He continued playing even though doctors told him that if he got hit in the same place again he would probably die. He, like Pesky, also managed and also had little success. But he makes a great coach.

Over the past few seasons there have been many reasons why the Red Sox have not won a pennant; inadequate pitching, poor fielding, managerial "guesses" that turned out bad. But certainly one of the major reasons the Sox have not won is because of a lack of depth. During the course of a season such as baseball has, a team is bound to have a few serious injuries.

What separates the great teams from the good teams is the men who can play for these injured players. One need not look any farther than the World Champion Oaklnad A's to understand this.

Three years ago Oakland was forced to play the whole World Series without superstar Reggie Jackson. But the A's hardly felt the loss as they were able to put George Hendrick in right field. Hendrick, now a star outfielder for the Cleveland Indians, did an excellent job and Oakland was able to win the series.

Sox Have Depth

For Boston this year the situation is quite similar, especially in the outfield where the Sox have six men who they could start without loss in quality. And this does not even include Carl Yastrzemski, who, in a pinch, I'm sure could do a fine job if needed. Whenever a player such as Dwight Evans starts off slowly, the Sox can pull a Bernie Carbo off the bench. Carbo had a great first half, and then when he got injured, Evans was put in the line-up and has proceeded to hit a ton while doing his usual Mays-type job in the outfield.

In the infield, both Rico Petrocelli and Doug Griffin have been out for extended periods of time. But, thanks to a little luck and trading talent, the Red Sox have been able to live with these injuries. Both Bob Heise and Denny Doyle have come in and done a great job. Undoubtedly these two have done as important a job as any other player on the squad. And I do not need to mention the jobs Bob Montgomery and Tim Blackwell did while Carlton Fisk was injured.

In summation, I will just say that there have been other contributors in the Red Sox pennant run besides Freddie Lynn, Jim Rice and a handful of pitchers. These players (and coachers) deserve a lot of credit and I hope I have given them some.

"Have to play .667 ball to win pennant," Weaver

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — Put yourself in Earl Weaver's place for a minute. Your ball club started off poorly, horribly in fact, touching rock bottom at one point and dropping nine games back. Now it has a chance to come from behind and win the same way it did the final month of the season last year.

Question: what do you do if you're Earl Weaver?

Do you sit back quietly, try to keep from becoming hoarse again and let your Baltimore Orioles play their own game? Or do you maybe light a little more fire under them with some kind of pep talk reminding them how Boston blew a seven-game lead last year this time?

"I don't think we need any pep talk at this point," says Earl Weaver. "I also don't think it'll be a matter of Boston folding. We got 27 more games to play and we've gotta play .667 baseball. We have to win two outta every three, and if we do that, I think we've got a good chance."

The Orioles have been playing catch-up baseball since May when their hitting deteriorated into a joke and they went through their their worst stretch of the season, losing 11 out of 12. That dropped them into the cellar, but if everything goes their way now, they still can overtake Boston the way they did last September when the Red Sox lost 20 of their last 28 games.

The Red Sox have lost six of their last 11 but don't seem to be in any serious trouble.

On the face of it, the situation between the Red Sox and Orioles now seems similar to what it was a year ago. Weaver doesn't see it that way, though.

"Last year we kind of knew around late August they couldn't keep playing the type baseball they were," he says. "This year they're more solid up and down. I'll say this: if our ball club could lose 11 out of 12, then it could happen to any club in the league. I'm not saying the Red Sox are gonna lose 11 out of 12, I'm only saying if our ball club could do it, then so could any other one."

This is what is known as hypothetical thinking, the kind which somehow becomes much more prevalent the final weeks of any season. In that same vein it may or may not be significant that Darrell Johnson doesn't worry much about his Red Sox losing 11 out of 12. At least he says he doesn't.

"I never talk about negative things," he claims. "A lot of people ask me about what happened to us the last month of last year. They ask me whose fault it was? I tell them it was nobody's fault. That's the truth. Last year we had the kind of team where we had to do it by hook or by crook, and the end result was that we got beat because we didn't hit in the last 35 ball games. We were an entirely different team, though. We didn't have (Fred) Lynn, (Jim) Rice, (Carlton) Fisk, (Denny) Doyle or (Rick) Wise. These fellows make an awful lot of difference."

Earl Weaver agrees.

"Lynn and Rice are tremendous," he says. "They're doing for them what (Rich) Coggins and (Al) Bumbry did for us in 1973, only with more power. Right now, I'd say we've got a chance because we still got four games with Boston. Our ball club isn't in bad shape now....

"The players don't look like they need any pep talk. The only thing is that if we should happen to lose a game, I'll just remind them that's not the end. There's always tomorrow. Sometimes it helps if you remember that."

Help your child become a tennis player

By BUCKY ADAMS
Part III:
The Tennis Professional

Around the age of nine, a tennis professional should take a look at your child's game (if he hasn't already.) He will be able to tell you what type of program is best for him.

If the child is having trouble with the basics, the pro may recommend a beginner's or advanced beginner's clinic. At this time a child may develope some unique problems with his strokes and the pro should suggest a few private lessons to correct it.

If the child is more advanced, the pro will usually recommend some form of organized competition. Competition is important because the child can see exactly where he stands with other kids, and how much he needs to improve. This helps the child set goals. If a child is ever to be a top tennis player, he must be a tough competitor, and must set goals for himself.

There are also times when a pro may recommend waiting a while before he begins working with a student. If a child isn't so hepped up on tennis, he shouldn't be pushed. Some kids get interested in tennis later than others. If you force a child to play when he's not interested, you may turn him off to the point that he'll never want to play.

At this time, you may be wondering who the best tennis professionals are, and how to know whether or not he will be good for your child.

I feel there are four things that you should look for in a tennis pro:

1. He must know how to help your child improve his game and what the best program for him is.
2. He must truely care how your child is doing.
3. He must be someone your child likes and respects.
4. If your child plays in competition, the pro must see him play at least once or twice.

If a pro meets these requirements he will almost assuredly be the right person to have your child take lessons from.

In the next part, I will talk about what you do once your child is ready for tournaments. If the words draw, bye, sanction and default are unclear to you, or, if you aren't sure what the difference between being a "ranked" player and being a "seeded" player is, you will want to read part IV.

Schoolboy officials' dispute settled

BOSTON — High school principals, athletic directors, football coaches, and other school leaders in Eastern Massachusetts are relieved today to learn that schoolboy football games in the Eastern area this fall will be officiated by qualified officials instead of by recruits and others hurriedly trained for emergency service.

The development came with settlement of an extended wage dispute between the Massachusetts Secondary School Principals' Association (MSSPA) and the Association of New England Football Officials (ANEFO).

Details were announced by Principal A. Scott MacKinlay of Rockland High School, Chairman of the MSSPA's Joint Athletic Committee for District One and Two which includes all high schools in Eastern Massachusetts. Included are 186 schools with football programs, 13 competing as independents, and 173 competing in 21 leagues in four divisions of enrollment.

McKinlay said: "We wish to express our appreciation to the football officials for recognizing the serious financial restrictions faced by all schools in Massachusetts by their willingness to work in 1975 for no increase in fee over 1974."

Another school official highly involved in the settlement was School Committeeman Carl Eastman of East Bridgewater, Vice President of the Massachusetts School Committeeman's Association who said: "We offer congratulations to the board officials for their gesture of good will toward the students who play football and the spectators who watch. We are now assured that our varsity games will continue to be played under the best possible conditions."

The ANEFO agreed to the per-game wages paid last year which, for regular-season games, were $35.00 for Divisions One and Two (larger schools), and $30.00 for Divisions Three and Four (smaller schools). The MSSPA agreed that in 1976 the regular-season fees for games in Divisions Three and four will be increased from $30.00 to $33.00.

Fees paid officials for Thanksgiving Day games traditionally are almost double those of the regular season. Fees for those games this year will be the same as they were last year as follows: $65.00 for Division One; $60.00 for Division Two; and $55.00 for Divisions Three and Four.

It was further agreed that fees for Tnanksgiving Day games in 1976 will remain the same as for 1975 except for a change in Division Two from $60.00 to $65.00.

Football coaches throughout the state this week received three important documents unrelated to fees for games. They included: (1) the 1975 edition of the statewide Schoolboy Football Manual; (2) a leaflet warning against the dangers of butt-blocking and spearing; and (3) a surgeon's expert analysis of the dangers of exposing football players to extreme heat, humidity and high dew point.

Spearning, or butt-blocking, is described as a technique of using the head, encased by a hard and highly-protective football helmet, as a battering ram to be driven into the body of defending players.

The Standing Committee on Athletics of MSSPA and the Massachusetts High School Football Coaches Association have jointly adopted a resolution condemning butt-blocking and spearing and urging all football coaches to eliminate these techniques completely. Rule 9, Section 2 of NCAA football rules specifically classifies using the helmet or head to maliciously butt an opponent as a personal foul penalized by loss of 15 yards, plus disqualification of the offender in flagrant situations.

Newton Youth Hockey tryouts are scheduled

Paul Malloy, president of the Newton Youth Hockey Program, has announced plans for the 1975-76 season. As in the past, the program will be divided into two divisions, and about 600 boys and girls are expected to participate.

The Travel Team Division will again play weekly games, beginning Sept. 18, against other teams in the Middlesex Youth Hockey League at the Burlington Ice Palace.

The first tryouts for these teams will be: Mites (ages 6-8), Monday, Sept. 8, at 5:45 p.m.; two Squirt teams (ages 9-10), Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 5:45 p.m.; two Peewee teams (ages 11-12), Monday, Sept. 8, at 8 p.m.; and two Bantam teams (ages 13-14), Tuesday, Sept. 9, at 8 p.m.

In addition, the program will sponsor a Midget team, ages 15-16. Tryouts, Wednesday, Sept. 10, at 9 p.m. and the Newton Flyers girls team, ages 12-17, tryouts Sunday, Sept. 28, at 7:30 p.m.

The Midgets and the Flyers will not skate in a formal league, but will play an independent schedule.

All tryouts will be held at the Fessenden School rink in West Newton. All Newton youngsters are invited to the tryouts.

Boys and girls not chosen for a travel team are eligible for the Intramural Division, which will consist of approximately 34 teams at various age levels and begins play in early November. The very successful Novice Program for youngsters aged 5 to 8 who want to learn to skate, will begin at the same time.

Registration for the Intramural Division will take place from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Oct. 18 and 25 at the Auburndale Library.

Travel Teams will register from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 13, at the Fessenden rink.

General information and further details about schedules and costs may be obtained by calling Paul Malloy, 527-1850; Ken Hagerstrom, 527-4966; or Mike LeConti 332-7775.

Connors wins

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (UPI) — Jimmy Connors is 23 years old today and it seemed to take him an entire year to defeat Harold Solomon, 6-4, 6-2, 5-7, 6-3 in a match that began Monday night and ended shortly after midnight.

Solomon, the 13th seed, played his usual deliberate, skillful clay court game. Although he never had the defending champion in really serious trouble, he appeared ready to play until dawn.

Connors, however, had had enough, putting Solomon away in the fourth set. They exchanged service breaks to start the final set and Connors broke again in the third, coming off deuce. That was the last break he would need to move into the quarterfinals where he will face unseeded Rhodesian Andrew Pattison Wednesday.

"I wasn't really worried at any one time," Connor said. "I had my chances in the third set but he played some good points. I'd have liked it to go to a tiebreaker in the third, but then you never know how tiebreakers would go.

"So I played it one set at a time — that's all you can do. I took my time. It's always a long one when I play Solomon."

It was a long one again, running an even three hours.

"It's frustrating at times," Connors said, "but in the past year I've learned to be patient. I have to play the way I was taught. Attack."

Solomon said he wasn't tired, although he looked weary.

The long day could have been longer had not Chris Evert raced through Wendy Overton, 6-0, 6-1 in 40 minutes before Connors and Solomon took the court.

Bjorn Borg put down a rally by Rod Laver, 6-1, 6-4, 2-6, 6-2, and Eddie Dibbs, straight-setted Wimbledon winner Arthur Ashe, 6-4, 6-2, 6-3.

Boat records set

EUFAULA, Ala. (UPI) — Two world records were set Monday in the National Championship Marathon boat races at Lake Eufaula, race officials said.

A spokesman said Homer Green of Jacksonville, Fla., set a record of 66.316 miles per hour in the modified 50 outboard class, surpassing the old record by 7.744 m.p.h. Barry Woods of Vancouver, Wash., clocked 88.62 m.p.h.

For those with extra money...

Much as the mail order catalog was the "wish book" for farm folks years ago — and for some of us still today — the Previews Guide to Fine Real Estate is a dream book for folks who enjoy houses.

Do you dream of the traditional castle in Spain, an island hideaway, New England farm, Colorado ranch? Does your ideal reach back into history, or ahead into the future?

You'll find food for your fantasies, and possibly even that property you've been looking for, in the annual catalog published by this real estate marketing firm which makes its headquarters in Greenwich, Conn., but reaches out over the world for the properties it lists — at prices starting around $100,000 and going on up ... and up.

Perhaps most spectacular in the 1975-76 edition is the "Circambulant House" in Connecticut — a circular, glass-walled structure which rotates imperceptibly on a pedestal to take advantage of magnificent views in all directions.

Architect-owner Richard Foster has placed it on the market, at $835,000, after seven years during which his family found it "even easier to live with and more enjoyable than could have been anticipated."

Why? Foster, architectural coordinator for New York's steel and glass Seagram Building, now has plans for another innovative home for his family. He feels "any architect worthy of his salt ... should build to further architecture," build something daring, taking the risk himself, not forcing it on a client.

Spectacular, but not as far-out as it sounds, Foster designed the house, he says, not out of a preoccupation with technology but because of the beauty of the site. Everywhere, choice of materials was dictated by ease of maintenance and visual warmth. The rooms, wedge-shaped around a central stair case, meet the needs of everyday family living.

Even the rotation — at varying rates from five to 40 turns per 24 hours — is practical, serving to keep living areas in sun or shade as desired and conserving energy needed for heating and cooling.

Security suggestions

NEW YORK (UPI) — Art theft has become a problem for private collectors as well as museums and galleries, says Ronald R. Schmidt, director of security for a private security company.

Schmidt says Uniform Crime Reports published by the Federal Bureau of Investigation showed a 17 per cent increase in property crime last year. He has these suggestions for both public and private owners of valuable art:

Install proper lighting on the grounds outside your house. Light is a deterrent to housebreakers.

Use ornamental iron on windows, especially rear windows, where a breakin is most apt to occur. But be sure the gratings conform to local fire codes.

A local alarm system that sounds a siren or bells effectively scares away marauders in populated areas, but the best alarm elsewhere is one that signals a central station or the police.

Improve the general physical security of your home. Install dead bolt locks on doors to make it harder for thieves to enter.

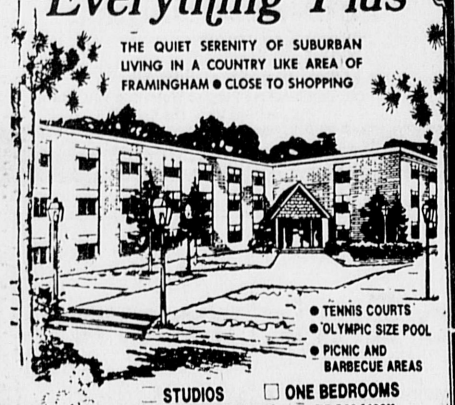

For a large public reception at home, hire plain clothes security personnel to watch for attempted theft.

Schmidt said some dealers, galleries and private collectors innocently encourage art theft by permitting their agents to negotiate the return of stolen objects with no questions asked.

"When parties negotiate and pay for stolen art, they provide a built-in market, and thereby encourage thieves to steal more," he said.

Home Builders appoint Reilly Brown Inc.

BOSTON, MASS.—Mr. Joseph Scimone, President of the Home Builders Association of Massachusetts, announced the appointment of Reilly Brown Inc., Boston-based advertising and public relations agency, effective immediately.

The Massachusetts Home Builders represented 1,200 members in eight local chapters in the Commonwealth—Boston, Springfield, Worcester, Lowell, Lawrence, Fall River, The Berkshires and Cape Cod.

Home Builders Executive Director Garen Bresnick explained that the Association has done (and is doing) extensive research on the cost of housing, which has doubled since 1967 in Massachusetts. Initially, the Association, with the help of Reilly Brown, will begin to strengthen its internal communications efforts as well as reach the citizens of the Commonwealth with meaningful information about housing costs, land development and environmental impact.

A look at the NFL

Colts out to boost offense

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Ted Marchibroda who served his apprenticeship with Washington's senior citizens under George Allen is launching his head coaching career with a Baltimore Colt youth movement. He's quietly confident it will lift the lowly Colts off the floor.

"This team is young but talented," he summarized. "The worst is behind it."

The Colts—Super Bowl champions only five years ago— finished at the bottom of the NFL heap last year with a 2-12 record. There have been six Baltimore coaches at the helm since the slide began in 1972.

Marchibroda acknowledges that he'll probably follow Allen's close-to-the-vest strategical format. "I'm a low-key coach who believes in sound basic football," he observes. "I'll take calculated risks but not in trying to be only a big-play club."

As an assistant with the Redskins, Marchibroda's specialty was offense and the Colts showed scoring promise with some impressive statistics in the final stages of their dismal 1974 season.

Lydell Mitchell rushed for 757 yards, twice for more than 100 yards a game, and led the NFL in pass receptions with 72, including 13 against the New York Jets that broke Ray Berry's club record.

Marchibroda has indicated he plans to use a three-back offense that will employ the running of Mitchell, Bill Olds and Don McAuley. In addition to Joe Orduna, the Colts gambled on their fifth draft pick and took Roosevelt Leaks, the former Texas running ace who was hobbled by injuries in his final two college years.

Twenty-three-year old Bert Jones apparently has the inside track over Marty Domres for the quarterback spot. Jones, disabled for three games with a shoulder injury, wound up with a flourish in a losing effort against the Jets.He set an NFL record of 17 straight completions and broke club marks by hitting on 36 of 53 attempts for 385 yards and four touchdowns.

The young look prevails at the wide receiver slots where a pair of second-year speedsters, Roger Carr and Freddie Scott, showed high promise in their rookie year. Raymond Chester is solid at tight end.

The Colt offensive line was hot and cold last season and major steps were taken in the off-season to bolster the weak pass protection which resulted in only nine touchdowns through the air. Baltimore gave up the No. 1 draft choice to obtain tackle George Kunz from Atlanta and then grabbed off North Carolina's Ken Huff, rated the outstanding offensive lineman in the college ranks.

Kunz will pair up with veteran guard Elmer Collett on the right side while Huff is expected to wind up at left guard with Dennis Nelson holding forth at tackle and Ken Mendenhall at center.

The defense, which allowed 23.5 points a game, starts with Mike Curtis at middle linebacker, "the finest in the NFL," according to Marchibroda. Tom MacLeod and Stan White—both viewed as corners—will flank him.

The lack of an effective pass rush was noticeable last year but the two defensive ends, John Dutton and Fred Cook, gained all-rookie team honors. Joe Ehrmann, who played hurt a year ago, and Bill Windauer round out the front four.

The defensive secondary is suspect and subject to change. Rick Volk and Bruce Laird seem set as safeties while Doug Nettles and Nelson Munsey are fighting for the cornerback jobs against competition from No. 3 draft choice Mike Washington, Royce McKinney and Tim Rudnick.

Herb Mul-Key, another Washington Redskin acquisition, will generate excitement as a kick returner along with Tim Berra and Laird. Dave Lee more than adequately takes care of the punting and Austrian Toni Linhart is the place kicker, with a record of eight for eight inside the 39.

Brown's hope to improve on worst record

CLEVELAND (UPI) — Forrest Gregg knew he couldn't return the Cleveland Browns to respectability in a year. That's why he asked for and received from owner Art Modell a three-year contract as only the fourth head coach in the club's history.

Gregg has only to improve last year's 4-10 record—the worst in the team's history and only the Browns' second below .500 season—and he'll look like a miracle worker in the eyes of many. But not to Modell, who expects nothing short of excellence from his personnel—including the players.

Ah yes, the players, many of whom are now too tired to talk about training camp at Kent State University where Gregg— like a dictator—ushered them through endless maneuvers in the scorching afternoon sun, taking a rare break for a thirst quencher.

It was different. Players were getting hurt in practice because the coach, who played for Vince Lombardi and picked up some of his skills, said you gotta practice like you play—hard. It wiped out some starters early, including wide receivers Steve Holden and Reggie Rucker and offensive guard Pete Adams.

They haven't played in a preseason game to date. But veteran quarterbacks Mike Phipps and Brian Sipe have and they haven't been impressive. If the Browns are to go anywhere in the AFC Central Division, they must develop a passing game because they don't have enough running backs to carry the load all season.

"I believe that our passing game is going to be an effective part of our offense," Gregg said recently. "It is coming slowly, but I feel it is coming."

Where the Browns are still in trouble is at defensive end, a position which hasn't been solidified since Jack Gregory was traded to the New York Giants. And just when Gregg thought he had the defensive backfield set, veteran Thom Darden gets creamed in an exhibition game against the Philadelphia Eagles, undergoes surgery for torn ligaments in his left knee and is lost for the season.

The offensive line is pegged with veterans Doug Dieken, Bob McKay, Chuck Hutchison and John Demarie, who made the switch from guard to center effectively. And the only tight end on the club who has proven ability to catch the ball is Milt Morin.

As far as running backs, the Browns are expecting superb performances from Billy Pritchett, Greg Pruit and rookies Larry Poole and Henry Hynoski. One of the team's former ballcarriers, Billy Lefear, has been switched to wide receiver and has assumed his new duties as a natural for the spot.

Defensively, there's Jerry Sherk, Walter Johnson and Carl Barisich at the tackles; Bob Babich, Charlie Hall and John Garlington at linebacker; and Clarence Scott, Eddie Brown and Lonnie Hepburn in the backfield.

Veteran Don Cockroft has come on strong during the preseason and is assured of being the No. 1 kicker for the Browns, getting assistance at times on the punts by Larry Poole.

So the Browns have a long way to go to achieve a winning season while Pittsburgh and Cincinnati fight it out for first place in the Central Division. It's a far cry from 1964 when the Browns won the AFC championship.

Hagler fights in Garden

BOSTON (UPI) — Undefeated middleweight Marvin Hagler of Brockton will take on former national amateur champion Lamont Lovelady of Des Moines Sept. 30 in Boston Garden.

Promoter Sam Silverman said the fight would be the main event of a live program to be followed by a closed circuit telecast of the heavyweight title bout between Muhammad Ali and Joe Frazier.

Hagler will be seeking his 30th victory. He has won 23 previous fights by knockout, and the only blemish on his record was a disputed draw with Sugar Ray Seales in Seattle after he had soundly beaten Sealers in an earlier fight here.

Lovelady, who now fights out of Baltimore, won the National AAU middleweight title in 1972. Hagler won it the following year.

Tanana whiffs 14 Athletics

Angels 4, A's 1

Frank Tanana (14-6) struck out 14 Oakland batters to run his league-leading season's total to 220 in California's win over the A's. Tanana scattered five hits and was the beneficiary of four runs in the eighth inning, Mickey Rivers doubling home two of them. The Angels stole two more bases to become the first team since the 1918 Pittsburgh Pirates with 200 thefts in a season.

Cowboys haven't given up yet

DALLAS (UPI) — The law of averages finally caught up with the Dallas Cowboys in 1974 and they didn't like it a bit.

Having been a contender for the Super Bowl for eight years, the Cowboys suffered through a four-game losing streak early last season and that about decided that.

Even though Dallas lost only two of its last nine games, it was too late to rally.

So the tone of the Cowboys' off-season has been one of tight lips, beady eyes and comments like: "I think we were complacent last year. But that is gone now."

That little tidbit came from Roger Staubach, the Cowboy quarterback who was left to stand alone last year with the trade of Craig Morton to the New York Giants.

And most of the other Cowboys have been saying the same thing. The most intensive off-season training program in the club's history, combined with the desire to erase the nasty taste 1974 left in their mouths, have the Cowboys talking Super Bowl again.

Taking and doing are two different things, but it has become apparant that those who figure Dallas has gone over the hill and will not be a contender again for years are perhaps in for a surprise.

"There is no escaping the fact we missed the playoffs," said Dallas Coach Tom Landry, "but I'm fairly confident our failure to gain them was due to two things.

"One was the players strike and the other was World Football League signings of a number of our players. I think this caused us to get off to a slow start. The reason I mention these points is that I'm not sure whether the caliber of our players has dropped to the point that we should expect an 8-6 record.

"I am of the opinion that it has not dropped that far. I believe we can be back in the playoffs this year if we have a good training camp and start off in September at the top level of efficiency. If we do these things we'll have a good chance to get back."

There will be a new look throughout the Cowboys' lineup.

Gone are veterans Bob Lilly, Dave Manders, Bob Hayes, Calvin Hill and Walt Garrison.

With Hill now WFL property and recuperating from knee ssurgery and Garrison retired, the Cowboy running backs will likely be chosen from Robert Newhouse, Charles Young and Doug Denison. The younger running backs present the biggest question mark in the Cowboy picture.

The emergence of Ed Jones and Harvey Martin will give the defensive line a more aggressive atmosphere while the linebacking corps will have a horde of fresh talent in top draft choices Randy White, Tom Henderson and Bob Breunig.

Staubach, naturally, will be a key to the Cowboys' progress this season. He suffered through a bland 1974 campaign.

"I think Roger Staubach will show vast improvement over last season," said Landry. "It was a frustrating season and it wasn't so much Roger's fault as it was just a team attitude from the beinning.

"I think he now has been through most of his problems as a quarterback. You learn from being in adverse situations. Roger will show the kind of maturity that will enable him to come back and be a solid quarterback again."

Twenty six sailboats look for world one ton championship

NEWPORT, R.I. (UPI) — Twenty sleek sailboats representing eight countries begin a hectic five-race series Friday to deterime the one ton world champion.

Pied Piper, a canary-yellow sloop and winner of last month's North American Sailing Championship, leads 10 U.S. entries into the world championship in Rhode Island Sound. It runs through Sept. 14.

Stiff international competition includes Gumboots, 1974 one ton world champion under British colors. This year she is manned by a West German crew and skippered by Barend Beilken of Travemunde.

Safety inspections are scheduled today and Thursday prior to the captains' and navigators' meetings at the host Ida Lewis Yacht Club to discuss the series of three one-day races, an overnight medium distance race and one long-distance race for the finale which should keep the fleet out for two days and one night.

Pied Piper, a 36-footer designed by Doug Peterson, is skippered by Dick Jennings of Chicago and veteran San Diego sailmaker Lowell North. Former Olympic silver medalist Peter Barrett will navigate.

Australia, Brazil, Italy and West Germany have two entries each with solos from Canada and Ireland.

There will actually be 12 American boats in the competition. Two are under charter to foreign crews. Australian Charles E. Davis of Tasmania chartered Fortune Hunter out of Marblehead, Mass., and West German Joachim SchultzHeik chartered Andiamo Robin. The latter was skippered by Don Mcnamara of Swampscott, Mass., in the North American title series.

Several of the foreign boats tagged along in the North American races and skipper Hedley Calvert of Australian entry Huon Chief said it meant valuable experience.

"I felt we've learned to sail much better in the weather conditions here," he said.

Originally there were to be seven U.S. and 13 foreign entries, but two Swedish boats and one from Canada failed to show.

American entries:

Pied Piper; Wildwood, skippered by Romeyn Everdell; Vamp, under Ted Turner, Kindred Spirit, Bob Barton and Martin Purcell; Lively, George Lewis; America Jane III, George Tooby; Marakesh Express, John Bushell Jr.; Artemis, Peter Conrad, Arthur Emil and Bizzy Monte-Sano; Spirit, Louis Pocharski and America Jane II, Burke Sawyer.

The foreign entries:

Australia: Fortune Hunter and Huon Chief; Brazil: Mach II, skippered by J.C. Laport, and Kingfish, under Mario Buckup; Canada: Something Extra, G.K. Morris; Ireland: Silver Apple; Italy: Gambare, Stefano Orsenigo, and Natael II, Claudio Coccia; West Germany: Andiamo Robin and Gumboots.

WFL drops Chicago

NEW YORK (UPI) - Moving boldly with a strong hand—but one predicated on fear—the World Football League continues to seek credibility as a thriving major league although divorcing itself from two of the country's largest markets.

With the sharp and decisive blow of an executioner, the WFL Tuesday announced the immediate extinction of the Chicago Winds and the dispersal of the players to the 10 other league members.

Following the debacle of 1974 when the "old" WFL ran up debts estimated as high as $20 million and lost the key New York franchise, league President Chris Hemmeter nevertheless pointed to the swift action of the Board of Governors as a positive move that strengthened the structure of the entire circuit.

"Basically, the league requires that all teams be in precise accordance in all aspects of the Hemmeter Plan. The Governors will not tolerate any deviation since such deviation might bring about the types of irresponsible actions which characterized last year's league," the youthful president said.

While admitting the memory of last year might have prompted the death blow, Hemmeter stressed that the other 10 members were healthy under stringent fiscal safeguards which provide that exact monies be proportioned for various areas of a club's operation.

The Board of Governors voted 10-1 to expel the Winds Monday night, with the only dissenting vote being cast by Kenneth Zak, the Winds' governor. The action was provoked when two investors in the team withdrew the $175,000

Come let us reason together

By DR. WILLIAM KNOX

Do You Need a Project?

Nan and Chet had been haggling for several weeks over trivial things . . . each showing resentment . . . disagreeing without grounds or reason. "If I say it's white, he says it's black" ... Nan said. "The thing that gets me is her silent treatment" . . . said Chet.

This went onfor several weeks in a counseling as they argued on insignificant things which made no real idfference . . . like which baby sitter she called . . . what time he got home from work . . . what she did with the change from a $5.00 bill . . . which newspaper to cancel since they couldn't afford both. They were both correct ... "they just didn't agree on anything."

One afternoon when they came in Chet said, "We've started a project. We're going to build on to our house, a bedroom and small office." I was surprised. I wondered how they could have made such a major decision since they'd been fighting with each other over the change for a $5.00 bill.

"What happened?" I asked.

Nan said ... "Well ... we got to talking about how we felt and we remembered that when we were doing something together ... we weren't fighting. We were happy. One year we landscaped our grounds ... another year we built the tool house. One winter we took dancing lessons together. "We figured that our problem is that we need a project." "So, Saturday we start" ... said Chet ... "and even now before we start the work we've quit our silly haggling."

Perhaps more couples need projects together. One couple I know have a large garden. They plow it ... plan it ... care for it together. They can freeze vegetables. They built a beautiful vasement storage closet for the canned food ... even use their home canning for gifts to friends. The sizable amount of money they save fromtheir freezing and canning is second in value only to the fun and closenss they feel as they work together on their garden project.

Another value of a project is that you have something to talk about. We keep emphasizing the importance of communication. But ... just what shall two people talk about who now know each other well ... their feelings about each other ... politics, religion ... their children. It isn't surprising that conversation wains ... unless there is fresh new mterial to feed the dialogue. Having a project is that you have something to talk about. We keep emphasizing the importance of communication. But ... just what shall two people talk about who now know each other well ... their feelings about each other ... politics, religion ... their children. It isn't surprising that conversation wains ... unless there is fresh new material to feed the diaogue. Having a project meets that requirement.

Three weeks after the project had started, Nan and Chet were relating what was happening to them in my office. "For one thing" ... Chet was saying ... "I had forgotten ow wonderful Nan is. Man ... is she fun! Talking with her ... planning with her is great fun."

"I think back there when we were fighting over those silly little things," Nan said ... "it was because we were frustrated and blaming each other, that neighbor provided an interest. So ... to kill the dullness we had those silly fights. What a waste."

"Another thing" ... I pointed out ... "Your project had drawn you together" You pooled your skills in a common interest and you found satisfaction in the creation of a worthwhile ting the end product which you will enjoy together."

Whatever alienates a husband and wife is a visious enemy. Whatever joins a husband and wife together in mutual love is a precious jewel. For Nan and Chet their project was a jewel. Maybe you two need a project?

Error uncovered in insurance statistics

BOSTON (UPI) — A state actuary has uncovered a statistical error which when corrected will reduce by six percent the amount of increased bodily injury premiums sought by Massachusetts insurance companies as part of a record $400 million auto rate increase request.

The error was uncovered Wednesday by Dr. Stefan Peters, chief actuary for the Massachusetts Insurance Department, during the second day of hearings on the bodily injury portion of the overall rate increase request.

The insurance industry's actuary, Lee M. Alexander of the Massachusetts Auto Rating Bureau, conceeded the error had been made and said correcting it would reduce the amount of the proposed bodily injury premium six per cent.

About $244 million of the overall proposed increase has formally been requested by the industry. The companies disclosed Tuesday they will seek an additional $150 million in 19/6 rates to cover projected 1975 losses.

Most of the proposed increase is in property damage rates. Legislation to freeze those rates pending a change in state insurance laws is expected to be enacted within a week.

In the meantime, the hearings are centered on personal injury coverages in which companies are seeking a 26 per cent increase.

The bodily injury error, alleged by Peters and agreed to by Alexander, involved the combined trend and projection factors used to project premium rates. The factors generally relate to inflation.

Peters said, and Alexander agreed, the industry should have used a factor of 1.1785 instead of the 1.223 in its formal projections. Both men said use of the lower figure would reduce the proposed bodliy injury rates by six per cent.

The two actuaries clashed on other factors used by the industry to project next year's rates, particularly the factor used to predict accident rates.

Peters said the industry's data does not take into account the apparent decrease in the rate of bodily injury claims in recent years. Asked about this, Alexander said "I know of no data to show a downward frequency in bodily injury in Massachusetts."

That statement was challenged directly by Insurance Commissioner James Stone who said, "I can't believe that ... That's a stunning statment. It strains the credibility of the bureau's case. I am surprised and disappointed the bureau has been unable to determine what is a manifestly obvious frequency trend."

Stone's remarks were criticized by industry's attorney Acheson H. Callghan Jr., who said "editorial comments" by the commissioner belong in the departments case.

Alexander's methodology also was criticized by Assistant Attorney General Michael B. Meyer. Under questioning by Meyer, Alexander said his projections did not take into account a possible reduction in accidents next year due to higher gasoline prices.

Egypt may be seeking US weapons

BOSTON (UPI) — Egyptian President Anwar Sadat told a group of visiting U.S. congressmen last month he wants to buy a variety of sophisticated American weapons, The Boston Globe reported in today's editions.

The Globe, quoting Rep. Joseph D. Early, D-Mass., one of three congressmen to meet with Sadat, said the Egyptian l e a d e r wanted "modest amounts" of weapons to fill the gap left by the drying up of Russian supplies in recent months.

Among the equipment mentioned by Sadat were Northrup F-5E jets and TOW anti-tank missiles.

Sadat said he wanted the weapons so "The Israelis will not get arrogant with me," according to Early.

Closing of Shattuck called 'irresponsible'

BOSTON (UPI) — The chief surgeon at Lemuel Shattuck State Hospital says it would be "irresponsible" to think the state would save money by shutting down the public health facility.

"Patient's hardships cannot sensibly or econmically be located elsewhere. It's truely irresponsible to think the private hospital sector could do what we're doing here, it would cost more," Dr. Michael Hume said Wednesday.

Hume has organized an ad hoc group called "Massachusetts Committee to Save Lemuel Shattuck Hospital," committed to thwart state efforts to shut down the facility, scheduled to be phased out under a fiscal austerity drive.

"It seems to me there is more at issue than statistics," Hume said in an interview.

Hume called his organization "a fairly small and quickly assembled group," created after the Public Health Department ordered a halt in admissions last week.

Review

'A little soft and very touched...'

By RANDY MUDARRI
Graphic Theater Critic

Every character in "The Sot Touch" is a little soft and very touched.

The play is set in a seedy one room flat in Philadelphia. The tenant, Blinkey, is ready to retire for the evening. Armed with a girlie magazine, he takes to his bed (in his best Arte Johnson dirty old man voice), finds the fold-out pin-up, shows it to his pillow, and proceeds to enjoy the pin-up under his blanket with a flashlight. Hmmm.

Enter Wilfred, a smooth-talking vagrant who finagles a quarter from Blinkey each time he leaves the room. Enter Mrs. Ruckus, Blinkey's mother, who is ready to forgive him and let him come home, after six years, for the pencil-stabbing of their pet cat who just died. Hmmm.

Enter suspicious Mr. Crisp with a pistol and rope, searching for his wife. Before leaving, Mr. Crisp warns Blinkey that even if she's not in the room now, she will be eventually.

Enter Mrs. Crisp from the fireescape through the window. The sex-craved woman ignores Blinkey's pleas and pulls him under the bed where she is hiding from her husband.

Enter the landlord, who threatens with death those tenants who do not put out their garbage on time.

Enter Havey Likk, alias The Likk Brothers, an escaped schizophrenic murderer who only kills men named Phil (Blinkey's proper name).

Enter Emile, a homosexual Frenchman who is notoriously known at The Amorous Cat Burglar, by a lowered rope through the window. Hmmm.

This comedy is a farce whose strength lies in its crazy characters. Neil Cuthbert, the author, excellently allows each character his own introduction. There is never any question as to who is who and what's he like. Each characters' traits, however bizarre, are magnificently illustrated to the audience immediately, in no uncertain terms. Being an often overlooked facet of playwriting, proper character introduction prevents confusion for the audience; and once familiar with the characters, the audience tends to relax and appreciate the play even more.

A slapstick comedy, "The Soft Touch" is a farce. The humor is simple and the characters are caricatured stereotypes. The author's intent is clearly to make a funny evening of entertainment. Any attempt to contrive a theme or deep meaning in the play would be silly, for there isn't any.

Lenny Baker, in the lead role of Blinkey, illustrates many facets of the character'spersonality. Blinkey is alternately an overly-mothered son, a harried and fearful tyrant, a dupe for the vagrant, an object of jealousy, a pervert, a sex-object for a sex-craved woman, a sex object for the gay cat burglar, and the object of a murder plot.

He is afforded the opportunity to react to each situation accordingly, and does so with tremendous zest. Baker adeptly utilizes his versatility.

Bob Harper is very funny as the opportunist vagrant, and appears very comfortable in the role. Ruth Jaroslow, as Blinkey's kinetic mother, is quite amusing.

Joshua Mostel is incredible as Harvey and Frank Likk. As the Likk Brother, Mostel is often carrying on a conversation with himself, and at the same time lends increasing differentiation between the brothers. Each brother is easily recognized by the audience, though they are the same schizophrenic person. Moviegoers may recognize Joshua Mostel as Art Carney's son in "Harry and Tonto" and as King Herod in "Jesus Christ Superstar."

Richard Libertini is duly fanatic as the jealously raging Harry Crisp. Jo Anne Meredith, alluringly clad in a night gown, is delightful whether making a quick getaway or attacking one of the men as Beatriee Crisp. Gravel-voiced Michael Granger creates the unbelievable character of The Landlord who hates old people, perverts, souther Rebels, and is tough as nails.

Which brings us to Robert Lesser who plays Emile, The Amorous Cat Buglar. His characterization requires him to be lightfooted, French, homosexual, and appropiately amorous. Whereas Mostel is the most admirable, Baker the most versatile, Harper the steadiest, Lesser is indeed the funniest performer.

Director Alan Arkin does a superb job of getting the most out of his actors and the material at hand. His pace of the show never drags, as the play does not require any scene changes and all entrances and exits are done quickly and professionally. The smooth running of the play is directly attributable to Arkin. Even the curtain call is flashy. Kurt Lundrll's set is excellent and very functional.

Don't worry if at the end of Act I you are wondering where it will all tie together. The ending is inconceivable. If you ar up for some light-hearted fun, hit the Wilbur Theatre on Tremont Street in downtown Boston before Sept. 13.

YMCA offers crafts programs

The Newton YMCA youth division announces the beginning of the fall arts and crafts program registration. Under the new instructorship of Penny Brian, the program is geared to boys and girls of all ages in various forms of craft work.

Classes are currently being formed in pottery, arts and crafts workshops, imaginative drawing, and creative tots, a program for pre-school children 3-5 years old.

All classes meet one hour weekly, and run for a period of 10 weeks, beginning the week of Sept. 15-19. Tuition is $17 for YMCA members, and $20 for non-members. Creative Tots tuition is $17 for all.

For more information and class meeting times, call the YMCA at 244-6050.

SLEEP ON IT

CHICAGO (UPI) — Legend notwithstanding, sleeping on a problem is not likely to help solve it, says Sally Ames of the University of Illinois department of psychiatry. She says it is a rare phenomenon if difficult and puzzling problems are solved in dreams. Researchers say the probability is that a good night's sleep refreshes the mind and creates the mental energy to find solutions.

Choral Society needs male voices

The Wellesley Choral Society, sponsored by the Wellesley Recreation Commission, will begin rehearsals for its 1975-76 season on Monday, Sept. 8. New members are invited to join at this time.

The group rehearses every Monday from 8 to 10 p.m. in the choral room of the Wellesley Junior High School. The building may be entered from Donazette Street off Linden Street.

Singers are welcome in all sections, but tenors and baritones are especially needed. Members must be at least of high school age, but they need not be residents of Wellesley. Although sight reading is not required, it is helpful when learning new music.

Keith L. Phinney will be returning for his ninth year as director of the group. He has announced that the chorus will perform Beethoven's "Missa Solemnis" at the major concert in March. There will also be a Christmas concert and a pops concert to conclude the season in May.

Annette Der Sarkisian will return as accompanist for the chorus.

Those wishing more information may contact Mrs. Richard Batchelor at 237-9866 or Mrs. MacColl at 237-9606.

Party, auditions on Country Players agenda

The Newton Country Players raise the curtain on their 2 th year of community theatre activity this week with double-barreled festivities including a gala cocktail party and tryouts for their initial stage production of the season, Rodgers and Hammerstein's Pulitzer Prize-winning musical, "South Pacific."

Awaiting members in the wings is the Players' tenth annual "Theatre Buff Bash" on Sunday, Sept. 7, at 7 p.m., at the home of Dr. and Mrs. Bertram Krassin, 4 Brandeis Circle, Newton Centre. Chairman of the festivity, which will be highlighted by surprise entertainment, is Anna Neumann of Waban. Donation is $3 per person.

Members, new and old, will receive a complete briefing on "South Pacific" by play director John Deming of Newton Highlands, and will be introduced to the musical's choreographer, musical director and choral director. A complete agenda of the forthcoming year's activities will be announced also.

Open auditions for "South Pacific" will be held Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 9 and 10, at 8 p.m., at the Rebecca Pomroy Playhouse, 84 Eldredge St., Newton. There are 32 speaking parts including three major female and three major male singing roles, as well as a large number of supporting speaking parts, both male and female. The smash Broadway hit features a sizeable cast of singers and dancers also. Auditionees are requested to bring sheet music and complete resumes.

All local residents interested in participating in any phase of the production and in any capacity — house manager, props crew, set decor, set construction, lighting and sound crew, make-up, wardrobe, technical staff, cast or stage crew — are most cordially invited to attend tryout sessions.

President of the Players Marcia Massimo of Waban stressed that an earnest effort will be made to place as many as possible of those attending auditions in some area of this colorful production, winner of countless awards, and described by Brooks Atkinson of the N.Y. Times as a "Magnificent musical drama. Rhapsodically enjoyable."

Performances are slated for Friday and Saturday evenings, Nov. 21-22, 28-29 and Dec. 5-6. The show will be available for programming at reduced rates to sponsor groups and theatre parties interested in fundraising for Sunday through Thursday bookings, Nov. 23 to Dec. 7, to be staged at Pomroy Playhouse, with its seating capacity of 200. Producer of the show is Larry Levison of Chestnut Hill and stage manager is Margaret Annis of Newtonville.

With book by Joshua Logan and Oscar Hammerstein II music by Richard Rogers and lyrics by Hammerstein, the play's brilliant score features some of the most beautiful music including "Some Enchanted Evening," ever written for a musical' "I'm in Love With a Wonderful Guy," "There Is Nothing Like a Dame," "Bali Ha'i," "Honey Bun," "Younger Than Springtime" and "This Nearly Was Mine." Untold millions of record albums of "South Pacific" songs have been sold.

Based on James A. Michener's "Tales of the South Pacific," the vivid tropical setting is that of a military outpost in the South Pacific during the second World War, and the yearned-for island of Bali Ha'i in the distance. The central story concerns Ensign Nellie Forbush, a young Navy nurse, and Emile de Becque, a greying, wealthy planter. The two are in love though Nellie fears obstacles to their marriage because of their disparate backgrounds.

The secondary love story is one of the most poignant in the literature of the theatre. It is that of a young marine, Lieutenant Joseph Cable and Liat, the beautiful young Tonkinese daughter of Bloody Mary, the native woman who sells souvenirs to the men stationed on the outpost.

When de Becque accompanies Cable on a dangerous mission to another island, where Cable is killed' Nellie realizes that nothing is as important as the love she feels for the Frenchman and their story ends happily.

Howard Barnes of the N.Y. Herald Tribune called it "A show of rare enchantment," while Richard Watts, Jr. of the N.Y. Post praised, "An utterly captivating work of theatrical art . . . a work of great style and loveliness that is yet gay, vigorous and vital."

For information concerning the cocktail party, phone 332-1171 or 244-1308; for information about tryouts, call 527-0091 or 244-3643; for membership data, phone Mikki Krassin at 969-9737 or write P.O. Box 9, Newton Centre, 02159.

Teachers asking for 11% pay hike

The Newton School Committee has reportedly offered Newton's 1100 teachers and other professionals a pay raise of between 1 and 4.5 percent.

Teachers, in turn are said to be requesting a cost of living increase for this year of their contract equal to about 11 percent.

Factfinder William Fallon will meet for the second time with both negotiating teams Tuesday, Sept. 16, at 4 p.m., at which time he will reportedly act as a mediator and try to reach an agreement.

Members of the Newton Teachers Association are now receiving last year's pay under last year's contract.

Tax rate to be $159.80

A real estate tax increase of $9.40 per thousand dollars of assessed valuation (6 ¼ percent) was voted 7-1 by the aldermanic Finance Committee Monday night.

The new rate will be $159.80 if the full Board of Aldermen approves the Finance Committee recommendation at a special meeting tonight (Thursday). The state Department of Taxation and Corporations must approve the figures before tax bills can be sent out.

Mayor Theodore Mann recommended that the Board approve the use of $2.5 million of the more than $3 million "free cash" available to apply against taxes.

But Ald. Sidney Small, who described himself as "running scared," wanted to leave $810,000 in surplus, rather than the $560,000 that would be left by the mayor's proposal.

Small's recommendation would have resulted in a tax increase of $9.80.

The compromise amount was suggested by Ald. Wendell Bauckman. The amount left in in surplus will be $710,000. Bauckman proposed using $2.35 million toward taxes.

The surplus, which must carry the city through until next April when collected money will be available for use, was a matter of concern from two points of view.

The usually fiscally conservative Ald. Louis Egelson was opposed to leaving a large surplus. "Keeping the surplus down is one of the best controls on spending we have," Egelson said.

Other aldermen feared that not having enough in surplus would leave the city in a precarious position.

Egelson proposed leaving only $300,000, and voted against the final amount agreed on by the rest of the Finance Committee at the end.

The consent judgment that terminated the taxpayers' suit against the city for restoration of the $500,000 cut from the school budget included a stipulation that the city be prepared to provide funding for Metco and a portion of the Chapter 766 money in case state reimbursements fall through.

Metco funding has now been assured by the state, so the city is free of a potential liability of $257,000, and Finance Chairman Small has said repeatedly that the $162,000 Chapter 766 reimbursement withheld by the state on the most recent "cherry sheet" has already been given to the School Committee.

Small thinks that the School Committee will be able to make up that amount out of its current budget.

The other potential liabilities, such as an unusually large snowstorm, final arbitration on the firefighters' contract, repairs to the heating and ventilation sysytems at Newton North High School, and other such items, were reckoned by the Finance Committee to be within the scope of the final amount of surplus voted, $710,737.

Aldermanic candidates

Rodney Barker

Rodney M. Barker, of 49 Woodcliff Road, Newton Highlands, is a candidate for alderman-at-large from Ward 6.

He decided to run because he is convinced that everyone should be involved in the government process, and feels that a person's opportunity to influence government decisions continues beyond electing their candidate.

He thinks that more communication between the city government and the people of Newton is needed, and that the citizens should pressure the government to keep them informed about the plans and actions of city agencies.

At the moment, the only official mechanism to involve citizens directly is

Richard Bullwinkle

Richard J. Bullwinkle, 15 Lindbergh Ave., West Newton, has announced his candidacy for reelection to the Board of Aldermen.

Bullwinkle has represented Ward 3 for three terms.

Bullwinkle is well-known in Newton for his knowledge of fiscal matters. As a member of the aldermanic Finance Committee, he was in strumental in cutting almost $3 million from the submitted budget which will result in savings to Newton's taxpayers of $9 per thousand of assessed value.

While concerned with fiscal austerity, Bullwinkle has been in favor of judicious

In his first two terms on the Newton Board of Aldermen, Cohen has served on the Public Works, Land Use, and Street Traffic Committees. He is presently the chairman of the Street Traffic Committee and has chaired the special sub-committee studying recycling.

During the past two terms, Cohen has

Cornell, with offices at 105 Madison Ave., Newtonville, is a self-employed insurance broker and Account Consultant for F.L. Putnam & Co., Inc., a Boston Stock Brokerage Firm.

As a concerned businessman, a property owner facing an enormous real estate tax increase and a man who is actively doing something about crime prevention, Cornell feels he is well-qualified to serve this community as an alderman.

His community activities include four

Shelia Farnese

Sheila Farnese, announces her candidacy for alderman-at-large from Ward 4.

Although there are five other candidates running for the two vacant at-large seats in Ward 4, Farnese is the only candidate who has had seven years of on-the-job training. She has been a regular observer at all the full Board meetings as well as sitting in on several of the Board's committees on a weekly basis.

As a result of her involvement with these committees over the past seven years, she has been able to introduce legislation and see it through to its enactment.

Among the many items which she has successfully lobbied for is the increased parking requirement for apartment

Robert Gaynor

Ward 1 Alderman-at-large Robert Gaynor has announced that he will seek a third term on the Board of Aldermen.

He made the announcement at a recent benefit theater party attended by 900 supporters.

Gaynor told his audience that he was "proud to be a member of the Board and to be able to 'tell it as it is' and not be a rubber stamp for the mayor's office, especially with regard to revaluation and how it was implemented."

Gaynor said that since the 1973 election, Newton has lost 5842 voters because the tax rate has increased unreasonably.

"The largest single investment individuals make in their lifetimes is in their

James Miller

James W. Miller, 17 Roundwood road, Newton Upper Falls, has announced his candidacy as alderman-at-large from Ward 5 to the Board of Aldermen of the City of Newton.

With encouragement and support of Upper Falls friends, Miller is attempting to become the first resident from Newton Upper Falls in nearly 40 years to sit on the Board of Aldermen.

Miller believes that the City government must be responsive to people. His belief is longstanding and of such high priority that it led him to oppose the recent NCDF low income housing proposal. For that action, he believes he will not have the support of some liberal groups in Newton.

Joan Needleman

Joan Rines Needleman, long-time resident at 80 Puritan road, Waban, and presently completing her second term as School Committee member, has announced her candidacy for the vacant seat of alderman-at-large in Ward 5.

"My candidacy in this campaign presents something new and rare–the first time, to my knowledge, that a Newton School Committee member has run for alderman.

"I am doing this because I have been very upset about the growing gap of misunderstanding and distrust that has developed between the School Committee and the Board of Aldermen in their dual responsibility for maintenance of the Ald. Saklad stated: "In the past two years that I have served on the Board of Aldermen, I have consistently upheld my deep commitment to Newton's tradition of non-partisan city government and a reasoned approach to municipal problems.

"My voting record reflects the unusually great care and concern I take in determining the facts in a given situation and I have tried to make my judgments on the basis of the merits of the individual proposals presented. My attendance at City Hall is excellent, and I spend many

Anthony Salvucci

Anthony J. "Sal" Salvucci, 23 Eddy St., West Newton, has announced his candidacy for Ward 3 alderman-at-large.

In announcing his candidacy, Salvucci said, "I will bring to the Board of Aldermen a new field of practical expertise. I am knowledgeable in the area of public works and I believe I can offer imaginative, innovative, practical suggestions as to how the city can improve the services offered by the Dept. of Public Works without increasing the cost to the taxpayer."

Salvucci feels that the city can improve its method of soliciting legitimate companies to participate in our system of competitive bidding.

Barbara Schiller

Barbara Schiller is a candidate for election as alderman-at-large from Ward 2.

The entire City of Newton votes for at-large aldermen. Because she is uncontested in the primary, Mrs. Schiller's name will not appear on the September ballot.

A leading citizen activist and former candidate for the State Legislature, Mrs. Schiller successfully fought in the suit to delay the recent property revaluation for one year. She feels that City Hall's main job these days is to manage the budget so that city services are maintained in the face of poor economic conditions. Newton must take steps, she says, to reorient and

Susan Schur

Ald. Susan D. Schur is seeking reelection to a second term as ward alderman from Ward 5, which includes Newton Upper Falls, Waban, and parts of Newton Highlands.

In announcing her candidacy, Ald. Schur stated, "With the added pressures of the current economic situation and the effects of revaluation on both the city and the taxpayers, it is imperitive that the Board of Aldermen provide responsible, creative leadership. We must challenge some of the old ways and costs; we must neither bury our heads in the sand nor react solely at the moment of crisis.

The four-year chairman of Newton's Finance Committee also serves on the Education, Legislation and Rules, and Kendrick Committees of the Board of Aldermen. He serves as Chairman of the Education Committee for two years.

Ald. Small as chairman of the Finance Committee engineered the $500,000 cut the Board of Aldermen made on the School Committee budget. Small challenged the double-budgeting, over-estimating and inflationary budget passed by the School Committee.

Teresa Walsh

Teresa F. Walsh, 33 Wallace St., has announced her candidacy for the vacated seat of Ward 8 alderman.

Mrs. Walsh is a life-long resident of Ward 8 and has been actively engaged in neighborhood and area projects and problems for many years.

Her decision to run is based on the feeling that the position of ward alderman should be returned to the function it was intended to be, that of a liason between the municipal government and the residents of that particular ward.

She feels that government should be made more available to the average citizen and that ward meetings on an informal basis should be held at regular intervals so that citizen input, which is so

Mark White

Ald. Mark A. White formally announced his candidacy for reelection this week. White is alderman-at-large from Ward 7.

During the past two years, White has distinguished himself on the Board of Aldermen as a leading advocate of citizen participation in municipal government, and equitable enforcement of city ordinances.

"I feel that careful adherence to city ordinances and aldermanic procedure is important," Ald. White says, "because this is the most direct way to make certain our municiple government is responsive to the needs and desires of the people of Newton."

Aldermanic observers have noted that White's "watchdog" role on the Board of Aldermen has had positive impact on

Private schools must supply books

By RICHARD WILLIAMS
of the Graphic staff

Private school students will have to buy their own textbooks this year because the School Committee voted against complying with the state law requiring that school texts be loaned.

In other action, Director of Budget and Accounting Harry Vienneau announced that the schools had a surplus of $236,485 last year, all of which was turned back to the city as it has to be under state law.

The Committee also approved $1,000 to offset custodial costs at Meadowbrook Junior High School for the Newton Symphony Orchestra's use of the building as a home base. .This item has been approved in previous years under its community assitannce account.

Superintendent Aaron Fink and Assistant Superintendent for Personnel Hope Danielson reported that the opening of schools went very smoothly.

Also the superintendent announced Newton North has been accepted for accreditation, and the Committee voted a resolution to urge fast appproval by the aldermanic Finance Committee to fund the conversion of the old F. A. Day School into a new administration building.

The 6-3 vote against loaning textbooks to the Newton residents going to any nonpublic school came after lengthy debate about the constitutionality of Chapter 1196, passed in 1973 by the state legislature.

If Newton complied to the law, nearly 2,400 private school students would be eligible for "textbooks which shall be the same as those purchased by the committee . . loaned free to such pupils subject to such regulations as the committee may prescribe'" the law states.

Guesses of the cost of such program ranged from $100,000 to $200,000 at the meeting Monday in Bigelow Junior High.

Howard Levine, city solicitor, reviewed a recent opinion by Attorney General Francis X. Bellotti who felt the law is constitutional in the state and nation.

But Levine, in a letter to the Committee, siad there have been Supreme Court judgments made for and against similar laws.

The Civil Liberties Union of Massachusetts is planning to file a 10-taxpayers' suit against the City of Boston for complying. with the law, according to John Reinstein, one of the lawyers handling the case with CLUM.

Committeeman Henry Delicata suggested making a public list of textbooks not used by the schools, but Superintendent Fink said this would not meet the requirements of the law.

Chairwoman Eleanor Rosenblum, noting that she is not a lawyer, said both the Attorney General's and Levine's opinions were advisory, and neither had to be followed.

Superintendent Fink said one community nearby uses a definition of textbook that includes only hardcover books used by 75 percent of a class.

In Brookline, pupils are eligible for up to $24 worth of books, with a textbook being any hard or soft cover book used by at least seven students.

Voting for loaning the textbooks were Mandell, Delicata, and Joan Needleman.

Budget turnback

Budget Director Vienneau outlined the major areas where the School Committee did not spend what it had ' budgeted. They are as follows:

$46,000 in custodial overtime, caused by no overtime work on Saturdays; ition for other

$14,655 in special education tu schools;

$55,315 in the Newton Junior College account, saved by more reduced staff than anticipated and the elimination of the summer school, since funds were not appropriated for July, the first month of the current fiscal year.

$15,000 in the data processing account by not hiring a replacement for a promotion;

$21,000 in transportation; and

$4,137 in out-of-state travel.

This accounts for $156,107; the rest was not spent from many of the other accounts.

Personnel

Assistant Superintendent Hope Danielson said there are 26.4 fewer teacher positions this year, but there are the allocated new 36 special education positions.

There are 78 new people in 64.8 positions that had turnovers in the summer. She also estimated that about 30 of the 52 teachers who were not rehired in April were rehired for the current school year.

Letter to Finance Committee

The Committee voted unanimously to send a letter to the aldermanic Finance Committee to speed approval of money for conversion of the old F. A. Day Junior High School.

Committee members Gerard Byrne, Herbert Regal, and Chairwoman Rosenblum made various criticisms of the Finance Committee for not approving the funds for the conversion yet.

The School Committee's letter to Finance Chairman Sidney Small says there will be a savings of approximately $90,000 per year, based on 1974-75 costs. it is now

The Committee's letter also says, " . . . necessary to facilitate plans for a single Centrex facility for the city an the school system."

Small said Tuesday night, "I am the one who suggested . . . two years ago . . . that the School Committee join a Centrex (telephone) system, but they would not consider it."

He also claimed that the School Committee has now raised the cost of the project to over $800,000.

The School Committee had previously asked for $500,000 for the work to be done on the school building, but before that, the Committee had expe nses for wiring and $50,000 for architects' fees.

In addition, about $130,000 had been added by the Committee to conform to the suggestions of the Design Review Committee. id he may consider the funding

Small sa within the next two or three months, but his committee faces a heavy agenda because it must find a new city treasurer and assist the mayor in finding a new director of Public Works.

The School Committee did not act on the problem of how to deal with the paper waste that is left in the Newton North Cafet eria by school students.

Safety

Freeport under investigation

Charges of serious problems in the management of Freeport House' a residence for high-school-age children, will delay the usually routine extension of permission to continue to operate.

At a public hearing Monday night before the aldermanic Land Use Committee, Mrs. Meyer Lipman, an abutter to the Freeport House at 361 Commonwealth Ave., said she had called police "many times," about young people on her property.

Once, she said, police found a young man from Freeport naked in a building on her land.

Mrs. Lipman claimed that Freeport youngsters had "destroyed" a building that she had intended to convert to dwelling use.

She has seen "little girls of 13 or 14" going into the building and coming out "with the whites of their eyes red and they were kind of wobbly," she said.

Another neighbor, Albert Shuman, 349 Commonwealth Ave., asked who pays for all the fire calls and police calls to Freeport. There had been at least a half-dozen, he said.

However, a check with the Fire Department Tuesday revealed two false alarms in one night last year. Capt. Joseph Fitzsimmons said one Freeport youth was involved.

No other fire incidents are on record, according to Fitzsimmons.

The Police Department has a record of one complaint from Mrs. Lipman in the last 18 months. The report says a youth was found sleeping in a chicken coop on Mrs. Lipman's property and was returned to Freeport.

Shuman guestioned the request to accept Wellesley and Weston residents, when according to Freeport Director Phyllis Busansky the hcuse has not been operating to its allowed capacity of 12 teenagers.

State funding of Freeport would be more readily given if Freeport fit into the Newton-Wellesley-Weston mental health and retardation area devised by the state, according to area director Edward Sahatjian.

Freeport was established in 1969 to provide a residence for high school students who, for one reason or another, could not live at home.

During a young person's stay at Freeport both the child and his parents receive counseling, with the goal of getting the child back into the family as soon as possible.

Nancy Bartley, a Newton resident, charged that Freeport has been accepting out-of-city children "for a long time." Her nephew, a Wellesley resident, she said, had been at Freeport after being placed briefly with a foster family here through the courts.

Ms. Bartley said the stories he told her about Freeport were of such concern to her that she told several members of the Board of Aldermen, who "swept them under the rug."

"If we're going to use Freeport as a dumping place for the Department of Youth Services, do it right," she said, noting there needs to be more control.

The Land Use Committee, as well as Mrs. Busansky and other officers of Freeport House, were taken by surprise by the sudden opposition and the grounds for the opposition to Freeport.

Land Use Committee Chairman Joseph McDonnell asked for an investigation of Police and Fire Department records before the next working meeting of the committee.

Key theft won't affect housing tenants

A set of personal keys were stolen from the desk of an employee of the Newton Housing Authority nearly three weeks ago' police report.

Francis Quinn, director of the authority, assured residents of housing projects that the keys were not for the apartments.

Quinn said he delayed making the report because the owner of the keys was on vacation and it was not known if he took them with him.

Also stolen was a set of lock picks.

Quinn said there have been other thefts from offices at night in the 2000 Commonwealth Ave. building which he thinks may be related.

Police arrest two teens twice in one night

Two teenagers, arrested by police Friday night for allegedly drinking in public, were arrested again by police Saturday morning for assault and battery and malicious damage.

Michael B. Moody, 17, of 81 West St., Newton, and Daniel Allie, 19, of Center Street, Jamaica Plain, were both charged with all three crimes.

Police first allegedly saw the youths in violation of the city's ordinance prohibiting public consumption of alcohol on Cook Street, Newton, at 10:15 p.m. Friday.

Shortly after leaving the police station, the two were allegedly involved in a melee with a car and driver that would not give them a ride.

At 2:10 a.m. Saturday, police report that the two were hitchhiking on Watertown Street and allegedly dented the fender of a car would not pick them up.

Anthony Soave of Waltham. driver of the car, got out of the car and told police he was grabbed by one of the youths and hit by another.

Police arrived after being called by a passenger in the car and charged tMoody and Alliehem with assault and battery and malicious damage of personal property.

School Committee candidates

Gerard F. Byrne

Gerard F. Byrne announced today his candidacy for reelection to the Newton School Committee.

Byrne who lives at 40 Byrd Ave. in West Newton is the father of two children, Susan, who is a junior at Newton North and Robert, who is in the sixth grade at Davis Elementary School. His wife, Mary, serves as a volunteer at both schools.

Byrne said: "In making my decisions on the School Committee, I have always been guided by what is best for the education of our children because this is the true role of the School Committee.

Commenting on some major School Committee issues, Byrne takes the following positions:

Declining Enrollment

"I view Declining Enrollment as the logical way to reduce our budget. We should consolidate our schools and redistrict wherever possible."

This will reduce our budget without reducing the quality of

Robert Cohen

Robert Cohen, 49 Rowena road, Newton Centre today formally announced his candidacy for election to the Newton Scool Committee in Ward 6.

In announcing his candidacy Cohen said that his dicision to run gives to every voter in Newton the opportunity to chose between two sharply opposite philosophies.

Cohen was critical of the present incumbent, Herbert Regal, for his "do nothing" "taxpayer be damned" attitude. He was particularly critical of Regal's refusal to vote for the Metco budget because he (Regal) thought that the City of Newton was to be reimbursed too much money by the State.

Cohen also expressed strong disagreement with Regal on the concept while the incumbent has filed legislation which would require Neston to participate in such a concept. Such a plan could eventually lead to Newton students being educated in the Boston Public Schools.

Herbert F. Regal

Herbert F. Regal, 155 Homer St., Newton Centre, is a candidate for reelection to the Newton School Committee from Ward 6.

During his six years on the Committee, Regal ahs fulfilled his original promise to work to maintain and imporve the caliber of the Newton public schools while at the same time holding budgetary increases to an absolute minimum.

In reviewing his years in office Regal observed, "While in no way would I want to see education return to the narrowness of my years in school, I certainly have been pleased to observe a recent trend toward more emphasis on grammer and other "basics."

Regal feels that the school budget for the next fiscal year (1976-77) need be increased by a maximum of only ½ percent. He points to savings of $550,000 from the closing of Newton Junior College and the Memorial School as substantial offsets to expected inflationary

Dorothy Reichard

Dorothy M. Reichard announces her candidacy for athird term as School Committee member from Ward 7.

Mrs. Reichard, who has resided at 63 Monadnock rd for 20 years, has devoted her life to community service. As a mother of five children who have attended the Newton Schools, she served as president of Ward School. Weeks Junior High School and ALL Newton Music School PTAs and has been active in many other community organizations.

Mrs. Reichard, vice chairman of the School COMMITTEE, IS CHAIRMAN OF THE SUBCOMMITTEE ON Collective Bargaining which negotiates salaries of school personnel. Eleanor Rosenblum

School Committee Chairman, Eleanor Rosenblum, 15 Bemis St. Newtonville, has announced her candidacy for reelection as School Commiittee representative from Ward 2.

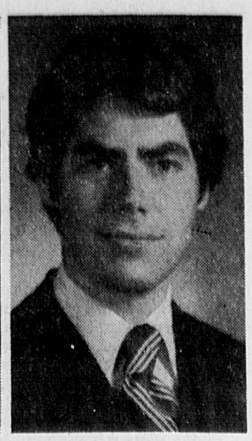

In deciding to run for a fourth term, Mrs. Rosenblum expressed particular concern about the combined challenges of a shrinking school population and a shrinking economy.

"A good school system is a fragile thing," declared Mrs. Rosenblum. "The plunge from excellence to mediocrity is all too easily made, especially in times like these.

"So far, through firm purpose, an alert citizenry, and unremitting hard work, we have kept our balance in adjusting to these changing conditions. We must continue to do so. Good education is still Newton's most important product."

"There is no question in my

Robert Snyder

Robert Wayne Snyder is a candidate for School Committee from Ward 4.

A former resident of West Newton, he now resides at 62 Colgate Rd. in Newton Lower Falls.

Snyder has decided to run for School Committee because he is deeply concerned with preserving the community concept of neighborhood schools. He is opposed to the closing of neighborhood schools. He believes that the evidence from the report fo the Committee on Declining Enrollment does not substantiate conclusively that schools must be closed.

Snyder is also in favor of continuing the Metco Program and providing all students with quality education that offers creative programs as well as a strong foundation in basic academic skills.

"Many parents with whom I have spoken," Snyder explains, "are concerned about their children's lack of ability to read adequately."

BC parking ok

After four months of neighborhood and aldermanic wrangling, the new Boston College Law School has permission for a 503-car parking lot.

Terms of the permissive use granted at a special meeting of the full Board of Aldermen Monday night call for the experimental closing of Colby Street for five months, followed by a five-month closing of Westchester Road.

After the trial closingas the final decision on which, if either, should be closed permanently will be made.

Residents of the area surrounding the former Newton College, acquired by Boston College last year, have been squabbling about how to cut down on traffic from students' cars. The proposal passed Monday night attempts to be fair to all residents.

However, Ald. Richard McGrath submitted on behalf of Westchester Road residents8 a petition to block street. "Westchester Road is going to suffer a horrendous problem," McGrath said, from students using Colby Street to Westchester Road and then away from the college.

Other terms of the permissive use require Boston College to build an internal roadway from Colby Street into the parking lot' which will be located well within the campus and away from residences.

A traffic signal to be installed at Colby Street and Centre Streets will be poaid in total the college. The $35,000 cost was at cne time have been shared, with the city paying 25 percent.

Ald. Sidney Small objected to this arrangement, and called Boston College a "non-taxpaying giant" from which the taxpayers need protection by the Board of Aldermen.

Ald. David Jackson thought it "immoral to force the college to do this" (pay for the traffic signal), but was outvoted on the amendment.

Boston College will have to repetition the Board for extension of permission at the end of 10 months.

The requirement that site plans of additions or alterations to all private schools and colleges be approved by the Board of Aldercomes under a new ordinance written by Ald. Louis Egelson.

Previously such institutiWns were exempt from control.

Membership meeting set

The Newton-Wellesley-Weston Committee to Establish Community Residences for the Retarded will hold its first meeting of the 1975-76 season at 7:45 p.m. Wednesday, September 17 at Juniper House, 14 Newtonville Ave., Newton.

Anyone interested in joining the Committee's work is invited to attend.

This year the Committee plans to begin work on cooperative apartments, a behavior modification program for either children or adults, and a limited respite care program within Juniper House.

If you would like to become involved in any of these projects, please call Lucy Chansky at 244-7310.

Land Use Committee hears many matters

A flurry of land use matters, some decided by the Land Use Committee last week and some heard for the first time Monday night, has claimed the time of many members of the Board of Aldermen over the past week.

On Monday night, petitions of interest to a large number of residents were a proposed amendment to the zoning ordinances defining the number of unrelated persons that could occupy a dwelling, a proposed revision of the ordinance governing lighted signs on commercial establishmnents, a request for extension of permissive use for Freeport House, (see separate story), and a petition for permissive use to establish a psychiatric halfway house in Newtonville.

The Chestnut Hill Association and the Newton Neighborhood Association strongly supported a proposal to limit to two the number of unrelated persons allowed to occupy one dwelling. The Planning Department recommendation was four.

A Planning Department memorandum pointed out that the average number of persons in a dwelling unit, as now known, is less than the size of the average family.

The problem of an excessive number of cars at each house occupied by unrelated persons can be handled by ordinance, Planning Director Charles Thomas commented privately.

A petition from Thomas about lighted signs in Newton would ease the problems of hotels, motels, and other businesses open at night.

The Planning Department proposes to amend the ordinance that now says all lighted signs shall be turned off at 11 p.m.

Enforcement of this ordinance recently caused consternation among businesses and aldermen, when Building Commissioner Gene Larson sent cease-and-desist letters to about 150 businesses.

Many of thet these have since applied for permission to extend lighting hours.

The Planning Department has proposed that lights be allowed on during business hours and a one-half hour before and one-half hour after business hours.

A halfway house for psychiatric patients, to be located at 175 Walnut St., Newtonville, was met with some neighborhood opposition.

The proponents and would-be establishers of the halfway house' Drs. Jerry Wacks and Robert Patterson of Lexington, explained the aims of the house — to provide a place for patients from short-term psychiatric treatment facilities to live while they are continuing to receive treatment.

Financial details of the nonprofit facility seemed to trouble Stanley Miller, chairman of the Planning Board Patterson replied that he thought this was a purely land use matter and that he was not prepared to answer financial questions completely.

Both sides presented petitions signed by residents of the neighborhood.

At last Thursday's meeting, the Land Use Committee voted 8-0 to deny a petition from Henry Hornblower II to make a four-family dwelling of his large house at 100 Essex Rd., Chestnut Hill.

The petiion was filed under a fairly new ordinance that allows the division of a house into a multiple dwelling provided the amount of land equals that needed for the number of single-family dwellings contemplated.

The Land Use Committee voted 7-0 in favor of allowing Dr. Edward Mahoney to build a four-unit townhouse at the corner of ille. Walnut and Watertown Streets, Newton

After considerable debate the committee voted, 5-2, to allow Jack Antaramian to build a 19-unit apartment building at Washington Street and Lowell Avenue.

NRA is cautioned by the aldermen

The aldermanic Land Use Committee, led by Joseph McDonnell, last week cautioned the Newton Redevelopment Authority about subdividing the Washington Street site in Lower Falls into three parcels. The commercial developer, Spaulding & Slye, is slated to build three office buildings on the land, requested the subdivision to aid in getting financing for the proposal.

The aldermen became concerned when the authority reported the eveloper was in default on his contract. In addition, several charges were levelled at the developer by Martin Roach. Roach is the former owner of the Washington Street land, which was taken by eminent domain and he has long maintained he should have been paid more.

The developer's default was caused by a delay in signing up prime tenant, Massachusetts General Life Insurance Company. Earlier that day Spaulding & Slye had signed a lease with the tenant which was held in escrow pending the outcome of the Land Use meeting.

Despite admonishment from the Land Use Committee which came in the form of a vote after the authority members had left, the land is scheduled to be conveyed to Spaulding & Slye this week. The cost of the parcel to be conveyed is roughly $200,000. Construction is due to begin in three weeks and be finished in approximately one year.

The aldermen were also planning to ask the authority if they could get interest money on the remaining two parcels, seek reappraisal of the land and seek a release from the architect to protect themselves.

The release would be protection in the event the developer defaulted on the other two sites. In a default situation, Spaulding & Slye would forfeit the deposit, $61,000, and the interest on that money.

According to Gerald Early, executive director of the NRA, HUD prevents the authority from earning money on a deposit. As a result, the authority invested this money in treasury notes and the interest would be turned over to the developer, unless he defaulted.

However, Charles Spaulding and George Slye assured the aldermen they have every intention of developing all three parcels and they would live up the to their responsibility.

Spaulding & Slye was selected as developer for the commercial site after Lower Falls residents conducted a vigorous fight to turn over the authority's initial choice.

The authority members heard presentations from prospective redevelopers for the housing site in the Lower Falls project on Sept 4. Ten proposals were heard. here will be 60 units of housing on the site. The Lower Falls Project Area Committee members also sat in on the presentations and filled out evaluation sheets.

Correction

Due to a typographical error, the story about Ward 1 School Committee candidate Jeffrey Schwamm was garbled.

The paragraph should read as fcllows: "Among the issues in this campaign, "I feel that the School Committee must insure that the city's educational resources are responsibly and efficiently managed. With fiscal realities in mind, we must endeavor to maintain Newton's high educational standards. In order for the School Committee to fulfill its obligations, it must address the issues of equity and educational quality and it must be accountable for its decisions."

Crime and punishment

"I'm 62 years old and I can tell you that during the past 40 years murder, once the most uncommon crime in the history of mankind, has become one of the most common ones."

So said Superior Court Judge Henry H. Chmielinski, Jr., as he called for more severe penalties to be meted out by the courts in order to lessen crime.

The jurist observed that murder today is as commonplace as assault and battery used to be.

The record in our suburban area alone bears him out.

Forty-three years ago, the front page headlines of the metropolitan dailies capsuled the gruesome story of a Norwood girl of nine years whose body was found hidden in a sack in the cellar of her own home. The media stayed on the story until the guilty party was brought to justice.

Twenty-three years went by before Norwood had another homicide. Again a murder made page one news until the culprit was apprehended, tried, convicted, and sent to jail.

In the same town within the past two years a young mother was gunned down in cold blood, two bodies were found dumped off Route 95 in what apparently were gangland slayings, and a young businessman was taken for a ride and shot to death. Less than two weeks ago a hard-working Norwood husband and father was shot and killed in his grocery store in Roxbury. Then last weekend a former Norwood man was stabbed to death as he went to the aid of a robbery victim in Boston.

Westwood has seen two double murders. In Dedham a father was killed by a bandit when he went to a variety store to buy an item for his son.

Oldtimers can recite the details of the early day murders. Few people today can recall the circumstances of the modern day crimes. They're not that long in the news.

Throughout the country serious crime rose 18 percent during the first three months of this year. In that same period Boston logged 30 murders, 98 rapes, 2,091 robberies, 656 aggravated assaults, 4,589 burglaries, 4,480 thefs and 6,182 stolen cars.

In the continuing war against crime and vandalism, the plaint of local police departments has been that following investigations and after arrests have been made, the courts have been too lenient.

It's some comfort to note that the courts are beginning to hand out stiffer penalties. A Roxbury man was recently sentenced to life plus 15 to 25 years for robbery and rape.

Judge Chmielinski note that people today walk in fear, afraid to go out in the streets alone. He cites as some of the reasons a dramatic increase in the number of crimes with overtones of savagery; inadequate prison facilities and a misconception about the need for prisons; a false premise by so-called liberals that everyone can be rehabilitated; an approach to the concept of prison furloughs that the judge characterizes as "insane", and a bail system entirely out of touch with the reality of the crime rate.

As for the youthful offender, who is just as capable of murdering, raping and robbing as are adults, they're breaking the law with impunity because they know that because of the dismantling of the reform school system in the commonwealth, there's no place to put them.

Judge Chmielinski represents a tougher approach to crime and punishment that could swing the pendulum back to sanity in the treatment of this frightfully worsening problem. We hear much today of prisoners' rights. How about the rights of decent individuals to be protected from those who break all the rules of society?

Mollycoddling is no deterrent to crime. Swift, sure and severe punishment could be.

The Roosevelt profile

Commentary by John D. Lofton, Jr.

WASHINGTON — CBS kicked off its "American Parade" series the other night with an hour-long profile of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. But considering that we are now in the era of post-Watergate morality, the show was terribly tame.

There was film footage of Mr. Roosevelt swimming with granddaughter, eating lunch with workers at a Civilian Conservation Corps camp, and giving one of his famous fireside talks, which we were asked to believe were "not speeches," but just conversational chats. There was even some criticism of FDR – his attempt to pack the Supreme Court, and his numerous ill-conceived pieces of New Deal legislation which were ruled unconstitutional by the Court. But there was much muck left unraked.

It would have been nice if CBS had devoted at least a few minutes to President Roosevelt's relations with the press, which, like Mr. Nixon's, were stormy.

FDR was the first media manipulator among U.S. presidents. He once had the Secret Service bar a critical columnist from a press conference.

And on another occasion, when John O'Donnell of the New York Daily News wrote that charges were about to be made in the Senate that Roosevelt was permitting the U.S. Navy to convoy ships to England before we were in the war, the President denounced this as a "deliberate lie."

In a subsequent news conference, FDR publicly awarded reporter O'Donnell a German Iron Cross for his services to Adolf Hitler. But O'Donnell was right. The very next day the charge was made in the Senate by New Hampshire Senator Charles Tobey.

FDR's attempt to license the publishing industry through his unconstitutional National Recovery Act was labeled by The New York Times as just one of many of Roosevelt's "insidious and dangerous attacks on their (the people's) liberties."

Mr. Roosevelt and his men also played political hardball–called "Dirty tricks" now – and the President used language behind closed doors that he didn't use in public.

There was also wiretapping under FDR's administration. These kinds of activities, ignored by CBS, are detailed in a new book, "White House Witness," written by a member of Roosevelt's palace guard, Jonathan Daniels. Daniels reveals, among other things:

— That when Roosevelt aides learned that the Republicans had some letters written by Roosevelt's vice president, Henry Wallace, showing what a mystic he was, and indicating he got his government policy directions from the spirit world, they went out and dug up some dirt on the GOP Presidential nominee, Wendell Wilkie.

Daniels quotes an aide to FDR aide Harry Hopkins as saying: "We went out and dug up some dirty stuff on Willkie, with photographs showing that Wilkie's father had been buried in a potter's field as a drunkard with whom Wilkie would have nothing to do. Only after the campaign, did Wilkie have his body moved to a decent part of the cemetery. We let the Republicans know that if they used the Wallace stuff, we were going to use the stuff on Wilkie." Neither stuff was used.

– That FDR once privately expressed a desire to help in the development of the West Indies, saying he'd like to help these islands produce more than "sugar and niggers."

– That all the War Department phones were wiretapped once a month, according to a Lt. Col. L. Corrin Strong, not for reasons of national security, but to see if they were being used by employes for personal reasons.

Besides taking us behind the scenes during the Roosevelt Administration, and telling a lot of things it would have been interesting to see CBS investigate further.

Jonathan Daniels' interesting book also reveals how little the effect of Big Government programs has changed since the New Deal.

One October morning in 1942, Daniels bumped into Leon Keyserling, the general counsel of the National Housing Agency, and asked him how things were going? "Fine," Keyserling replied. "We are taking over the old houses and making some fine slums."

Nixon my new neighbor!!!!

By Virginia Payette, syndicated columnist

Well, the excitement seems to have died down – for now, anyway. But let me tell you, for a while there my quiet little hometown had a taste of the Big Time.

I live in Bronxville, N.Y.

You know about Bronxville. That's where Richard Nixon is (a) planning to buy a house, (b) is not planning to buy a house, (c) is thinking about buying a house or (d) none of the above. Take your choice.

What you don't know is that while the national press was speculating about Nixon, the local grapevine was agog with a rumor that was twice as titillating to villagers. Namely, that Robert Redford had moved in among us.

Well, you can imagine. The electricity THAT generated was enough to short-circuit the hair driers down at Isabel's beauty salon. Meaning no disrespect, you understand, but who would YOU rather have living next door?

"I've baked batch after batch of welcome-to-the-neighborhood cookies," a blonde matron sighed. "And I've yet to lay eyes on him. But I've gained 10 pounds. Somebody had to eat those damn cookies."

Well, that story swirled around for a couple of weeks and then the ladies were forced to the reluctant conclusion that it was all just a beautiful dream. They might get Nixon, but they sure didn't (sigh) have Redford.

The surprising thing is that Bronxvillians even bother to notice the possibility of having a celebrity next door. Over the years they've seemed to take Jolie Gabor, Jack Paar, Ed McMahon, Bill Buetel, Art Carney and even Joe Kennedy's clan in stride.

And the hilltop estates are full of important men. Our corporate presidents include the New York Exchange, the N.Y. Telephone Co., Consolidated Edison, Grolier Publishing, TWA and Pepsico. They have to wait in line to join the tennis club like anybody else.

The village, which is rich, conservative and 98 per cent Republican, is a bit on the rustic side. But it's full of millionaires. Even, as in the case of Robert Abplanalp, Mr. Nixon's old buddy and sometime friend in financial need, a few multimillionaires. (And then there are the lesser folk, like the Payettes.)

Somehow, though, the idea of the while country talking about Nixon maybe moving to Bronxville was heady stuff. We haven't been that close to the White House since Jack Kennedy got elected – years after he'd left town. That's when the village weekly ran the classic: "Local Man Wins Presidency."

As of now, nobody seems to know much of anything about Nixon's plans. They won't admit it, of course. The experts who hang around Pickwick's Stationery have inside information that he has to sell his San Clemente estate because he needs cash to pay his staggering legal fees.

They all know "for a fact" that he can't even afford to keep up the villa. Had to get rid of the rose bushes, didn't he? Got Pat doing the gardening, hasn't he? And doesn't she have a cousin who sells real estate in Bronxville? Well???

Never mind that Abplanalp says it's all news to him. Or that Nixon's aides say he's staying put. The rumor brought out the TV and newspaper networks and they swarmed through our business district (all two blocks of it) sticking microphones in local faces.

Comments ranged all the way from "There goes the neighborhood" to "He'd fit in fine" to "I'd rather have Redford." The local electrician said he wouldn't mind having Nixon as a neighbor, but as a customer . . . Well, I hear his credit's no good."

And that's where it stands now. So far we don't have Nixon ... or Redford. Life is back to normal and the best thing we can find to gossip about is who ripped off the two bicycles at the club last week.

Bilingual teaching, an American tradition

Analysis by Gus Tyler

NEW YORK — Should children in elementary school, who come from home and communities where English is not spoken, be taught in the language of their parents – with English as a second language?

This question is in hot debate right now, especially as it pertains to youths whose first language is Spanish. These children – and their parents – know the importance of education. But, because these youngsters do not hear English at home, they are disastrously handicapped in the early grades.

The idea of teaching in Spanish is to allow these students to keep up with others – while learning English for ultimate use in higher grades and in the world of business.

The contrary argument states that "the object of American schooling is to teach them how to think as Americans, not to continue the customs of a different culture."

An old quote of Theodore Roosevelt is revived: "We have room for but one language here, and that is the English language, for we intend to see that the crucible turns our people out as Americans and not as dwellers in a polyglot boarding house."

Logic seem to be on the side of those who insist that only English is spoken here. But history and experience runneth to the contrary.

We have always had room for more than one language. Newspapers and magazines have been and are widely Circulated in German, Russian, Italian, Yidish, Greek, Polish, Chinese, Japanese, Spanish, French. Church services have been and are conducted in all these languages, plus the dead languages of ancient Hebrew, Greek and Latin.

Also, schools have been and are conducted in alien tongues. Among the first to set up such ethnic schools were the Germans in Pennsylvania – way back in colonial days.

One of the colony's leading and most civilized citizens, Benjamin Franklin, fulminated against these German schools. "Why should the Palatine boors be suffered to swarm into our settlements, and by herding together, establish their language and manners to the exclusion of ours?"

"They come in droves, and carry all before them. Few of their children in the country learn English; they import many books from Germany; and of the six printing houses in the province, two are entirely German, two half-German, half-English . . . The signs in our streets have inscriptions in both languages and in some places only German."

To reverse this trend, Franklin organized a Society for the Relief and Instruction of Poor Germans – to establish English schools for the immigrants. He had no luck; the Germans under the leadership of Christopher Saur had four of their own schools running by 1755 and were moving on to set up six more. By 1761, Franklin gave up his plan to anglify the Germans.

Eventually, the Germans were Americanized to become some of the nation's most respected citizens. The first-generation children who learned their math, geography and history in German also learned English. They raised their kids in English with a dash of German.

The grandchildren looked upon English as their basic language, probably retaining enough German to understand grandpa and grandma. Each generation eased the way for the next - without the trauma of failure for lack of language.

The state of the schools

APPROACH

by Brenda Tanger

This is the second of two columns dealing with the suggestion that the Newton school budget meets with so much hostility not just because of cost, but because so many citizens no longer equate those costs with a superior system. Newton is certainly perceived by outside educators and by education consumers as a "good" system, but many others are, in truth, currently considered its equal.

For example, in 1962, some Newton residents were battling what they considered to be laissez-faire education interested. Those educators wanted to copy some of education's "leaders."

Yet in corridors where Newton's "alternatives" permitted students to pitch pennies and to prop bare feet on books, it was difficult for much of the community to accept the word "education" and to pay the taxes without frustration.

There is now a pervasive feeling that administrators and teachers rolled too much with student punches. Parents, as a consequence, began to suspect that the more student determination, the less perception within the community, the amount of money spent on schools was bound to become a source of friction. Consequently, there was an erosion of community confidence and pride which tended, in turn, to provoke citizen hostility.

The educational institution also began courting animosity when the teacher's freedom in the classroom began to include the "right" to politicization (often cloaked in other terms).

With this "right" there seemed to be developing a denial of parental rights and sometimes a conflict with parental philosophies. Community members without school children also began to feel threatened without a voice in that which seemed to be like taxation without representation.

Taxes in the community are paid by people with all shades of political opinion and most of these people feel just as worthy and principled and righteous about their political responses as do those within the school walls. Yet opposing points of view were often considered unnecessary. "Sincerity" became the catchword - and who would admit to not being sincere!

Young people in suburban schools, in Newton and elsewhere, became accustomed to repeating someone else's facile cliches instead of reading, listening to and debating conflicting views. Often now one student's thinking bears an uncritical and conspicuous sameness to another.

The greater community of taxpaying citizens finally became ill on the choking supply of repetitive educational cliches–"meaningful," "alienation," "innovation," "communication," "commitment" etc.–words that tried to make even the ignorant sound educated. The community also became overburdened by the heaping of study upon study (and then by having the studee study the studier).

Many communities now seem to have turned against their schools' dripping money baskets. There is far less empathy for school systems - in Newton as in other cities and towns. For every improvement of the last ten years, people see a balancing negative.

So it is that while Newton is certainly a good suburb in which to send children to school, it is, realistically, no different than large numbers of other good suburbs. Now it is Newton's geographical proximity to convenience rather than its schools that makes the real estate appealing.

Of course this hurts our collective pride, but the fact is that young educated parents simply do not feel any compelling drive to send their children to Newton schools. (Of course there are chauvinists everywhere who claim that their particular schools are the very best.)

Most young parents feel that there is no compromise in educating their children in many other suburban communities where taxes are lower and where the schools appear to be every bit as good as those of Newton.

With this in mind, people in Newton do not happily pay high taxes.

Image at one point became much more important than substance. When Murray Road students, part of the "new education", were photographed attending school in tuxedo jackets and derbies, some people thought it was a late Halloween party. It wasn't!

While the students were choosing perception or sensitivity training, educators in other cities looked puzzled but in-preparation for teachers; the fewer the papers and exams given, the fewer there would be to correct.

The young develop the means to play constructive roles in society through a series of authority relationships that lead, that teach and that bridge the years until students start to assume the responsibility that goes with maturity. When teachers and administrators (and certainly parents) are unwilling to accept their own directing roles (although parental roles are the most critical), then a great deal is lost by the students and by the community.

The schools alienated numbers of taxpayers who no longer necessarily saw their schools as repositories of learning, thinking, studying, debating. With such a
